At the end of about four years he purchased what is now known as the Gage farm, at the south part of the town, and removed thither. There he spent the remainder of his life. He was possessed of many excellent qualities, and was much esteemed. His two surviving sons, Joseph and Solon, early in life removed to Minnesota, where they have been very

Another daughter of Solomon Austin, Sally, married Hezekiah Parker, Jr.

Saul Austin, and Susan his wife, had a family. Among their children was Charles, a musical instrument manufacturer in Concord, and the inventor of a very important improvement in the instrument known as the melodeon. Bradbury Bailey, Esq., came to Sutton from Hopkinton about 1818, having kept store in Hopkinton three or four years, and being much esteemed while here; removed to Washington; was father of Rev. George W. Bailey.

Isaac Bailey came to Sutton from Hopkinton about 1813; succeeded Capt. Minot in keeping store at the South Village. His brother, Enoch Bailey, came, and later kept the store, and was the only postmaster in town for some years.

John Bailey came here from Hopkinton, perhaps about 1830. His son Lewis kept a store for some years in the South Village. Capt. Joshua Bailey was brother to Lewis Bailey, and at different times made Sutton his residence.

Captain Joshua Bailey, b. in Hopkinton, April 16, 1792, d. in Sutton, March 4, 1881, married a young lady of Charleston, S. C. They had one daughter, Olivia P., who m. March 7, 1855, William C. Capt. Joshua Bailey shipped as cabin boy at the age of thirteen, and before attaining his majority had worked his way up to captain. He was the first captain that ever shipped a crew from Portsmouth, and probably from any other New England port, that consented to accept hot coffee in place of the customary allowance of "grog." He was at one time owner of many vessels, and, as captain, has sailed his ships into almost every port of both continents. In 1873 he bid farewell to his sea-faring life, and thereafter made South Sutton his home. His reminiscences of foreign countries and their people were very entertaining as well as instructive.

BATCHELDER.

Phineas Batchelder removed from Sandown to Sutton in 1789. He was quite a noted man in his day, being a sheriff, and as such having business in many places. He also was a “drovier,” as it was termed, buying cattle and taking the drove down country to sell at the markets of the large towns, and thus made many acquaintances. In early life he had been a school teacher; also a teacher of dancing and etiquette. He was a direct descendant of the noted Rev. Stephen Bachilor, of Lynn and other towns at an early date. Phineas Batchelder lived at one period in Newbury, but spent the last of his years with his daughter Dorothy, wife of Dea. Samuel Bean, in Sutton. Phineas Batchelder d. May 18, 1833, in Newbury: m. BEAN.

Samuel Bean, the ancestor of the Sutton families of that name, is sometimes spoken of by his descendants as “Samuel Bean the grantee.” This, however, is incorrect. His name is not found among the names of the sixty original grantees of 1749, nor does it appear upon the record book of the proprietors till many years after that date. But he, by purchase, became owner of a whole right, or proprietor’s share, which consisted of three different lots. On the three lots he settled three sons, viz., Cornelius upon the lot best known as the Dearborn Meadow farm, lying in the western part of the town and extending over the line into the Newbury of to-day; Samuel, upon the lot embracing the western part of Wadleigh hill, and Meadow Brook farm, now owned by John Pressey; and upon the large lot embracing the southern part of King's or Bean's hill, and extending across the valley, taking in a portion of the next hill, what became the "Ensign Jacob Bean" farm, he settled his youngest son, William. At one time he owned here connected nearly, or quite, four hundred acres. He was preparing to move thither himself, and spend the remainder of his days in the new town he had taken such active interest in, but his sudden death (see Casualties) cut short his plans, and doubtless was a great loss to the town, his great energy, capacity, knowledge, and experience being just what was needed here. He was in the habit of coming up during the summers to assist about the work after his sons had settled here, and the way he used to notify all the neighborhood of his arrival was to go on the hill in the morning and sing. He had a voice of wonderful power and sweetness, which could be heard three miles, and when his former friends settled in this vicinity heard it, they recognized it at once, and would hasten to greet him and to hear news from their old homes. Several of his descendants have inherited his peculiar quality of voice for singing, and some of them have also inherited a peculiarity not so desirable. In all the generations, now and then has appeared one born with ankles turned so that the feet point in. To his son Samuel he gave a double portion of his property, because he was thus crippled. A great-great-grandson, born in Canada, to-day represents this family peculiarity. Samuel Bean, Sr., however, was not thus afflicted.

William Bean moved to Sutton in 1778, and settled upon Bean's hill, so named for him or for his father. William cleared the large farm and lived here, caring for his aged mother, Mary Bean, the centenarian, and rearing his own family. In later years the farm was so divided that nearly all his sons had a portion of it. He was among the early believers and supporters of the Universalist faith. He had a good education and much taste for reading and study. He was quite well situated in life, as the farm developed many good points, among them the fine granite quarries which were first opened by him, and the clay-bed was made a source of profit. Much to the regret of his fellow-townsmen, he, with his wife, late in life removed to Hatley, Canada, where some of his daughters were already settled. He d. in 1833. His wife d. May 6, 1840.

