Follow this and additional works at: https://scholars.unh.edu/international_nhiss

Recommended Citation
https://scholars.unh.edu/international_nhiss/19

This Presentation is brought to you for free and open access by the Global Education Center at University of New Hampshire Scholars' Repository. It has been accepted for inclusion in NH International Seminar by an authorized administrator of University of New Hampshire Scholars' Repository. For more information, please contact nicole.hentz@unh.edu.
The Center for International Education (CIE) is dedicated to fostering the growth of international programming throughout the University and in serving the State of New Hampshire as we traverse the twenty-first century. The Center's goals are to coordinate international activities and involvement on campus, to facilitate multi-disciplinary education in global issues and international affairs, and to contribute to the enhancement of the international character of the State of New Hampshire. This marks the twenty-first year of the New Hampshire International Seminar.
Civil Liberties, Unrest and Terrorism

Dissent Into Violence:

Seminars will be held at the UNH Memorial Union Building, Theatre 1. Seminars begin promptly at 4:00 p.m.

Light refreshments will be served at 3:30 p.m.

For additional information, please call (603) 862-2398 or visit our website at www.unh.edu/cie.

George P. Fletcher, School of Law, Columbia University

Professor Fletcher’s current fields of interest include biblical jurisprudence, nationalism, and collective guilt, as well as the basic concepts of comparative law and criminal law. Fletcher’s most recent publication, Romantics at War: Glory and Guilt in the Age of Terrorism, presents ideas about the nature of terrorism, war and justice. Fletcher contextualizes America’s recent appeal to war and its connection to revival or romanticism, which puts nations at the center of ideas concerning glory and guilt. Past awards for his publications include the ABA Silver Gavel Award (1989) and designation by the American Association of Publishers as the best book on law published in 2001. Courtesy of the Columbia University Website.

John M. Richardson, School of International Service, American University

Professor Richardson is presently completing books on democratization in South Asia and the political economy of ethnic conflict in Sri Lanka. He is known as a pioneer in the use of computer modeling to study long-term global problems involving relationships among population, resources and environment. His research and writing has focused on the prevention, management and resolution of political conflict and ethnic conflict in developing nations. Courtesy of the American University Website.

Brigitte L. Nacos, School of International and Public Affairs, Columbia University

In her work as Associate Professor of Political Science, Nacos integrates the attacks of September 11 into existing political science theory and international affairs. She maintains that over-coverage by the media of terrorist attacks may provide an incentive to terrorists. Nacos discusses how terrorists depend on the media to inform the world of their deeds. Her research addresses how terrorism has changed over the past several decades and why the West is having such a problem with terrorism now. Courtesy of the Columbia University Website.