Foreword

Nathaniel J.D. Grabman

Welcome to Volume 2 of the University of New Hampshire Sports Law Review.

At a glance, sports may represent little more than a competition between two or more people or teams. On a deeper level, sports provide metaphorical - and sometimes literal - explanations which can deepen our understanding of economic, social, political, and other issues important to society and the world. In a similar vein, sports law provides a specific lens through which issues of broad importance (legal and otherwise) may be viewed.

The articles and symposium discussion published here address wide-ranging and disparate issues such as economic gender parity, cryptocurrency, labor and employment, antitrust concerns, the right to one's own image, and more. Society will continue to grapple with these and other topics well into the future. It is our hope that the articles in this edition will help to shape our collective understanding of how best to approach and address the issues discussed here. As such, it is our pleasure to introduce the authors featured in this edition of The University of New Hampshire Sports Law Review: Amanda Malool, Esq.; Andrew Topps, Esq.; Conner Poulin; and Justin Cavegn, Esq. We further wish to thank Professor Michael Dube, Professor Libba Galloway, Chantel McCabe, Professor Michael McCann, and Professor Alan Milstein for their participation in our fall symposium discussion.

The University of New Hampshire Sports Law Review Editorial Board is proud to publish these written works.