William Bean spent nearly all his life upon Bean hill in Sutton. When a young man he went to Manchester and learned the process of brick-making, at the then noted McQuesten brick-yards; came home and established the Bean brick-yard upon Bean's hill, where quite an extensive business was done. A few years before his death he sold out his estate in Sutton and removed to Sunapee.

DR. JAMES M. BEAN

was one of the natives of Sutton whose successful achievement of a professional education, of wealth, and social position, entirely without external aid, deserve especial mention. His father, with a large family to support, could do but little more than provide all his children with a comfortable, respectable home. Like many other Sutton boys, James Bean obtained his early education at the district school, supplemented by a few terms at New London Academy. The distance of the seminary from his father's house necessitated a daily walk of several miles. At the age of fifteen he commenced teaching school, and taught successfully several terms. Through both parents James Bean seems to have inherited qualities which proved as good as a fortune to him. The mother of William Bean was a woman of very superior mind, she being a daughter of Benjamin Wadleigh, Sr., and his wife Hannah, daughter of Ebenezer Kezar.

William Bean's wife, Jane McQuesten, was of a very fine family. She was a sister to Dr. David McQuesten, long a successful practising physician in Washington. It is believed that the example and influence of this honored uncle may have determined James Bean in his choice of a profession. With this stimulus, and with the intellectual tendencies and scholarly qualities of his Wadleigh ancestry, united with the immense physical energy, practical ability, and sound judgment of the Kezars, he could hardly fail to accomplish all that he did. He went to New York and taught school, at the same time studying medicine, and afterwards pursuing the same course in New Jersey, whither he went without money enough to keep him over night, but was so successful that, at the end of the third year there, he had saved from his salary as teacher about one thousand dollars, which money enabled him to go to Philadelphia and there pursue a course of study at the Pennsylvania University, from which he graduated with honor April 1, 1854. He commenced practice at once in New Jersey, locating first in Camden, then at Juliustown, then at Jacobstown, and, in 1878, in New Egypt, where he remained till his death. He built up a large and lucrative practice, and, being a shrewd financier and man of business, he was able to amass a large fortune, and was at the time of his death the richest man in the county. He was very popular among all classes, and for some years before his death he was much talked of as a candidate for governor and United States senator: but his failing health did not permit him to enter the political arena. In 1885 he was taken seriously ill with a complication of diseases. This sickness left him much broken in health, and finally he died Jan. 23, 1887. His wife was Rachel E., daughter of Aaron R. and Eliza A. Borden, one of the most prominent families in the state of New Jersey. They had six daughters, the three eldest of whom graduated from the Moravian College, at Bethlehem, Penn.

His son Nahum, a young man of much promise, enlisted early in the war, and died during his term of service. Mr. Burpee was a man of stern independence of character, and was much respected by the people of this his adopted town.

Harris Burpee, b. Aug. 8, 1808; d. May 3, 1885: m. May 15, 1832, Hannah Savary; b. Dec. 18, 1807. Child,—

I. Frank, b. July 21, 1833; d. Oct. 16, 1864: m. Lydia Page, Nov. 7, 1856. They had one child, Willie P., b. May 30, 1858, and d. Oct. 11, 1864, five days before the death of his father, both dying of diphtheria.

Lois Savary, wife of Nathan Burpee, and Hannah Savary, wife of Harris Burpee, were sisters, being daughters of Daniel Savary of Sutton. Harris Burpee for several years owned and occupied the Jacob Harvey estate in South Sutton ; afterwards he resided in Mill Village. He was much esteemed as a citizen. and, as the town records show, many times held offices of trust and responsibility.

BENJAMIN P. BURPEE.

The following, taken from the Manchester Union of Nov. 8, 1888, will, it is believed, be read with interest by the people whose memory goes back to war-time when Col. Burpee was an active and influential citizen of this town. He did a good share of the public work, and made many friends while here.

The end, which had been expected for some days in the life of Col. Benjamin P. Burpee, came at 3 : 10 o'clock this morning, when his spirit peacefully and without a struggle forsook its tenement of clay and soared to realms of immortality. During the middle of the past summer the first evidence of the undermining of his health became manifest, and he slowly but surely failed, until about the first of September, when he became in a large degree restricted to his pleasant residence at No. 417 Central street, and ten days since took his bed, where he lay failing day by day, fully conscious of his approaching dissolution, and awaiting the same with calmness, and without the slightest semblance of fear.

Mr. Burpee was born at New London Aug. 27, 1818, and was the fourth of five children born to Thomas and Lydia (Blake) Burpee. The first forty years of his life were passed in his native town, where he was educated and became a successful agriculturist. He left there to engage in mercantile business in the neighboring town of Sutton, where he became a prominent merchant. From Sutton he removed to Hopkinton, where he was at the head of a store for a time, and then purchased what is now known as the Grassmere farm, at Goffstown, where he engaged in farming. In 1871 he located in Manchester, and engaging in the grocery trade was thus actively employed for some years in the Museum building. His career in this city is well known, however, he being most of the time actively engaged in business, retiring less than a year since from trade in the store at the corner of Lake avenue and Massabesic street.

