REPORT OF THE SUPERINTENDING SCHOOL COMMITTEE.

TO THE TOWN OF CHESTER.

The undersigned has used his best endeavors, during the year now closed, to perform the duties which the law prescribes to the Superintending School Committee.

The duties of examining teachers and visiting schools have been performed as the statute requires. Your committee will not do justice to his feelings, if he does not here, at the outset of these remarks, bear testimony to the faithfulness of the teachers with whom he has co-operated during the year past, in advancing the interests of education. Taken as a whole, they were a corps of earnest and successful teachers. Your committee has not been obliged to visit the schools alone. Very generally the prudential committee and the parents of the scholars and others have been present. More visits by prudential committees have been reported this year than the last, and more visits by parents and other citizens. This is a change in the right direction. When the parents shall more generally visit the school-room, then will the scholars more frequently make good improvement of their privileges. The frequent presence of their parents in the school-room has a tendency to encourage the scholar and stimulate him to greater diligence in study and greater propriety in behavior.

The amount appropriated by the town was.....	$625 97

DISTRICT No. 1.

CHARLES WILCOMB, Prudential Committee.

This district has had the same Prudential Committee as last year the same teacher in all the three terms, and for the most part the same scholars, together with the same success in teaching and learning. In a school so large as this, where so much depends on system, there is an advantage in continuing the same teacher term after term. Being acquainted with the scholars and their various advancement in study, she can much sooner classify them and begin to give them that instruction which they need. Hannah M. Haselton the teacher, has done well in this school. Her peculiarly ingenious method of teaching the small scholars the art of adding and subtracting, attracted the attention of the committee, and is worthy of commendation.

DISTRICT No. 2.

JOHN STEVENS, Prudential Committee.

Summer Term. The teacher, Mary Coolidge, here made her first attempt at teaching, and succeeded well. In the register she gives the names of two scholars who were not absent a single half day, nor tardy, nor dismissed. Those scholars and their parents are worthy of commendation.

Winter Term. Samuel Marshall, Jr. teacher. That which particularly attracted the notice of the Committee here, was the evident thoroughness of instruction which marked the exercises. The teacher seemed desirous not so much to teach words, as to convey ideas. And in this he was successful. He is evidently well qualified as a teacher of youth.

DISTRICT, No. 3.

LUTHER FITZ, Prudential Committee.

Elizabeth B. Coolidge taught here both Summer and Winter. It is sufficient to say that the reputation which she had already acquired as a scholar and teacher, was fully sustained here. Both in government and instruction she excels. The scholars also for their endeavors to improve, deserve praise.

DISTRICT No. 4.

HIRAM BASFORD, Prudential Committee.

Lydia A. Knowles taught here in both terms. Under her instruction the school made progress both in respect to order and the attainment of knowledge. Her method of introducing the small scholars in arithmetic, to the use of the blackboard, is ingenious and worthy of praise. The school was a successful one.

DISTRICT No. 5.

JAMES T. KENDALL, Prudential Committee.

The single term in this District was taught by Sarah A. Hoyt.—The school was small, but there were good scholars there and the teacher performed her part well.

DISTRICT No. 6.

JAMES TOWLE, Prudential Committee.

Chastina Wason was the only teacher employed in this District this year. The scholars did well, although with various degrees of excellence, and the teacher was well qualified for her task. At the final visit to this school, notice was taken of the fact (which is, however not peculiar to this school,) that the classes had reviewed their studies, and consequently they seemed to be familiar with what they had learned and ready in the utterance of it. A few things well learned are of more value than many more only partially learned.—The practice of reviewing near the close of each term, is becoming, it is believed, a more established custom, and with decided advantage.

DISTRICT No. 7.

GEORGE MERRILL, Prudential Committee.

Emily J. Haseltine was the teacher here in both terms. Under her faithful endeavors to promote the good of her scholars, they made progress in learning. So far as the Committee can judge, both teacher and scholars performed their respective tasks with ability and success.

DISTRICT No. 8.

CHARLES STEVENS, Prudential Committee.

Since last year's report was written, a new school-house has made its appearance in this district. The old one, although not so bad a house as is sometimes seen, was discarded as no longer worthy to be occupied, and now we see in its place a beautiful edifice, painted white, with green blinds, with spacious play-ground and suitable out-buildings. When we enter, we see that its interior is in keeping with its external appearance. The teacher's desk and the scholars' desks and seats are convenient and beautiful. The windows are made so that they can be let down at the top for ventilation. With such a school-house, the taste can be cultivated, the intellect disciplined, the moral nature purified and the whole mind of the young trained for happiness and usefulness much more easily than in that which they exchanged for it. No district should be satisfied with anything less than the best school-house that can be built. It costs something to build a first rate school-house, it is true; but when all the influences of the common school are taken into the account, it costs far less to have a good school-house than a poor one. This school-room has been used for three terms, since it has been built, and still the seats and desks look as well as new. The scholars evidently partake of the spirit of their fathers and desire to have and keep a neat and beautiful house.

This year, Sarah E. French has taught both Summer and Winter. There are here more large scholars than in some schools. They are well advanced in their studies. Diligence in study and good behavior characterized the scholars. Whispering seems to be almost, if not altogether banished from the school-room. The teacher seems to be well fitted to manage a school. She has done well. In her register she says: "The school-room should be furnished with a dictionary and a set of outline maps." It is a good suggestion and should be heeded.

DISTRICT No. 9.

AMOS SANBORN, Prudential Committee.

Chastina Wason taught and succeeded here as well as in District No. 6. This school appeared very well. Good progress was made in their studies. The scholars were very constant in their attendance.

DISTRICT No. 10.

ISAAC L. SEAVEY, Prudential Committee.

Mary E. Patten, teacher. The same teacher has had the same success as last year. Both teacher and scholars have done well.

DISTRICT No. 11.

JOHN B. RAND, Prudential Committee.

Martha H. Emerson in Summer, and Nancie M. Fitts in the Autumn, taught here. It is not easy to say which was best. Both were excellent. Good order prevailed and progress was made in study.

Besides the schools now reported, there have been private schools in Districts Nos. 1, 3 and 7.

Reference has been made to the subject of whispering in schools. Your committee is happy to believe that this evil is diminishing.—There are some good scholars in nearly all our schools that almost entirely dispense with whispering. For this they reap a rich reward in their consequent increase of learning, and their influence over the smaller scholars is very happy. And there are some schools, where, in the successive visits of the committee, whispering without leave was scarcely seen. This is commendable and promises well for the good order of our schools.

The State has hitherto furnished a copy of the Report of the Board of Education for each School District. But this year one copy only is furnished to the town, and this is in the hands of the Town Clerk.

All which is respectfully submitted.

HARRISON O. HOWLAND.
