REPORT OF THE SCHOOL COMMITTEE.

The Superintending School Committee, in making his report, would, first of all, extend his thanks to the citizens of the town, the teachers who have been employed, and the prudential committees who have employed them, for the hearty cooperation, in most cases, in his plans and efforts during the year. Notwithstanding there is imperfection in all human plans he has endeavored to keep in view the highest interests of all concerned; and, though human judgments differ, he expresses the hope that it may appear that the interests of common schools have been subserved during his term of office.

There are some excellencies and some defects in the schools of Gilford. The design of a committee's report is more to show the defects than to point out the excellencies; though to do the latter may awaken a laudable ambition to do still better. With this design he considers it highly proper to mention the defects in our schools that his successor may have, so to speak, "a better start" in the work of another year; for, if the judgment of the latter be based upon the flatteries of a previous committee, the defects may be allowed to remain.

1st. The first defect, then, which he would mention, is that which causes most other defects, viz: A lack of general interest. A diminution of taxes is not always for the highest good of a district or town, but to make the schools of a town what they should be raises the valuation of taxable property. Therefore it is characteristic of a good citizen to use his resources freely, even though he himself may have no children, to improve the schools of his own district and other districts in the town.

2d. The employment of inferior teachers. This remark is not intended to make an invidious comparison. This defect is partly owing to the examining committee. It is a rare thing to refuse a certificate; and yet more than one half the teachers in town were unable to answer, in a written examination, 50 per cent. of sixty questions used in graduating schools from the Grammar to the High School in one of the cities of New Hampshire. It is believed it would be for the interests our schools if more certificates should be refused. Teachers would soon learn to prepare themselves for their work; and citizens would soon learn that it would be for their interest to raise a special tax, if necessary, to secure first class teachers.

3d. Want of cooperation with teachers. In nine cases out of ten where there are difficulties they might be overcome if parents would listen less to what their children say, and quietly consult the teacher.

4th. Parents do not visit the schools. If they entrust their cattle or sheep to the care of another man they go to look after them now and then; but they give up their children to the care of others and seem to have no further interest in them. Parents, the teacher that does not wish to see you in the school room is the one that needs to be looked after; and that teacher that wishes to see you needs encouragement by your occasional visits.

5th. Most districts are deficient in helps for teaching. Not one school in town has reported a full supply of school furniture. Each school should be furnished with blackboards, globes, maps and other things for convenience in teaching. Parents should interest themselves in this matter, and not "starve the mind to feed the body."

6th. Lack of uniformity in text books. This is a greater evil than appears to a casual observer. It necessitates an increase of the number of classes. It confuses the minds of scholars. While it would seem to decrease the expense of books it often increases it. It perplexes the committee, and annoys the teacher. There were found in our schools four different series of readers. It was thought best to banish them all and introduce a uniform series. The committee has received but $20.00, as commission from the publishers, for his time and trouble in making a thorough introduction. It is hoped that his successor may keep out of the schools all other readers, and aim at uniformity in other text books; and, in order that he may know what is the standard, a list accompanies this report. Parents will be benefited also by consulting the list. It is desirable that the "Vocal and Physical Training" in connection with the readers may be continued, that scholars may become interested in the elements of reading.

It will be seen the expense of superintending has been a little greater than appears in former town reports. There has usually been, however, an additional bill that will not this time be added to the expense of the town.

The interests of our schools demand that prudential committees be more and more particular about employing the best teachers, and not say, as is too often the case, "Our school is small, she will do." In the language of the last report, "Our schools now demand something more than barely clearing the law."

DISTRICT No. 1. [Intervale.] Prudential committee, B. M. Barron and G. W. Sanders. This school was taught by Julia A. Eaton. More attention should be given to Geography. Some annoyance was experienced by the teacher from the habits of boys; but she sustained herself well, and was generally liked.

DISTRICT No. 2. [Carr's] Prudential committee, Isaac B. Glidden. Teacher, Ida M. Hatch. There should be some measures taken to locate this school house in a stony valley rather than on a windy hill. The school closed abruptly on account of cold weather, and was not visited at the 'close, but it was judged the teacher succeeded well.

DISTRICT No. 3. [Mooney's.] Prudential committee, Levi Grant. The first term was taught by Emma A. Goss. Her self-possession indicates a useful and successful teacher. The second term was taught by Charles A. George, a young teacher who will improve by cultivating energy. This school would have been improved if scholars had taken more primary text books, especially readers. It would be difficult for a teacher, however good, to make infants understand Algebra.

DISTRICT No. 4. [Laconia.] Prudential committee, H. L. Melcher, N. L. True and J. O. Sanborn. The schools in this district are slowly approaching the graded system, and all, parents as well as committees, should aid in the work. It is believed the schools would be improved by some plan of more constant and uniform supervision. The discipline would be improved, and the studies advanced.