While at New London he held every office within the gift of the town, representing the town in the legislature, and was also a member of the board of commissioners for Merrimack county for three years. At Sutton he enjoyed similar honors from his fellow-citizens, being town treasurer during the period of the war. Here in Manchester, too, he was singled out as a public servant, and served in the common council and in various other capacities. He was a candidate for the last time in ward six at the election of 1884, when he ran for representative. He was an uncompromising Democrat at all times and under all circumstances, and never lacked the courage of his convictions. He took a deep interest in the current political events of the day, was an ardent admirer of President Cleveland, and one of the last topics he spoke about was that of the approaching election.

In religion he was a Spiritualist, and was one who was never ashamed to be known as such. He was the backbone of the society in Manchester. His wife died sixteen years since, and from that time until the family ties were broken by Mr. Burpee's death he and his children have been closely allied in each other's affections. He was everything that a father could be to his family, and his strong affection was met by a current of love equally as ardent from them to him. The children are Nellie J., Harry H., Jennie A., Hattie, and William B. The first three named reside at home, while Hattie is the wife of L. H. Dyer, an attorney at Portland, Me., and William B. resides on Young street. One sister, Mrs. Jacob Messer, of Springfield, completes the list of immediate survivors.

There was a straightforward earnestness about Col. Burpee's presence which ever commanded respectful attention when he was speaking, and all who have ever been thrown into his companionship were warmed into a feeling of esteem and high regard for him. He was a kind neighbor, true as the needle to the pole in his friendship, generous with his means and generous to the faults of other. Truly, a good man has been taken from the walks of life in his death, which resulted from heart disease.

His title of colonel was acquired in the old state militia, in which he won his way by promotion from ensign to the command of a regiment.

CARR.

I. Walter C., b. in Sutton, July 28, 1862.

II. Nettie B., b. in Sutton, July 21, 1864; m. March 31, 1885, Henry L. Blake; residence, Bellows Falls, Vt.

III. Fred L., b. in Keene, May 23, 1871.

Daniel Carr was b. in Newbury, Mass., Aug. 2, 1801. His father, Moses Carr, was b. Oct. 10, 1778, and d. Feb. 10, 1815, and his mother, Abigail (Noyes), was b. Feb. 11, 1777, and d. July 20, 1863.

Sometime after 1801 Moses Carr, the father of Daniel Carr, removed from Newbury, Mass., to Hopkinton, where he purchased a large farm on Sugar Hill. There the rest of his children were born, and there he died.

Daniel Carr, then a lad of fourteen, soon tired of the farm and started out to seek his fortune. He sought and found employment as clerk in the store of Lewis Bailey, at South Sutton. There he remained until 1824 (?) when, with the little patrimony received from his father's estate, he purchased the store and merchandise of Mr. Bailey, and commenced business on his own account.

Of course at that time nearly every family used spirituous liquors in some form, and every store was expected, not only to keep a good stock of all kinds from New England rum to the finest wines, but to sell by the glass over the counter. Very quickly, however, Mr. Carr saw the evil of this, and gave orders that no more of that business be carried on in his store. This came very near causing a revolution and ruining his trade. But he persisted in his determination, and succeeded in doing away with that part of the business. He was one of the three men who first voted the Whig ticket in town.

Feb. 20, 1827, Mr. Carr was married to Rhoda, a daughter of Joseph Bartlett, of Warner, and a descendant of Richard Bartlett, who came from England to Newbury, Mass., in 1635. They had one son, William A. Carr, b. Jan. 10, 1828.

About 1834 Mr. Carr sold his store to his brother Moses Carr, and removed to Concord. There he went into trade and remained until the death of his wife, Nov. 29, 1836. He then removed to Bradford, buying out the store of John D. Wadleigh, and there he remained in business until July, 1854, when his son was admitted as a partner under the firm name of D. & W. A. Carr. This copartnership continued until July, 1875, when the elder member retired after a successful business career of over fifty years. His son, W. A. Carr, remained in trade until January, 1887, when he in turn gave up the business to his son, William M. Carr.

Jan. 1, 1839, Daniel Carr married as a second wife Caroline L., daughter of Weare Tappan, by whom he had two children, Frank T. and Kate E., wife of C. A. Carlton, M. D., of Salem, Mass. He died Aug. 17, 1887, aged 86. He was a man of unimpeachable integrity and great kindness of heart.

Moses Carr, who succeeded Daniel, continued in trade at South Sutton for a time, when he went to Sanbornton Bridge, now Tilton. He died in Ohio, Sept. 16, 1876.

III. Herbert, b. in Concord.

Lysander H. Carroll came to South Sutton in 1849, and went into the tin and stove business, in which, in connection with his brother, Alonzo C. Carroll, he continued for several years. In 1863 he removed to Concord, where he was engaged in the same business. Later he was in a large and popular restaurant, and was for several years post-master in Concord. He is now in business in Concord.

