SCHOOL REPORT.

To the legal voters of AUBURN the following Report is respectfully submitted :

DISTRICT NO. 1.

The summer term was taught by Miss Sarah L. Hazelton of Chester. The school made fair progress, particularly some of the geography classes.

The winter term was taught by John P. Young, Jr., of Manchester. This was Mr. Young's first experience in teaching; yet, at the first visit of your committee, he showed himself master of the situation, and the closing examination showed him to have been a strict disciplinarian, and an honest, earnest teacher. His pupils had made good progress, with a degree of thoroughness we have rarely seen equalled.

DISTRICT NO. 2.

This school, as a whole, is the most advanced of any in town. The summer term was taught by Miss H. Ida Nutter of Barnstead. She labored hard and succeeded well.

The winter term was taught by the same teacher, which showed that her former labors had been duly appreciated, although the summer term was her first experience as a teacher; yet she seemed at home in the school-room, exhibiting those traits of firmness and decision of character accompanied by gentleness so needful to make a perfect teacher. The scholars seemed unusually interested in their studies, and the teacher unusually so in her scholars, and they advanced in their studies in a manner to be proud of.

DISTRICT NO. 3.

The summer term was taught by Miss F. A. Plumer of Alexandria. Miss Plumer is an able and experienced teacher, and this adds one more to her quite lengthy list of good schools. She was earnest and faithful in the discharge of her duty, content to earn the full amount of her pay, and determined to add to her already brilliant reputation as a faithful and successful teacher, in which she abundantly succeeded, as appeared at the closing examination.

The fall term was taught by Miss Mary E. Chase of Auburn. The close of the school showed a school under good discipline, and scholars that well remembered what they had learned.

The winter term was taught by Miss F. L. Haines of Manchester. She was kind and affectionate in the school-room, winning the love of the larger part of her scholars. Special attention was given to penmanship, in which there was a most decided improvement. The scholars were orderly and interested in their studies, for which the teacher labored industriously.

DISTRICT NO. 4.

The summer term was taught by Miss Mary L. Hall of Chester. This was Miss Hall's third term in this district, which speaks more for her ability as a teacher than any words of mine. The scholars were not only taught that such things were so, but also the reason why. The school was quiet and advanced in a most thorough and satisfactory manner.

The winter term was taught by Miss E. F. Bickford of Concord. Miss Bickford is an experienced and accomplished teacher, and under her instructions the scholars' lessons were well learned and well remembered.

DISTRICT NO. 5.

The summer term was taught by Miss Mary C. Chase of Auburn. This was her third term in this district. The school made good progress, and the teacher maintained the most perfect order.

The winter term was taught by Miss Lillie Dolber of Candia. The school appeared well at the commencement, but as it closed suddenly for want of scholars, owing to sickness, there was no examination.

DISTRICT NO. 6.

Both summer and winter terms were taught by Miss Ella F. Hanson of Auburn. At the close it was very evident that both the scholars' time and the district's money had been well expended.

DISTRICT NO. 7.

The summer term was taught by Miss Emma C. Young of Manchester. This was the teacher's first experience, but she showed rare decision, energy and firmness—those fundamental requirements of a good teacher. The scholars advanced rapidly in their studies, and all parties concerned were mutually pleased and satisfied, as was proved by her commencing the winter term, when the destruction of the school-house by fire interrupted its harmony.

DISTRICT NO. 8.

During the summer term this school was under the charge of Miss Mary A. Fitz of Chester and Miss E. F. Bickford of Concord. Miss Fitz is a teacher of marked ability. The school was progressing in most satisfactory manner, when it was brought to a close by the sudden illness of the teacher. The school was continued by Miss Bickford, under whose instructions the scholars made good advancement in most studies, particularly in the pronunciation and articulation of words.

The winter term was taught by Miss Ella E. Webster of Chester. Miss Webster is a kind and affectionate teacher, winning the love and good will of her scholars, yet maintaining good discipline. The scholars' advancement was very marked and satisfactory, and the teacher has every reason to be proud of her success.

REMARKS.

Once more I have to congratulate the people of Auburn on their good fortune in securing so successful a corps of teachers. The schools, as a whole, have made good progress and been orderly and quiet. In a few districts it seems necessary to call the attention of parents to the subject of ventilation. Scholars should never be required to breathe the same air over and over again, as they are compelled to do in an unventilated school house. The change in the boundary lines and internal divisions of many countries made it necessary to introduce a new geography, which your committee has done during the past year. The scholars are now supplied with good text-books, except in some cases the readers are of ancient date, but believing that in many instances new readers are manufactured more for the benefit of publishers' pockets than for the good of schools, I have not seen fit to make any change.

H. C. CANNEY,
S. S. Committee.
