Jacqueline Gilbert, a NH native, is graduating this spring with a dual major in Anthropology and International Affairs with a focus on Latin American studies. After graduation, she plans to continue conducting research in Latin America, particularly in Bolivia, and hopes to pursue a career in environmental policy and justice.

Grace Dietz, from Rhode Island, is graduating this spring with a dual major in Anthropology and International Affairs with a focus on Middle Eastern studies. After graduation, she plans to move to the Middle East to better her Arabic, and ultimately hopes to pursue a career in international human rights.

Rachel Parr is graduating this spring with a degree in Biomedical Science. Her exposure to anthropology came through the senior seminar, the Anthropology of Dreams and Dreaming. After finishing at UNH she will be working as a dental assistant before applying to dental school in hopes of pursuing a career in dentistry.

Emily Mierswa is graduating this spring with a dual major in Anthropology and International Affairs.

Rebecca Philibert is a sophomore at UNH, double majoring in Anthropology and Earth Science. She hopes to become an archaeologist in the future, having already studied the ancient Maya in Belize and going to study the ancient Inca in Peru in the upcoming fall. This is her first publication.