Alonzo C. Carroll was born in Croydon, Nov. 24, 1826. His parents were John P. and Rachel Carroll. When he was twelve years of age his mother died, and the family was broken up. He then went to Grafton to live with a relative, where he remained five years. Being now seventeen years old and feeling that he must go out into the world to do battle for himself, he went to Quincy, Mass., and engaged as a teamster on the stone quarries. He remained there some three years, when he returned to Grafton and bought the old "Horton Farm," so called. He remained in Grafton until 1852, when he moved to South Sutton and engaged in the stove business; in 1853 he added to this a dry goods and grocery store. At the same time he was interested in the patent right business. In 1860, having sold out his interests at South Sutton, he formed a partnership with George Putney in manufacturing bobbins at Sutton Mill village. In 1863 he reëngaged in the stove business, and in 1867 went into trade with Geo.

Thompson, at the Potter Place, Andover. He remained with him one year, when he sold out to his partner and moved to Warner, and again embarked in the dry goods and grocery business, buying out the firm of Hale & Adams, at the so called Robertson store, where he remained for about one year, when he sold out and was called to take charge of the Winslow House, on Kearsarge Mountain, during the season of 1869. In April, 1870, he commenced trade in the Union Hall building, where he still remains. Having taken his youngest son into partnership with him he has devoted himself to other business pursuits, still retaining his interest in the store. He had charge of the Warner and Kearsarge Mountain hotel at the village through the seasons of 1874-'75. In the spring of 1878 he again took charge of the hotel, and was its popular landlord for seven years, when he retired from the hotel and engaged in the lumber business in connection with the store, which business he is still engaged in. In 1882 the Merrimack Glove Company was formed, and he was elected as its president, which office he still holds.

Levi Cheney was a good scholar and a successful teacher when a young man. He was known for many years as Dea. Cheney (of the Free Will Baptist church). He was gentlemanly in manners and a careful farmer. Several years before his death he leased his mountain farm and bought a residence in the North village, where he passed the remainder of his life.

Under the head of Mastin genealogy we have inserted the statement that Jacob Mastin, Sr., being the possessor of two adjoining lots, settled on one of them himself, and gave the other to Peter Cheney, for the sake of having him for a neighbor. Such transfers of lots or parts of lots were not infrequently made at that early date in this town and in other places, the donor wisely calculating that the value of the land he reserved for himself would be greatly increased by having the land adjoining it cleared and cultivated. Added to this consideration was that of having a neighbor in his loneliness, on whose society and occasional assistance he could count, and personal preference, of course, had its due weight in determining his choice of the man who would be, probably, a life-long associate of his own. The arrangement seems to have continued satisfactory to both parties in this case. Mr. Cheney was a neat, tidy farmer, a good neighbor, and a worthy citizen. Having lost his father when a boy he had spent several years of his early life and young manhood in the family of Thomas Wadleigh, Esq.

(2) Jennie B. Colby m. Dr. David M. Currier, of Canaan. No children. Dr. Currier was b. in Grafton, and was son of David and Rhoda (Morse) Currier. He took the academic course at Tilton Seminary, and graduated from Dartmouth college 1867. He went to Boston, remaining two years in study upon special diseases, practised a year and a half in Sutton with Dr. John M. Fitts, locating in Sunapee in 1888. At the end of a year and a half he went to Boston and took a post-graduate medical course, and in 1870 located at Newport, where he has built up a good practice, being much devoted to his profession. He is a highly honored member of the State Medical Society. He is a prominent member of the Methodist church in Newport.

Johnson Colby, the subject of this sketch, was born in Newport, this state, Oct. 22, 1808. His mother died when he was but nine years old, and he was brought to Sutton Nov. 4, of the same year, and was cared for by his maternal grandparents. His whole life has been passed in this town, except when working or teaching in other towns when a young man. He has been well known by a wide circle and respected by all. His early life, like many another, was checked with shadows. He worked hard and persistently to earn a comfortable home for himself and family, to whom he was greatly attached, and he was successful. Whatever he did he did heartily. He served his town faithfully as selectman and town treasurer. While quite young, at near the age of twenty years, he became a convert to Universal salvation, to which faith he strictly adhered through life, often speaking of the perfect trust he felt in the Saviour, and in the decline of life feeling the Everlasting Arm sustained and comforted him, and we are told went to sleep feeling safe in God's hands. For many years he was deacon of the Universalist church. He leaves the record of an honest, upright life, the golden rule being his motto. He was a kind neighbor, a faithful citizen and true friend. He was of a naturally quiet temperament, retiring in his address, never speaking of his sorrows and troubles to other than his dearest friends, never boasting of his successes or attainments. He had a good education and admired it in others. For several years Mr. Colby has been in failing health, being obliged to give up the active work of his farm, and fully realizing that the summons was likely to come at any time calling him away. Yet it came in an unlooked for manner. While going to his door some two weeks previous to his death, and suffering from a dizzy head, he slipped and fell, causing injuries from which his weakened system could not rally, and he died Feb. 27, 1890, aged 81 years and 5 months.

