LEVI BARTLETT, JOHN HASTINGS, PHILIP S. DRAKE,	}	Selectmen of Bristol.
--	---	--------------------------------------

BRISTOL, March 3, 1862.

R E P O R T

OF THE

SUPERINTENDING SCHOOL COMMITTEE.

DISTRICT No. 1. One term of eleven weeks, taught by Miss A. H. Sargent. Whole number of scholars, 23; average attendance, 17. The general appearance of the school was good, with a fair improvement. The duties of the teacher were performed in a prompt and energetic manner. Order very good.

DISTRICT No. 2. First term, 10 weeks, taught by Miss L. E. Hardy. Whole number of scholars, 48; average attendance, 35. Miss Hardy labored hard. Some scholars made good improvement. The 1142 cases of tardiness reflect not a little on the remissness of parents.

Second term, eight weeks, Miss A. C. Godwin, teacher. Miss G. was untiring in her efforts for the advancement of the school; but she labored under the same difficulties as her predecessor. Those scholars who were constant in attendance made commendable improvement. Whole number, 43; average attendance, 33.

Third term, eleven and a half weeks, was under the charge of Mr. George E. Colburn. Number of scholars, 44; average attendance, 34. Mr. Colburn labored diligently to advance his school; a portion of his scholars gave evidence of thorough drilling, and their progress was highly commendable to themselves and their teacher. Great improvement was manifest in order, and in the general appearance of the school.

DISTRICT No. 3. One term of ten weeks. This school was commenced by Miss Myra S. Randall. On my first visit, the school appeared well. She, however, kept but four weeks, and was succeeded by Miss Hattie E. Darling, under whose care the school made good progress. Classes in arithmetic and grammar showed thorough drilling. There was a fine class in book-keeping. Order good. Whole number of scholars, 21; average attendance, 19. Miss Darling is an excellent teacher.

DISTRICT No. 4. First term, eight weeks, taught by Miss Mary F. Fellows. Number of scholars, 15; average attendance, 13 5-6. Order and general appearance of the school very good.

Second term of seven weeks was under the supervision of the same teacher. Number of scholars, 10. Classes in arithmetic, grammar, geography and history showed that the teacher was not superficial in her instruction. An unhappy division in the district greatly hindered the progress of the school. It is desirable that this difficulty may soon be amicably settled, and that all will unite to promote the general good of the school.

DISTRICT No. 5. First term, seven weeks, taught by Miss Mary J. Gilman. Number of scholars, 10; average attendance, 7. This was Miss Gilman's first effort in teaching; she succeeded admirably.

Second term, eight weeks, taught by the same teacher. Whole number of scholars, 11; average attendance, 9. The industry of both teacher and scholars was of a good order, making fair improvement.

DISTRICT, No. 6. First term, six weeks, taught by Miss Mehitable D. Wells. Number of scholars, 20. Miss Wells gave good satisfaction. Order and deportment of the school were very good.

Second term, ten weeks, taught by Miss Olive J. Cheney. Number of scholars, 18; average attendance, 17½. Teacher faithful and efficient. Classes in arithmetic evinced a thoroughness highly commendable; even in every branch of study the same fact was observable. Every scholar knew what he had learned, and how far he had advanced; consequently the improvement was of a high order.

DISTRICT No. 7. One term, eight weeks, taught by Miss S. A. C. Bean. Number of scholars, 9; average attendance, 8. An interesting and faithful teacher. The scholars had a worthy object in view, and hence made rapid improvement. In the examination, every scholar knew what they were doing. Great attention was given to elementary principles, and with a degree of thoroughness seldom, if ever, surpassed. One class in algebra made good improvement. History and physiology was taught in a very interesting manner. Composition also received some attention. The labors of so competent a teacher should be secured in town.

DISTRICT No. 8. One term, nine weeks, taught by Mr. Levi D. Johnson. Number of scholars, 23; average attendance, 20. This district was fortunate in securing so efficient a teacher. Mr. Johnson is well adapted to secure a systematic course of mental discipline, as every feature of his school indicated. To a sound and practical progress the teacher seemed to direct all his energies, and labored with an unflinching fidelity to accomplish it. There was a gentlemanly and a lady-like deportment manifested among the scholars, which showed a praiseworthy attention to their studies.

DISTRICT No. 9. One term, thirteen weeks, commenced by Miss Pray, who left at the expiration of three weeks. Miss M. F. Fellows succeeded her, and acquitted herself as a thorough teacher, giving perfect satisfaction. The arrangement of the classes was well adapted to the capacity of the scholars. All the classes passed a good examination at the closing visit, and I can truly say that the school was a profitable one. Whole number of scholars, 16; average attendance, 14.

DISTRICT No. 10. First term, ten weeks, Miss M. J. Chase, teacher. Whole number of scholars, 39; average attendance, 33.

All the scholars appeared well disposed and deeply interested. The teacher exhibited an aptness for teaching. Government creditable. Owing to a misunderstanding in the time of its closing, the school was not visited the second time.

Second term, seven weeks, Miss S. M. Roby, teacher. Her scholarship was sufficient, but her want of energy and decision in governing rendered her school of little value to the district. Number of scholars, 36. Third term, ten weeks, taught by Miss S. C. Moor. Number of scholars, 41 ; average attendance, 30. Miss Moor sustained her reputation as a superior instructor. The school, under her management, was orderly and studious, and her scholars made necessarily excellent improvement. At the last visit made by the committee, all her classes appeared well. This district was very fortunate in obtaining so faithful and so successful a teacher.

DISTRICT No. 11. First term, eight weeks, Miss R. P. Chase, teacher. Whole number of scholars, 27 ; average attendance, 22. A profitable and successful school in every respect.

Second term, eight weeks, taught by the same. Whole number of scholars, 15 ; average attendance, 13. What was said of the first term is equally true of this. Rapid progress was made in all the branches taught in this school. Miss Chase loves teaching ; hence her excellent success in governing a school.

I have endeavored to give in the foregoing remarks a careful statement of the progress and condition of each school, as fully as space would allow.

The fall and winter terms of the schools have made good improvement.
