Project Summary:

This website was created for the course ANTH 550: Forensic Anthropology offered by Dr. Amy Michael at the University of New Hampshire. It was made to provide information surrounding the West Mesa Murders in Albuquerque, New Mexico. This case is currently unresolved, and we hope to spread awareness about it alongside compiling general information. We chose to base our project on the West Mesa Murders case because it caught our interest immediately. In addition, Olivia is from Albuquerque, New Mexico so she felt a connection to this case and wanted to learn more. We both wanted to gain considerable knowledge throughout this project so therefore chose a case that we had not previously heard of. Throughout creating this website, we have both learned more about forensic anthropology and its great impact on cold cases. Forensic anthropologists contribute greatly to forensic cases and work hard to identify remains such as the bones found in Albuquerque's West Mesa. We plan to continually follow this case and hope for a resolution in the future. Our most sincere condolences go out to the families involved and we wish them the best.