While we refer with just pride to those natives of Sutton who, seeking a wider field for their activities, have gone away from the old town and found distinction or attained eminence elsewhere, we do not forget those who have remained here, and labored for the town, and in the town, and have had here their public and private interests. It is fortunate for the town that not all the energy and capability that awakened into life here has gone away and spent itself. Those who have gone out from us and prospered have done well for themselves, and doubtless also for the place and the community wherein they located, while those who have labored here have done well for this town. Strong in his convictions of right, acting always from principle and sound judgment, such a man as Johnson Colby asks but very little laudation, but it is impossible that one should be benevolent, liberal, and sympathetic as he has shown himself, and not be gratified at receiving those tokens of appreciation which Mr. Colby has many times received.

Mr. and Mrs. Colby celebrated their golden wedding Nov. 12, 1889, an occasion which was much enjoyed by themselves and their many friends present, but, as not unfrequently happens after the celebration of a golden wedding or centennial birthday, death has followed on with rapid footsteps.

ANTHONY COLBY.

The writer has been informed that the New London Colbys are descendants from the same Amesbury stock as are the Warner families of that name, and that they are nearly related to each other. The name among them of Anthony Colby, so familiar to us some years ago, would seem to indicate the probability of their descent from the Amesbury emigrant ancestor, Anthony Colby.

Anthony Colby came from England to America in 1630. He was made freeman May 14, 1634, and was No. 93 on the list of church members. In 1639 he received a grant of land in Salisbury, and removed thither. Anthony Colby and wife Susanna had eight children, most of whom settled in Salisbury and Amesbury. From one of these descended Elliot Colby, supposed to be Thomas, born May 8, 1651, but that is not ascertained.

Like many other families of Sutton and vicinity that are traced back to Amesbury, the Colbys find a break in the pedigree line which makes it impossible to connect them with the immigrant, and the reason is this, that the record of births on Amesbury books does not begin till 1686. Whether an earlier record-book ever existed, or whether it was lost or destroyed, is not known. The children of Anthony Colby were,—

- I. John, b. Feb. 20, 1632.
 - II. Sarah, b. May 28, 1635.

COOPER.

Rev. David Cooper was b. in Arlington, Vt., June 14, 1799. He was son of Owen Cooper. He received an academic education and entered the Baptist ministry, but becoming a convert to the Universalist faith he afterwards connected himself with that denomination, and did a good work preaching in different places in Vermont. In 1829 he was called to take charge of the Universalist society in Washington. Finding many friends in different towns in the vicinity he soon established a circuit, which gave him employment all the time. At that date most Universalist societies were small and not able to support preaching more than one or two Sabbaths in each month: hence arose among them the circuit system.

Mr. Cooper continued to preach in Washington and in his circuit some five years, when he found it necessary on account of failing health to give up preaching, and he went into mercantile business in Washington, and later in Sutton, part of the time in connection with Col. N. A. Davis. He was at the Mill village, and for several years at the North village. He removed from Sutton for some time, but about 1870 he returned, and remained in this town till his death, June 26, 1885.

He moved to Sutton in 1858, and has been a resident of this town ever since, and has here carried on and been engaged in the business of tin and stove work, either by himself or with a partner, or as agent for other parties, until November, 1879, a few days before the fire, which burned the shop and its contents.

Mr. Cressey has long been an ardent Christian of the Advent persuasion, and Oct. 24, 1884, he was ordained by the Advent Christian Conference at their session at Lake Village. Nov. 15, 1884, he with others organized the "Advent Christian Conference" of Sutton, and by the Advent people of Sutton he was elected pastor of this church, which position he still holds.

The death by diphtheria of the two lovely daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Cressey in February, 1881, was a severe affliction, and one in which their friends and neighbors sorrowed with them.

Col. Nathaniel A. Davis was a man of much energy and capacity. He spent most of his life in Sutton, where he was interested in various kinds of business operations,—carrying on mills, keeping store and tavern, and filling some town offices. He was for several years high sheriff of Merrimack county. He was also colonel of the 30th regiment.

George H. and Charles F. Davis, both sons of Col. Nathaniel A.

Davis, were in service during the late war, but not for this town, both being residents in Wisconsin at its commencement. George enlisted in the 23d Wis. Vols., Aug. 12, 1862, and was mustered out of the service July 4, 1865.

