"Patrons will be able to access library records on the network or on the Web."

Library acquires new automated system

nnovative Interfaces Innopac System, will be acquired by late February, this year. Innopac is currently installed in over 600 library systems serving thousands of libraries around the world. The Innopac system is the predominant library system among academic law libraries, providing integrated automation of the major functions of acquisitions, cataloging, serials management, circulation, interlibrary loan, and accounting. Once Innopac is fully functional, patrons will be able to access library records on the network or on the Web, and move seamlessly from bibliographic records for all titles held, to ordering, and circulation information.

In preparing for Innopac the library's bibliographic records have been prepped by an outside vendor and will be loaded into the new system as soon as it arrives. The bibliographic records will provide the foundation database for subsequent addition of acquisitions, serials, and circulation records. The staff will begin bar coding during the February break and continue through May. When Innopac is operational the library will discontinue use of DataTrek GoPac on-line catalog and rely entirely on Innopac.

We are pleased and excited about Innopac's imminent arrival. Implementing Innopac is the top priority of the library staff during 1999 and we anticipate it will enhance library services for everyone.

Library Week: A week of fun and prizes

"Read! Learn! Connect! @ the Library," is the theme of National Library Week, April 11 - 17. Throughout the nation, libraries will sponsor activities to bring attention to the importance of libraries in our lives. The theme points out the diversity of today's library in our technologically changing world. From books to disks to the information highway; the library can get you where you want to go.

FPLC Library once again will have a week of fun, prizes, and treats.

Last year's prizes included a current best seller, gift certificates for lunch, "get-out-of-jail" certificates (valuable for those who have overdue book fines), and more. Daily treats were offered at the circulation desk. Don't miss it!

Lexis publishes NH Law Bulletin

LEXIS LAW Publishing Company has recently published the inaugural issue of New Hampshire Law Bulletin, edited by Susan Marshall, Esq. Susan is a 1980 graduate of Franklin Pierce Law Center and worked for New Hampshire Legislative Services for many years, most recently as Deputy Director and Chief Legal Officer. The newsletter, seemingly modeled along the lines of U.S. Law Week, will be published six times a year and promises to provide news from the legislative, executive and judicial branches of New Hampshire plus summaries of the text of many of the primary materials emanating from those branches.

The first issue is no disappointment. It provides an article written by Charles G. Douglas III entitled "1998 Evidence Update," and another article by Charles A. DeGrandpre on New Hampshire's recent adoption of the Uniform International Wills Act. It also provides miscellaneous news items; summaries of recent court cases decided by the New Hampshire Supreme Court, U.S. District Court for the District of New Hampshire, and the U.S. Court of Appeals for the First Circuit; a separate section entitled "Court Rules, Orders and Bulletins" providing summaries, and another section giving full text of the "Proposed Amendments to Local Rules of U.S. District Court of the District of N.H." Another section gives legislative updates and deadlines, a brief chronology of events relating to the education financing issue, a selected listing of newly enacted 1998 RSA Chapter numbers and a list of repealed RSA Chapter numbers. Yet another section provides updates and deadlines relating to agencies and proposed rules, and summaries of some rules. This section also gives summaries of selected decisions from the New Hampshire Public Employee Labor Relations Board. Many of the sections listed above also include addresses or web sites where one could obtain full text of the summarized documents.

The New Hampshire legal and governmental community is fortunate to finally have access to a newsletter of this caliber focusing on New Hampshire law. Although there will be some overlap between information given here and that provided in the New Hampshire Bar News, it seems that much of the coverage will be complimentary. Susan brings to the editorship a deep understanding about the inner-workings of New Hampshire government. The focus of this newsletter is to track all types of primary legal authorities and news relating to it. Perusal of the New Hampshire Law Bulletin will become essential for anyone interested in learning about current legislative, judicial, or administrative activity in New Hampshire.

The newsletter will be kept on reserve in the library. +

Shark bytes

It swims, it bites, it talks like a lawyer. It's Shark Talk, http:// www.nolo.com/sharktalk/sharktalk_welcome.html., a fun online game which works like "hangman." Each day the definition of a legal term or phrase will be followed by a series of blanks. You choose letters to fill enough of the blanks to guess the term before you are eaten by the lawyer/shark swimming beneath your life raft. It's fun, it's educational, it's risky! Bring your shark repellant!

Try http://www.nolo.com/dictionary/wordindex.cfm to find the meaning of some puzzling legal term or question.

If your sense of humor requires frequent feedings, drop in on the New Hampshire based web site, Rink Works, Http://www.rinkworks.com. This web site presents online entertainment, humor, games, puzzles, movie reviews, and more. And if you think you are a stupid person, and have a hard time just staying alive, your troubles are over. Locate the section on, "Don't throw a brick straight up." This could be your own guide to life. Check it out even if you think the person next to you is stupid and you're a genius!

