Hopkinton Village Library Branch Budget for Year 1940

	1940	1939
Rent	$120.00	$120.00
Librarian	75.00	75.00
Janitor	20.00	20.00
Light	15.00	13.00

	$269.50	$269.25

I hope the town can appropriate the same amount, at least, $300.00, as last year as the running expenses eat up the most of it so there is little left for purchase of books apart from the endowments. There seems to be more call from the schools for literature in connection with their studies. We have tried to help to the best of our ability.

Respectfully yours,

STEPHEN F. BEALS,
Trustee.

On account of the several days lost at the time of the September hurricane and bad weather during the winter we were unable to make up the full 360 half-days of school, so that the total for this year is less than that of the preceding year. There was an increase of 15 in the average membership for the year. The percent of attendance remains practically the same. The number of tardinesses decreased slightly. The total number of pupils registered in the district for the year was 303. Of these one elementary and five high school pupils were tuition pupils. Four elementary and four high school pupils living in the district attended outside schools. This makes 305 the total number of pupils residing in the district and attending public schools, an increase of 23 over last year.

In the summer of 1939 the projected changes were made in the Hopkinton Village School. We now have two good size, well-equipped class rooms, FLUSH TOILETS, NEW TYPE DRINKING FOUNTAINS, NEW LIGHTS and a CEMENT CELLAR. This is a great improvement over the former condition of the building.

At the high school building the work of the pupils in Chemistry and Physics would be greatly assisted by the installation of Pyrofax gas for the burners, instead of the old fashioned alcohol lamps now in use. We are handicapped also in the assembly room by the lack of shades for darkening the room for moving pictures. Both these items could be supplied for a comparatively small amount of money. The need for an improved shop for the boys is still pressing.

It is now recognized that the needs of pupils who do not go to college are not met by the old type of high school course including languages, mathematics, etc. As only 15-20 per cent of graduates attend college, the greater part of our students would receive greater benefits from courses preparing them for prompt participation in the work of the community. In this we refer to the practical use of oral and written English, more training in newspaper and magazine reading, and the practical application of sciences in everyday life. School credit for cooperative part-time work in the various industries and businesses of the community would enable the pupil to be definitely prepared to do something when he leaves high school. It would help employers to find likely young men and women to carry on their businesses, and aid the community in retaining its young people. We hope to be able to work out some plan for accomplishing this plan.

The work of this year has gone on successfully with the cooperation of the pupils' parents, teachers and school board.

Respectfully submitted,

JOHN A. SINCLAIR,
Superintendent of Schools.

HEADMASTER'S REPORT — 1938-39

The time has come in these reports when one must either repeat a large part of the reports of two years ago or to begin to include new items towards a new approach. This particular report will show earmarks of doing both.

During the past year the headmaster taught Economics and Sociology, Algebra and General Mathematics, Geometry, Modern European History and Commercial Geography. There seems to be a tendency for pupils to take the easy way to get a unit with the result that a pupil may find it possible to go to college at the end of the senior year but has not taken algebra which he must have. One who has the ability to do well a subject which is required for college entrance should not be permitted to take something else. This applies to a choice of algebra or general mathematics; the former is the beginning of college preparation while the latter is just about the end. Modern European History was a particularly vital course this year because so much history was being made and such a study makes possible a better understanding of the history just begun in Europe the past few months. It seems impossible in too many cases to interest a pupil in history even though events in other lands may mean the loss of life of those near us. It is easy to say we won't get into another world war but it is difficult to make a teacher of history believe this, not because the lessons of history are not clear, but because of a close knowledge of human nature as found in the classroom. A teacher of such a course must spend much time in reading about modern events and in trying to get teachable knowledge and material of the period since 1920. Dictatorships and controlled presses headed by bureaus of propaganda call for a high degree of study and a judicial temperament in a modern social science teacher. Commercial Geography was taught by the unit method with the oral report the means of distribution of information. An attempt was made to make this course real, vital, and applicable to daily life. It has proved an excellent course for those interested in modern problems of national economic security, economic and sociological problems, and of historical problems so inevitably interwoven in the modern world.