Charles F. enlisted early in the war from Prairie du Sac, Wis., where he had for a time been living. He was in the 14th Wisconsin Regt., Co. R, was badly wounded in four places on the right side of the body, losing the use of his right arm and hand. He lay where he fell two days and one night before assistance reached him, and had he not possessed uncommon nerve and vitality would doubtless have died there. He was at length carried to the hospital, where, after a long time, his wounds healed, but he never fully recovered from the exposure and suffering, and at the end of about two years died of consumption, Jan. 16, 1865, at Goole, Vernon Co., Wis., and was buried at Hillsborough, in the same county, a place fourteen miles distant, at that time the nearest public burying-ground. In 1885 the G. A. R. Post at Hillsborough erected a stone to his memory. A letter from his captain to his father, written soon after the battle, says,—“Your son, or, as I call him, my brave boy, was wounded in the battle near Corinth, Oct. 3, 1862. Mr. Davis you have reason to be proud of Charlie. He is worthy of the name of patriot, and, I assure you, is one of the best and bravest of young men. I have appointed him sergeant for his brave and meritorious conduct on the battlefield.”

IN MEMORIAM.

By Sutton Grange, No. 91, at its meeting, Jan. 12, 1889:

Sunday morning, Dec. 30, 1888, Brother Enoch P. Davis was called from among us by our Divine Master, "who seeth not as man seeth." "He has gone to his rest but his works do follow him."

His daring and patriotic service in the First New Hampshire Cavalry, his many years of earnest and faithful labor on our board of town officials, the many courtesies, acts of kindness and assistance rendered, will ever be remembered by the host of friends who mourn his loss.

His recent election to represent our town in the legislature was a well deserved compliment of appreciation.

Genial in his manner, honest in his convictions, generous and liberal in his views, his presence was ever welcome. As a husband and father, kind and affectionate; a neighbor, cordial and constant; a citizen, loyal and true; a friend, confiding and faithful: a good and worthy patron!

II. Charles Gordon Davis m. July, 1877. Elizabeth Saltmarsh. Child,—

Dr. Davis was son of Daniel Davis, of Bradford, in which town the doctor was b. April 27, 1802. He studied medicine with Dr. Lyman, in Warner. His health failing, he did but little at his profession for three years, but after that, with recovered health, he gained a good practice in Bradford and Sutton.

On his marriage to Mrs. Shattuck, in 1840, he settled in Mill Village, and there remained till his death in 1861. He was a safe and successful physician, a good citizen, and a kind neighbor. His mother was Mary Brown, dau. of Dr. Brown, who led a band of music at the battle of Bunker Hill. Concerning this family the author of the sketch of Bradford in "Hist. Merrimack and Belknap Counties," says,—“The marriage of Daniel Davis, who was b. in 1766, to Mary Brown, b. in 1771, was an unusually good combination of the physical and mental forces. Out of eleven children ten grew up to mature age, and were as a family remarkably intelligent, industrious, economical, and, consequently, prosperous citizens of the various communities where they lived.” The father of Daniel was Isaac Davis, who went from Plaistow to Bradford in 1760, and was, as is supposed, a brother to Jacob Davis, Sr., of Sutton, who, as elsewhere stated, died in Sutton in 1819, aged 105 years.

IX. Dolly C., b. in Sutton, April 11, 1813.

X. Mary, b. in Sutton, April 11, 1813.

The above family came to Sutton to live about 1812. From the fact of his being licensed to preach by the Baptist and F. W. Baptist denominations, the father became known in Sutton as "Elder" Samuel Dresser. This title also distinguished him from his son Samuel. His Sutton home was on what has since been known as Dresser's hill, near the South village. In the same neighborhood, and near each other, lived his sons, Samuel, John C., and Martin Luther. In view of the fact that all the members of this large family of children, as they grew up, gave proof of possessing superior judgment and excellent practical ability, that they attained a high rank in scholarship, and most of them made a fine record as teachers, the following, related by Samuel Dresser, Jr., in his sketch of the Dresser family, seems hardly credible. He says,—“The mother of these children was, for many years, partially deprived of reason.” This, of course, threw a heavy burden of care, labor, and responsibility upon her young daughters. Strong minds indeed, and much self-reliance the children must have had, to be able to resist the depressing influence of this afflicting cloud upon their home. That not one of them ever manifested any tendency to insanity indicates that, in the mother, the causes must have been accidental, not constitutional.

I. Samuel Dresser m. June 11, 1835, Sarah B. Eaton, of Sutton. Children,—

1. Lucretia A., b. May 13, 1836 ; d. Dec. 30, 1858.

Samuel Dresser was a farmer, and in the course of his life held several public offices. He was church clerk for many years, and his records are a faithful indication of carefulness and good scholarship. He was in the habit of committing to writing facts of interest, and his papers, freely offered to the compiler of this work by the wife of his son, Mrs. L. F. E. Dresser, have been an important aid. He was a man whose influence for good was strongly felt in the community.

4. Mary A., b. Oct. 20, 1853.

Several years before his death John C. Dresser removed to Enfield, and when he went this town lost an excellent citizen. In his family it would seem must exist the tendency to extreme longevity, inherited from their ancestors on both sides, since, as we have already found, Elder Samuel Dresser lived to the age of 96, and his wife 95 years, and Samuel Kendrick was 86 years old, and his wife was 98 at the time of her death.

EVANS.