UESTION: I am researching a Uniform Commercial Code case for my job, and the attorney I am working with said that N.H. Rev. Stat. Ann. 382-A:2-207 (1994) is relevant to the issue she wants me to research. This section relates to "Additional Terms in Acceptance or Confirmation" for the contract. I have checked that RSA section and found the text of that UCC section which New Hampshire has adopted, along with Official Comments. There is one federal case listed in the annotations, two ALR articles which are related only marginally, and a CJS reference which did not help much either. How can I find more specific information explaining what this section means? I guess I also have to look for more cases from other jurisdictions, since there are none listed from New Hampshire. I only have a couple of hours and need to bring something useful back to the office!

ANSWER: There are a couple of quick places you can look which should do an excellent job explaining what this section of the UCC means and should give you many cases from other jurisdictions. If you prefer to do print research (the attorney may not be willing to pay for your online research!), you could use the Uniform CommercialCode Reporting Service (KF880.A2A4 and A5), the Uniform Commercial Code Case Digest (KF880.3.P5), and the looseleaf treatise which goes with this set, William D. Hawkland, Uniform Commercial

Series Code (1998)(KF879.527.H38). The beauty of using the latter two tools is that they are each organized by code section and refer back to the first tool which provides full text of cases. Since you know the UCC section you are researching, Article 2-207, you can easily check each of these sources for more information without having to use an index. A quick check of 2-207 of the Hawkland treatise provides you with the text of that section, and the Official Comments (which you have already seen in the RSAs). H a w k l a n d p r o v i d e s many internal cross references to other related sections of the UCC. and a page and a half of law review references to articles discussing Article 2-207. Then Hawkland provides 36 pages of detailed discussion on the meaning of 2-207 based on his research and expertise as an authority in the field, and provides many footnotes to relevant cases. This commentary will certainly help you understand the nuances of 2-207, and then you may look further at the referenced cases or to any law review articles which seem especially relevant.

Many of those case cites in Hawkland are to the UCC Reporting Service mentioned above. This is a specialized case reporter which collects and publishes cases interpreting the UCC. The UCC Case Digest previously mentioned provides an alternate approach; instead of finding case references in the Hawkland treatise, you might have simply looked in the Case Digest under 2-207 to find digests of all interpreting jurisdictions, but without the Hawkland commentary. Once you find the cites, you can quickly access full text of the cases in the nearby UCC Reporting Service.

If your supervising attorney has given you permission to do online research for this client and has provided you with a billable password (since you cannot use your student passwords to u s e W E S T -LAW or LEXIS for research for a fee-paying client), you can use either system to find UCC WESTLAW has a cases. "Commercial Law & Contracts" topical database which includes UCC Cases since 1945 (UCC-CS) and also provides electronic access to the Hawkland treatise (HAWKLAND). LEXIS has a "Uniform Commercial Code Library" (UCC) and provides many files giving access to court cases interpreting the UCC. For example, STUCC provides UCC cases from all 50 states, the District of Columbia, and ALR annotations. LEXIS does not provide access to the Hawkland treatise. Searching in any of these specialized databases or files in either WESTLAW or LEXIS with a simple citation search "2-207" should produce good if you retrieve too results; many cases, you can narrow by adding additional terms to your search or by doing your search (Continued on page 4) in a smaller, relevant database or file. To find relevant journal articles on WESTLAW you could check the Hawkland section previously mentioned, the CML-TP, which is the law reviews, texts and bar journal section of the "Commercial Law & Contracts" database mentioned above, or you might just do a search for "2-207" in TP-ALL to search all full text law reviews, texts, and bar journals. On LEXIS, you could search the BUSFIN Library and either the ABI or BIS files which both include coverage of the Uniform Commercial Code Law Journal (this journal is not available on WESTLAW); or you could do a more general search of LAWREV Library and the ALLREV file to search full text of articles discussing "2-207".

Since your issue is based on a uniform law, even though there is little New Hampshire authority on the meaning of RSA 382-A: 2-207, there is a lot of applicable information from other sources. Whether you chose print or online sources, you can quickly and fairly painlessly pull together some very relevant materials on Article 2-207 which will help you in drafting a good contract for your client. \blacklozenge

What's new in the IP Mall

Audio files of FPLC faculty and staff who have appeared on radio or television are now offered on the IP Mall. Two initial choices are:

- August 17, 1998 interview of Prof. Bill Murphy on the 1998 Microsoft Antitrust case. Broadcast on NH Public Radio, "The Exchange."
- Elizabeth Christian, Director of FPLC's Innovation and Creativity Clinic, on being named one of the top 20 best community development programs in America by the US Government's Department of Housing and Urban Development, recorded on WFTN/WSCY Radio, Fall 1998.