As in history so in education there are trends to be closely watched. Due to the fact that everyone now goes to high school there has been an increasing tendency to use the hour period in order to supervise the study of the lower 50%, called the "neglected" in the November report issued by the National Association of Secondary School Principals through its Implementation Committee, who consistently show inability to study by themselves and lack the capacity to be their own master. Under such a system the better student loses nothing and the poorer gains much. Economically this means more teachers and more rooms, and usually a shorter day. At the present time this seems impossible for our school because the plant is worked to capacity for all but a few periods in the week. The need very definitely exists none-the-less. It is not just guess work to say that the hour period devoted in large part to supervised study is now "on the way" and its success is a matter of record in a goodly number of New Hampshire schools.

We have at the present time a "choice" selection of text books, better than which there is none, and although text books don't make a course or guarantee learning, they do aid materially. We are continually on the watch for "bigger, later, and better" ones and stop only when the "well is dry." Dividends on money thus spend are good.

Another trend in modern education seems to be more in line of a good, sound, and complete training in the fundamental processes, in college preparation as demanded by the colleges, and in the whole field of socio-civic activities. In these matters the small high school properly staffed and well equipped need take its hat off to no one in the educational field. In the realm of vocational training involving complete shops and much money the small school is at a disadvantage. Recent studies tend to show that a person trained as a salesman in high school is just as apt to be holding down a machinist job in five years as anything else. Business colleges make no fuss about saying they prefer the college prepared pupil for their own specialized training and the record of our own school in this matter is pleasing. They tell us at the universities that big business is interested in the liberal arts graduate with a good record. Special training will be given by the business itself after obtaining a good prospect. After all is said and done I am wondering if we aren't going to get back to the fact that it isn't the material studied which is of such importance as it is the person doing the studying. Certain traits of character such as punctuality, dependability, co-operativeness, perserverance, coupled with clear thinking, a quick mind, and Christian principles seem to me, after more than a decade of teaching, to be the things which count most wherever one is or whatever one is doing. A teacher alive to the job, working in co-operation with other teachers and pupils is in a good position to judge daily these qualities in all pupils. It has been a pleasure for me to be able to give good recommendations on so many occasions; recommendations based on a 4-6 year school record as shown in scholastic achievement, extra-curricula activities, daily living, and on personal knowledge of each individual. These seem to me to be basic in school anywhere, and in life itself.

The continued co-operation of all parties concerned, the parents, school board, superintendent, teachers, pupils, and last but not least the taxpayers, in maintaining a school of quality and character is greatly appreciated and merits full value for money and effort thus spent.

Respectfully submitted,

C. MAURICE GAY,

Headmaster.

ENGLISH, FRENCH AND HISTORY OF CIVILIZATION

English.

In all English courses the suggested program of studies of the State Board of Education has been followed, with the exception of cases in which books suggested were not available.

The Sophomore and Freshman Classes were fortunate to have the use of new sets of Beacon Lights of Literature, by Chamberlain, which contain fine selections from all fields of literature.

In addition to a study of literature the English classes had practice in writing and speaking our language correctly; for though one of the main objects of English courses is to cultivate an appreciation of literature, an equally important aim is to increase the ability to speak and write correctly the English Language.

French.

The first year French course began with a study of phonetics, a knowledge of which is necessary to enable the student to pronounce French words.

An excellent new set of books was purchased: Language, Literature, and Life, French Book I by Smith and Roberts. These books have been used throughout the year. They contain the fundamental principles of French grammar, basic vocabulary, and selections for translation from French to English.

After having completed a study of the text book, the class translated the stories in Guerber's Contes et Legendes.

History of Civilization.

The material in the text book of this course, Our World, Today and Yesterday by Robinson, Smith, and Breasted, was studied and was supplemented by individually selected reading upon which reports were made.

The work was organized in units; and notebooks, projects, and maps were part of each unit plan.

HOME ECONOMICS

The two high school courses in Home Economics during this past year were "Clothing and Textiles" for the Freshmen and Sophomores, and "Home, It's Care and Management" for the Juniors and Seniors.

The units in "Clothing and Textiles" were: 1. Grooming; 2. History of Costume; 3. Clothing Selection; 4. Clothing Purchase; 5. Clothing Fabrics; 6. Clothing Construction; 7. Care and Repair of Clothing; 8. Household Fabrics; 9. Children's Garments; 10. Leisure Time Activities Related to Clothing and Textiles. The sewing articles made by members of the class included underwear; pajamas; wool skirts and suits; silk, rayon, and cotton blouses; cotton dresses; and various kinds of household articles.