Tappan Evans, of Newburyport, m. Abigail, dau. of Dea. John and Lydia (Haynes) Merrill, of Haverhill, Mass., b. Dec. 9, 1746. They settled in Warner, probably soon after 1770, as it is related that the first oxen that ever stepped foot in Sutton were driven by this sea captain, Tappan Evans, assisting to bring thither the goods and family of Samuel Bean, a very early settler, the roads above Warner being at that date so difficult as to render extra help necessary.

Three of the children of Tappan Evans became somewhat identified with this town, viz., Benjamin, who, as stated elsewhere, did business here in the early years of the present century, Jacob, a school teacher, noted as a disciplinarian, and Judith, who m. Oct. 7, 1799, Jacob Quimby, and resided here some years. Children, as found on Sutton records,—

I. Benjamin, b. Aug. 31, 1800.

II. Abigail, b. Aug. 22, 1802.

III. Susan, b. Oct. 12, 1804.

IV. Sally, b. March 11, 1809. She went to Lowell, and for many years did a successful business as boarding-house keeper.

I. Hon. Benjamin Evans, b. 1772, in Newburyport; d. Nov. 12, 1844, in Warner; m. 1795, Susannah, sister to Benjamin and Thomas Wadleigh, Esq., b. 1774; d. April 20, 1848. This family becomes further identified with Sutton through the eldest daughter, Abigail, who married Hon. Reuben Porter, and came to Sutton to live, and here reared their many children. [See Porter.]

The children of Hon. Benjamin and Susannah (Wadleigh) Evans were,—

1. Abigail, b. April 30, 1796 : d. July 29, 1882.
2. Susan, d. young.
3. Susan, 2d, m. Dr. Leonard Eaton. [See "Eaton Grange."]
4. Lucinda, b. Feb. 18, 1803 ; m. Nathan S. Colby.
5. Sophronia, b. April 1, 1807 ; m. Stephen C. Badger.
6. Sarah, m. H. D. Robertson.
7. Hannah, m. Abner Woodman (2d wife). She d. May 26, 1885.
8. Benjamin, d. at the age of 6 years.

Mr. Evans was a man of immense energy. He was engaged in various kinds of business besides storekeeping. He had a farm and saw-mill at Roby's Corner, and traded largely in cattle, and was extensively engaged in coopering. While in Sutton he built the large two-story house in the South village, known as the Evans house, and now owned by Mrs. John Andrew. He also built the store, of two stories, this being the first erected for a store and hall above in this town ; before that stores had been kept in private houses.

In Sutton Mr. Evans was prominent and popular as a public man. Returning to Warner he was many years representative ; he was senator in 1830, in old district No. 8, and was in the governor's council in 1836-'37, and in 1838 was appointed sheriff of Merrimack county.

II. Jacob Evans, the teacher, was well known through this and the neighboring towns as "Master Evans," and was fully believed to be able to reign absolute monarch in any school he undertook, and perhaps for that reason was one winter employed to teach the school at the South district in Sutton, which had been in a mutinous condition, the scholars having driven out two masters already. The school numbered one hundred and fifteen scholars, twenty of them being young men, and some of them six feet tall. But Master Evans, being a man of much courage, and possessed of immense bodily strength, felt confident of his power to govern as well as to instruct, and after one severe contest he did govern the school.

For the first day or two everything was tolerably quiet, but that was only because the great boys were maturing their scheme for overpowering the master, as they had done his predecessors. One day, having just rapped to call the scholars in from recess, he was seated in his desk, writing copies. The younger scholars came in and took their seats quietly; then a noisy stamping and shouting outside was followed by the entrance of the great boys, each with a big stick of wood for a weapon, and marching as if going to battle. The master saw that the conflict was close at hand, had come, in fact. "Shoulder arms!" cried the leader of the boys, but,— "Ground arms!" shouted Master Evans as, dropping his pen, he rushed into the fight, and laid about him with fist and fire shovel, to the right and left. One and another, and another of the mutineers he felled to the floor in a few seconds. The younger scholars screamed in terror, the master assuring them he could conquer all without killing any, ordered them to "shut up," and they did "shut up." In a very few minutes the battle was all over, and quiet was restored. The leaders being vanquished, their followers concluded that prudence was better than valor, and showed their wisdom by submission to the master's authority. Master Jacob Evans for the remainder of the term governed his school without trouble.

One of the witnesses to this conflict was living in 1876.—Mrs. Col. John Harvey.— and as she was one of the small scholars, it is probable that Master Evans did that good piece of work sometime in the later nineties of the last century. In 1797 he taught school in the north part of Sutton, as the following papers show, and had hard work to collect his pay for the same. In a letter to Mr. Harvey, who seems to have been the financial committee of the district, he says:

"Sir,—I expect to go a long journey soon, and should be exceedingly glad for that trifle that is due me for Schooling. Necessity drives me to ask. From your Humble Servant,

Jacob Evans.

Warner, April 1, 1797.

April 7, 1797, one week later, he writes:

"Deacon Harvey, Sir,

Mr. Hoyt's accompt is $\frac{s}{0} \frac{d}{7}$, My due is $\frac{s}{22} \frac{d}{3}$, on schooling, and I should be exceeding glad of the pay. Jacob Evans."