The Primary department was under the instruction throughout the year of Mary P. Smith who had taught it the previous year. The last term witnessed an improvement in order, and the teacher's faithful labors were rewarded with success. The visits of the committee during the term assured him that her labors were not in vain. Twelve were graduated to the Intermediate department.

The Intermediate school was made the care, during the first term, of Alice B. Parker, who succeeded, in her usually quiet way, in making almost a model school. Students and parents, with some regrets, but with many good wishes, submitted to her entering other and pleasanter relations. The second term was taught by Celia H. Marsh; because of her poor health the school did not maintain its previous reputation for good order. The third term was began by Mrs. E. C. Cram who remained but a short time, because of sickness. The term was completed by Alice Woodman. Much effort was necessary, after so many irregularities, to bring the school into a good condition again; but Miss W. did as well as could be expected. There is great evil in too frequent change of teachers.

The Grammar school had, during the first term, an experienced teacher, Miss M. W. Haley, who improved this department very much by good discipline and faithful instruction. The second and third terms were under the thorough instruction of Miss S. L. Merrill. The order of the last term was somewhat interrupted by a portion of the school being a part of the time connected with the High school, yet the school appeared well, and Miss M. proved herself to be one of the best teachers in town.

Miss Mary E. Rowe taught the High school during the first term. Her well-known reputation was well sustained through this term. The second term was taught by Rev. S. C. Kimball who brought to the work a long experience and a faithful perseverance. The term was a profitable one to the scholars. The third term was under the care of Mr. C. C. Littlefield. The school failed to a great extent in instruction because of [disorder. A longer experience will convince the teacher that a school is comparatively worthless without good discipline, even though it be called a "High School."

DISTRICT No. 5. [Thyng's.] Prudential committee, Levi Gove. Both terms were taught by Alice J. Gilman. The school appeared well, though it lacked somewhat in energy.

DISTRICT No. 6. [Pond.] Prudential committee, Alvah B. Dockham. Teacher, both terms, Sarah L. Glines. The school would have succeeded better if the teacher had felt a little more at home in the school room, and if she had been better sustained by the parents.

DISTRICT No. 7. [White Oaks.] Prudential committee, S. S. Ayer. As the first term was given to a teacher to whom the committee refused a certificate the latter felt no responsibility in visiting the school and under no obligation to report. The second term was successfully taught by Emma J. Lane, a young lady who gives evidence of becoming a superior teacher.

DISTRICT No. 8. [Gilford Village.] Prudential committee, F. M. Gilman. Miss Annie A. Gilman, a superior teacher, especially of young scholars, was in this school both terms. The high moral character of the school aided the teacher and prospered the term in every respect.

DISTRICT No. 9. [Under the Mountain.] Prudential committee, W. H. H. Weeks. Mintie J. Potter was the teacher of the first term,—a young teacher, not quite enough at home in the school room to be fully successful. The second term was taught by Miss E. D. Sanborn. Though the committee was not present at the close, yet previous visits convinced him that the school was under a most thorough and competent instructress. We should have more such energy in our schools.

DISTRICT No. 10. [Liberty Hill.] Prudential committee, Mark P. Thompson. Teacher of the first term, M. Anna James. This term was not so successful as it would have been had the teacher insisted on better order. She however gave fair instruction. The second term was successful under the instruction of John Rankin. The school is unfortunate in not being well classified.

DISTRICT No. 11. [Back of the Mountain.] Prudential committee, Stephen Davis. The school in this district was begun and continued till near the closing week by Luther C. Sawyer, who doubtless was at fault in some respects; but his faults might have been cured if the parents had not encouraged insubordination among the scholars. Mr. Sawyer resigned and the term was completed by Miss L. F. Bensen. If parents wish the value of their money they should sustain the teacher rather than encourage disobedience among scholars.

DISTRICT No. 12. [Morrill's.] Prudential committee, C. H. Sieper. Teacher of both terms Sadie R. Hibbard. The order was good and the instruction thorough. Miss H. is destined to be a useful teacher.

DISTRICT No. 13. [Lake Village.] Prudential committee, H. F. Rublee. The Primary department has been under the faithful instruction during the year of Mary A. Dicy, the successful teacher of the two preceding years. The order of the school was excellent, and the instruction most interesting and profitable. Too much cannot be said in praise of such elementary drill in our primary schools. A little, well learned, is better than much superficial knowledge.

The first term of the Grammar school was taught by Miss S. J. Morrill. There was commendable progress, especially in reading. The second and third terms were taught by Mrs. E. J. Huckins who is a thorough teacher. The school room was a place of mental drill as was evinced by the thorough analysis given by the class in Colburn's Arithmetic. The more such teachers in our schools the better for the town. Weekly exercises in Vocal Music have been given to both schools during the term. The money was well expended.

DISTRICT No. 14. [Dame's.] Prudential committee, Levi D. Sawyer. Teacher, Albert H. Hunter, a young teacher. If his health would have admitted, a little more energy would have been desirable; yet, with commendable perseverance, he brought the school to a successful close.

There have been several tuition schools during the year which have added to our educational interests.