In the "Home, It's Care and Management" course, the girls studied: 1. Housing Problem; 2. Furnishing the Home; 3. Management of the Home; 4. Home Finances; 5. Home Grounds; 6. Vocations; 7. Leisure Time Activities. Though the last two units are not directly connected with the course, they are ones which are vital to each girl, and, consequently, demand and deserve a place in the Home Economics program. Like all wisely planned programs our Home Economics courses can permit the addition of any units from which sufficient value for the majority can be derived to compensate for the time spent in their study.

As in previous years each girl completed a minimum of 120 hours of project work at home. To those of us who have seen the benefits resulting from these home projects, there is no doubt, whatsoever, as to their importance in the Home Economics program. It is through these home projects that the girls have the opportunity to use the knowledge and suggestions obtained in class, as well as to increase their manipulative skills and managerial abilities in doing many of the tasks of the home.

Our courses for the seventh and eighth grades are necessarily simpler courses in homemaking than those of high school. Since each grade meets only twice a week for eighty minutes each time, it is impossible to study the subject matter in detail, or to do as much practical work as we might desire. Consequently, most stress is placed upon the practical part of homemaking.

Among the articles made in the clothing classes of these two grades were holders, needle cases, pillow slips, cushion covers, towels, aprons, pajamas, nightgowns, slips, house coats, and dresses. The foods work is based upon teaching the fundamentals and principles involved in planning, preparing, and serving well-balanced family meals.

We feel confident that as a result of our Home Economics training the girls who have taken these courses will necessarily be better members of their families, better homemakers, and better members of their communities than they would otherwise have been.

Respectfully submitted,

IRENE W. GEORGE.

AGRICULTURE

In Vocational agriculture a four year program of work is followed; that is, a different course for each of the four years adapted to the needs of the community.

Jobs are taken up as the opportunity presents itself and are taken up in season as much as possible. Taking advantage of the opportunities as they present themselves has more appeal and creates a practical incentive to do the job, rather than an artificially created job.

JUNIOR HIGH SCHOOL SUBJECTS

"Pupils learn by doing" is a motto that has been carried out by Junior High boys and girls.

Class activity has centered about individual research and reports on the solving of problems. During the year contests and debates have enriched the classroom work.

In general, all pupils have been given the opportunity to express themselves orally. Those having difficulties with speech were given individual attention.

In Grade 7 a drive was launched to help pupils realize the significance of good health habits, both in the classroom and in the home.

Social Science

The work in Social Science has been facilitated greatly by the use of the Rugg Series, Books I and II. This series is entirely in keeping with the modern trend in education which divides subject matter into easily comprehensible units. A very well planned work book accompanies these texts and provides a wealth of interesting activity.

Science

The progress in Science was handicapped by the fact that the text books used in both the seventh and eighth grades were of the old type and written primarily for the high school level. However, by using reference books and the use of everyday observation it was possible to complete the topics suggested by the state outline.

A new set of books for grades seven and eight have been ordered. These books are entitled, "Science Problems" and are written by Beauchamp—Mayfield—West. These authors have prepared their work in unit form with real scientific problems to solve. The book is written especially for easy comprehension of grades seven and eight, and will lead the pupils to an intelligent view point on the happenings of everyday science. These books are written with the "seven musts" of science in view:—

- (1) Reading difficulties must be kept at a minimum so as not to constitute an obstacle in the way of the child's comprehension of science.
- (2) Grade by grade, there must be presented only such science concepts as the child can really grasp—a continuous progression from the simple to the more complex.
- (3) The presentation of each science concept must begin where the child really is.
- (4) A constant element of exploration and discovery must be present in the development of each science concept.
- (5) Scientific methods of thinking and working must be encouraged at every point by every possible means.
- (6) Safety precaution must be emphasized at every possible opportunity.

(7) Ample material must be provided for all levels of capacity and experience and for varying class-time allotments.

Algebra

In grade eight it is deemed highly necessary that the work with the fundamental processes and everyday problems, which are taken up in the lower grades, be reviewed to insure mastery. With this in mind nearly one semester was spent in the mastering of these details.