To visit, go to: http://www.ipmall.fplc.edu/audio/fplchome.htm

Another new section of the IP Mall contains jury instructions for both civil and criminal cases to be tried in Federal Court. Notes following each section contain supporting and relevant authority for the individual instructions. To visit, go to: http://www.ipmall.fplc.edu/jury/fplchome.htm

IP has exploded as a practice area, and legal publishers have produced dozens of new journals to fill the need to educate practitioners. The IP Library has purchased many of these new journals. The titles can be seen on our new periodical list - updated to Spring 1999. To visit, go to: http://www.ipmall.fplc.edu/userguid/user4.htm

Legal Writing II / Moot Court materials

Soon first year law students taking Legal Writing II will become involved in researching and writing arguments for their appellate briefs and in preparation and presentation of their oral arguments. The library has a variety of materials which might help students with the writing and advocacy aspects of this work. The following list represents a selection of materials which focuses on either the advocacy and appellate brief writing or the oral argument preparation. Many of these materials also contain sample briefs or oral argument transcripts. (All but the Childress title and the U.S. Supreme Court Records and Briefs are currently on RESERVE).

- Aldisert, Ruggero J., Winning on Appeal: Briefs and Oral Argument. Notre Dame, Ind.: National Institute of Trial Advocacy, 1996. KF 9050 .A43 1996. Chapter 5 is on Standards of Review.

U.S. business sales are booming again. With the majority of these sales involving businesses priced below One million dollars, opportunities abound for professionals who want to expand their practices to intermediary services for buyers and sellers of businesses.

Buying and Selling Businesses takes the guesswork out of buying, selling, and valuing businesses. Drawing on highly developed skills and decades of practical experience, author Bumstead explains every detail of every stage in the process from arriving at an asking price to matching buyers to businesses, from negotiating a purchase agreement to closing the deal. IP Mall ad brings cutting edge newsletters to IP Library

Glasser LegalWorks is a publisher of cutting edge publications on intellectual property, cyberspace, and electronic commerce. Glasser recently evaluated the FPLC IP Mall Web site and liked what they saw:

"Since we first visited with our good friends at the Franklin Pierce Law Center a couple years ago, this site has been drastically revised, resulting in a marvelously well detailed one-stop site for IP materials. The navigation bar resembles a family tree and offers an extensive menu of articles, materials for IP law students and perhaps the best library of links to IP resources on the Web. The site is lively and easy to get around; the IP researcher is advised to start the research here."

Based on this review Jon Cavicchi, IP Librarian, negotiated with Glasser to exchange subscriptions to their newsletters in exchange for a banner ad in the IP Mall.

The publications we are now receiving are:

Spring semester is frequently a busy time for researchers. Moot court competitions, independent studies, class research, and real-life attorney research requirements may all contribute to the need for research material outside the Law Center Library collection. At these times, interlibrary loan may be the answer. Copies of articles and/or books may be borrowed from libraries across the country. Remember, interlibrary loan is not limited to legal material. Libraries with a wide variety of specialties as well as university and public libraries, make their collections available for loan.

Allow 3 to 10 days for the material to arrive, and be as complete as possible in your request. Forms are on he door of the interlibrary loan supervisor, Jean Everson. Once completed, they may be left in the office or slipped under the door after hours.

As the Citator Turns...

Have you heard?

Shepard's and WESTLAW are getting a divorce.

They've been together for so long.

The word is that Shepard's is going to shack up exclusively with LEXIS beginning in July of this year.

But WESTLAW has not been wasting any time. WESTLAW and KeyCite have been hot and heavy for the last couple of years.

Sound like a soap opera? You never know who is snuggling up with who in the legal publishing world these days. Recent fallout from the companies buying companies extravaganza resulted in Shepard's ending up in bed with LEXIS. I believe that WESTLAW saw the writing on the wall and developed KeyCite so as not to be alone when Shepard's departed.

For you, the legal researcher, this is a fairly developsignificant ment. On July 2, 1999. Shepard's will no longer be available on WEST-LAW and will be available exclusively on LEXIS. Using Shepard's online has become a standard practice in law schools and in "the real world." Even practitioners who typically do not use the online services turn to an electronic version of Shepard's for an efficient, up to date report of where their case stands.

Now we must retrain ourselves to thinking of "Shepardizing" on LEXIS and "KeyCiting" on WESTLAW. While each company is ready to tell you how their service is superior, I believe that for the most part, Shepard's and KeyCite serve the same purpose. WESTLAW will phasing InstaCite and Shepard's Preview out and pouring all their efforts into KeyCite. Regardless of which service you use, checking your cases is a crucial step in research.

Of course, the print version of Shepard's will continue. (There is no print equivalent to KeyCite.) However, researchers should be aware that when "shepardizing" a case, very recent decisions, which were formerly cited by the court docket number, are now being shown using a LEXIS citation. While I understand this to be a wise business practice on the part of LEXIS, I think many practitioners in the real world who use the print resource will be highly offended at being forced to use LEXIS in order to make sure that decisions being used in their research are still good law. Solo attorneys who cannot afford access to LEXIS will run the risk of not having the most current information for their clients while affluent large firms will have access to more current resources. Where is the justice in this business decision?

Ah but such are the dramas of the law librarians world. We eagerly await the next episode, perhaps "As the CD-ROM spins."
