School Report.

Fellow Citizens: The School Board, having attended to the duties of their office, respectfully submit the following report of the schools for the past year:—

No. 1.

There was a fall term of school taught by Miss EDITH F. WHEET, who labored carefully, faithfully and earnestly, and whose success, both in governing and in instructing, was better than many of our teachers of experience. This, her first effort in teaching, warrants the conclusion that she will soon rank among our best teachers.

No. 2.

There were eight (8) scholars who attended school in Dorchester.

No. 4.

The summer term was taught by Miss CARRIE E. ABBOTT, a member of the Normal School. This school is large, and the teacher lacked that keen perception and that administrative ability requisite to the attainment of the greatest success in a school of this size.

The winter term was in charge of Miss CARRIE A. HALL, who labored untiringly for the advancement of her pupils, and if she did not attain that full measure of success desired and even hoped for, we think, knowing her former success in this school and elsewhere in teaching, the deficiency is not to be chargeable to her.

In thus reporting the schools in this district, we are not unmindful of the fact that they are large, and that equal success may not be so apparent as in those of smaller size.

No. 5.

There were seven scholars who attended school in Rumney.

No. 7.

There were five bright scholars between the ages of 7 and 14 years who, under the careful instruction of Miss MINNIE G. POLLARD, made good progress.

No. 8.

There were summer and fall terms of school, both in charge of Miss ALICE M. WILLIAMS, who is a quiet, careful, yet earnest worker in the school-room, keeping her pupils still, and having an orderly arrangement of all her work and exercises pertaining to the school. This school was in all respects a success.

No. 9.

There were two terms taught by Miss ANNA G. SUMNER.

The summer term was quite satisfactory and progress made, though there was noticeably a want of that orderly arrangement and systematic instruction which are desirable and so essential to the attainments of the best results in the school room.

The fall term was less satisfactory. The people here showed a very commendable interest by boarding the teacher round, thereby giving their scholars longer terms.

No. 10.

The summer school was taught by Miss ORRIE A. KELCY, a beginner in teaching, who was active and vigilant, keeping her pupils still and everything orderly arranged. That a young lady of her keen perception and opportunity for study lacked the requisite qualifications to instruct all in this school, we pronounce, upon satisfactory examination, entirely erroneous; though reports of incompetency were made by some of the older scholars. Those who attended through the term showed as good improvement as any in town.

The fall term was in charge of Miss KATE M. WALCOTT who, we are happy to say, had the co-operation of the parents in a good degree, and whose labors were quite successful and fair progress made. The school did not show that order and quietness which characterized the former term.

The influence of our common schools upon the prosperity, success, and perpetuity of our free government cannot well be estimated or fully appreciated. They are closely allied to all our institutions, civil, political and religious, and form the chief pillar for the support and maintenance of these institutions which have been bequeathed to us by the founders of New England.

Were it not for education, all can clearly see, by comparing our country, with its privileges and blessings, with the nations of the Old World, what would be, what must inevitably be our condition were it not for our free public schools; for it is these schools that mark widely the difference between our country and her institutions and the nations to which we have referred.

These nations educate the few—the rich and the noble—not the poor. Our free school system was established by the Pilgrim Fathers for the education of the masses, the poor and the rich together.

These schools and the institutions they help to maintain come down to us as a rich legacy, better than gold, from these venerated fathers.

Let us, fellow citizens, cherish and liberally support them and show that we are neither unmindful of, nor ungrateful for, the trust committed to our hands.

Let no one think to be an idle spectator in regard to our institutions, for he cannot if he would discharge his duties to himself, his obligations to his country and to God.

Respectfully submitted,
