THE SEVENTY-NINTH ANNUAL REPORT OF THE SCHOOLS IN THE TOWN OF DUBLIN.

It is well at the commencement of a new century, to give more than a passing thought to the school children and the condition of our schools. The town or one district system has had a fair trial, and while it is impossible for us to know in what condition our schools would have been, had we kept on in the old way, it is certain that it is not now, perfection.

No permanent change has been made either in combining or grading our schools, but it is evident, that in the best interests of our schools, both reforms are much needed—neither of which can be successfully wrought without the hearty co-operation of all, and especially in the matter of grading, will it take time and patience.

Our school year is short and we raise only enough money to satisfy the law (about $5 in excess). This condition has been the cause of our failure to hold some of our best teachers from year to year. They want to secure positions where they can have three terms a year, and graded schools if possible.

It is with pleasure that we can report the past year, as a whole, to have been unusually harmonious and profitable, but the harmony and improvement have not been equally divided. Nos. 3 and 4 have been fortunate to have had the services of the same teacher for both terms, but in the other schools, three in number, we have had six different teachers. So much changing of teachers is one of the greatest difficulties the school board has to encounter. It is the result, in part, of the indifference of the people to education and literary improvement, and also to our school system. During the past year no resident of Dublin has taught in our schools. In the past ten years there have been but five native teachers, namely: Miss Emily E. Derby, Miss Emma J. Allison, Miss Mabel P. Allison, Miss Hannah M. Harrington, and Miss Claribel Baldwin. In this lack of native teachers, it is almost impossible that the school board can know the characteristics of the teachers they are hiring, their methods or their manners, therefore they are assigned to the different schools as their training seems best to have fitted them, and with such results as we can see. Although the school board provides the same number of weeks of school in each school house, they are unable to keep any uniformity of classes or work throughout the town. A new teacher cannot at the outset know the needs of the school, and it is evident that advance study has been allowed, when review work should have been insisted upon and, in part, as a consequence of the most thoroughly ungraded condition of our schools, a very irregular course of study has been allowed, and each school is peculiar to itself.

The harmony existing between parents, teachers, and pupils, especially during the fall term, has been conspicuous to a marked degree. It was evident to the board, that each teacher was working more thoroughly for the best interests of the school, was taking more particular interest in the work performed by each pupil, than for a number of years. This rare condition of things led the Trustees of the Appleton Fund to give enough money to continue the terms to twenty weeks, it being the opinion of the trustees and also the school board, that better results would be derived from the continuance of the schools as they were, than to establish a term of High School. On account of the ungraded condition of our schools, the establishment of such a term would necessarily result in a very considerable interruption of school work. The number of pupils to attend would be about twenty, who, with one or two exceptions, would be recruited from the regular schools. The number of pupils attending at the reopening, after the Christmas vacation, was forty-two.

Before the plan for the schools for the winter was matured, Miss Tuxbury, teacher at No. 5, had made application to Dr. McCollester for a winter term of school, and she closed her term at the end of the fourteenth week, and five of the eight pupils who then attended that school, finished the term at No. 1.

The literary qualifications and training of the teachers for the past year has been excellent, fully up to our average, and they have labored with enthusiasm to crown their efforts with success. A great amount of work has been done by our teachers out of school hours. A teacher's work may or may not be ended at four o'clock, but their influence certainly is not.

The methods of some were not adapted to the schools to which they were assigned, but under different conditions might prove successful, although we doubt if sarcasm and unkind remarks will ever succeed in promoting peace and harmony. A teacher should be above the use of such remedies.

The schools throughout the year, in Nos. 2, 3 and 4, have been pre-eminently successful. At No. 3 the attendance during the fall term of seven pupils over sixteen years of age gave the school a dignity and earnestness of purpose not found in the other schools. Among the many good drawings which decorated the walls of the school room, were some showing considerable talent.

On the evening of December 8th, a school entertainment was given by the Nos. 3 and 4 schools in the No. 3 school house. About one hundred people were present and a very pleasing program was presented, reflecting much credit to teachers as well as pupils.

The teacher at No. 1 for the second term labored under disadvantage, as the school is in a somewhat unsettled condition, and although her success has been good, it is not so prominent.

Some excellent primary work has been done at No. 5, but other work showed a lack of ambition. We regret the loss of five bright little pupils from this school.

Because of a considerable demand for copy books of the vertical system, a supply was placed at the disposal of the teachers, that scholars might have them if their parents desired them to learn that system. Some drawing books were also purchased for the use of the older pupils.