The work in algebra, which helps mostly those who are intending to elect higher mathematics, proceeded most satisfactorily. Scholing—Clark—Smith "Modern Algebra Book I." was used.

The state outline was followed closely and the equation was made the focal point of our work.

Geometry

Once again in geometry the pupils were helped greatly by the use of a new text book—"Mathematics through Experience" by Georges, Anderson, and Moulton.

A little more than a semester was spent in clinching the mastery of the fundamental processes involving whole numbers, fractions, and decimals. Some time was also spent in work with every day problems, percentage, simple business arithmetic, reading of gas and electric meters, and the keeping of accounts.

The work in geometry acquainted the pupils with the language of that subject and the ability to recognize geometrical figures.

A unit on geometric figures found in nature and in civilization led to an appreciation of the value of geometry today.

B. & C. Subjects

Health in the Home and School was taught one period a week. The text book, "Personal and Public Health", proved quite satisfactory and met both seventh and eighth grade requirements.

In this subject an effort was made to allow the pupils to practice their findings not only in the classroom but on the streets and playground as well.

Penmanship for grades seven and eight consisted mostly of board and seat work with the opportunity for all to have their work placed before the eyes of their classmates for criticisms and correction.

Individual attention was given to those failing below 60 on the Ayres Scale.

Physical Education

"Sound bodies and sound minds". Perhaps this is the battle cry of education. Too many times, however, a premium is placed on the latter and the other either goes 'scot' free or shapes its own unweildy course.

Personally, I believe that more emphasis should be placed on boy and girl play activities.

During the junior high age the play instinct is very strong. It is at this period that a great deal can be done for our boys and girls to adjust them to the new responsibilities that they will soon meet.

Keeping these things in mind, we have tried during the past year to provide more play opportunity for the Junior High boys and girls.

The correct guidance in teaching the fundamentals of play and sport during the Junior High period eliminates to a large extent the 'misfit' in high school athletics as well as in adult recreation. A correction now, a suggestion of how to do this, eliminates awkwardness later on.

Besides interesting boys and girls in the strenuous sports, opportunities for indulgence in sports with a 'carry over' value have been carried out. Volley ball, soft ball, ping pong and horseshoes are examples.

Assuming, then, that the teaching of the fundamentals of sport in Junior High make for a better rounded individual, there have been organized teams in basketball and baseball. Time and periods of play, of course, have been adjusted to Junior High level. The lack of proper gymnasium facilities handicaps our boys and girls greatly.

The boys and girls play for the joy of playing, not for the sake of winning. The motto, "A chance for every one" has been carried out.

Respectfully submitted,

KENNETH L. CREIGHTON.

LATIN AND ENGLISH VIII.

Latin

Because of a very small class, we were able to accomplish much more than the required work this year. We translated 5 books of Caesar instead of 4 as required by the state standards. In addition to this the class supplemented its translation by completing a contract. This included an outline of Roman history from 750 B. C. to the death of Caesar, an essay on Caesar's life, an essay on his literary style and other work which broadened and enlarged their ideas of customs and government of his time.

By comparing the politicians and political parties of old Rome to those of the United States today, we came to some interesting conclusions.

After completing Caesar's Gallic Wars, we studied a little of Cicero's life and translated his oration in which he so skillfully defended the Manilian Law.

Then to round out the year's work, it seemed worthwhile to find out about Virgil and his great masterpiece, the Aeneid. Time was lacking to delve very deeply into this but the class did learn the elementary principal in scanning Latin poetry.

English VIII

This class took great joy in their new Prose and Poetry Books and their new Grammar pads.

Instead of reading "Evangeline" and "The Courtship of Miles Standish" in the usual way, each individual worked on a contract. Besides getting the theme of the story, each one had much more chance to show his initiative and originality. Longfellow was famous for his picture forming phrases and lines, which were brought out very clearly to the pupils. Each one had the opportunity to bring out his best talents. We found a few very gifted artists who did some very beautiful drawings. Special attention was also paid to new words found in the stories.

It was especially satisfying to find, when the standard achievement tests were given in May, that this class exceeded the standard class medians by several points in practically every subject.

VERA BRADBURY.