Folded in with these letters was a paper labelled, "Schooling ac't for a number of years," years 1794-'97. For the last, 1797, one of the items charged is "For collecting and hauling to Hopkinton, to pay Mr. Evans, 24 bushels of corn."

From the same "schooling account" it appears that Stephen Bailey taught the school in 1794, 8 weeks and 3 days, and that his board was 5 shillings per week, and that the next year he taught 24 weeks, and in 1796 the school term was 12 weeks, and that Simon Kezar was "Committee to get a school master."

Sometime in the latter half of the last century Edmund Flint and his wife Susanna lived in Mont Vernon. The names of their children are known, but not their order. Polly, Bathsheba, Susanna, and Ebenezer afterwards came to Sutton. Polly m. Adam Davis; Bathsheba m. Daniel Richardson; Ebenezer m. Jan. 2, 1807, Charlotte Austin, and Susanna m. Saul Austin. Charlotte Austin and Saul Austin were brother and sister, being children of Solomon Austin, who came from Amherst to Sutton about 1800, and settled near the base of the mountain. To make the record of this union of the Flint and Austin families as plain as possible, the old fashioned phrase serves best to express the same, viz., that Saul Austin and Ebenezer Flint "swapped sisters."

FELCH.

The immigrant ancestor of the Sutton Felch families was Henry Felch, who came to this country from Wales about 1640, accompanied by his son Henry, born probably in Wales about 1610. They and their descendants lived in Reading, Mass., and in Seabrook. Later some of them settled in Weare, while others went to Vermont. The Sutton families came from the Weare branch. They were related to each other, but not very nearly, being descended from two different sons of Henry, Jr.

The Fellows farm, having been owned by Jesse Fellows and his descendants more than three fourths of a century, passed out of their possession in 1875.

When Jesse Fellows moved to this town he had with him his wife and one child, and the family, with their household goods, travelled on an ox-sled drawn by ten yoke of oxen. They completed the journey in three days, stopping the first night in Warner, and the second night at the farm now owned by John Pressey. Mr. Fellows had bought a hundred acres of wild land, on which he had, in the previous autumn, erected a rude log house, where they lived seven years, at the end of which time they moved into a small frame house.

Mrs. Fellows lived to be almost a centenarian, within three and one half years of it, and yet retained her mental faculties to a surprising degree. Even up to six weeks before her death she was able to relate incidents of early years, including her recollections of the dark day, at which time she was ten years old. She became totally blind twenty years before she died. She was b. in Amesbury, Mass., and is supposed to have been sister to Hezekiah Blaisdell, who m. Anna Sargent, and moved to Sutton. Her father was Jonathan Blaisdell, who, as a gunsmith, was in the battle of Bunker Hill, and died on the way home from the fight. Several of the name and family of Blaisdell have been noticeable for longevity.

2. Walter Curtis became a physician.

Benjamin Fowler came to Sutton from Hopkinton about 1790. He was a land owner in 1792, and perhaps earlier. His farm, which he probably cleared up himself, was well stocked and productive, being the place afterwards owned and occupied by Jeremiah Hazen and his descendants. Mr. Fowler was chosen deacon of the present Calvinistic Baptist church on its formation in 1803, but he had held the same position at least ten years before in the early church of 1782. He was a man of fine personal appearance, gentlemanly and dignified in manner, and always maintained a high character. He had a large family, his children being finely developed mentally and physically. Most, if not all of his daughters became school teachers. He removed from Sutton to Orange in 1823, soon after the great tornado, which demolished his barn and greatly damaged his large, commodious house. He exchanged farms with Jeremiah Hazen who, at that time, came to Sutton.

Capt. Levi Fowler spent most of his life in Sutton, and died there at the age of 66. He was a man of keen intellect, and possessed many noble qualities. He was one of the men drafted from this town to serve in the war of 1812, and received therefor a bounty of a land grant.

Charles A. Fowler is the only one of his children resident in this town, which he has repeatedly served in various positions of trust and responsibility, as the records show. He is a veteran school-teacher, and is well qualified by nature and education to fill almost any position he might aspire to.

The following, concerning the probable ancestor of the Sutton Fowlers, is copied from Amesbury town records :

“Jeremiah Fowler of Amesbury, and Rebekah Colby, daughter to Isaac Colby, of Rowley, were married together, Jan. ye 6th, 1706, by Mr. Thomas Wells, minister in Amesbury.”

“Jeremiah Fowler died Feb. 3, 1754.

Rebekah, his wife, died Oct. 13, 1753.”

Greene French is described as a man of much practical energy and capability, of good judgment and stern moral rectitude, with a good degree of mental cultivation. He was a Royal Arch Chapter Mason, a prominent brother. He was a wealthy man. His principal residence was New London, though he lived sometimes in Sutton, owning land in both towns.

Capt. Oliver French, brother of Greene, was an active, capable man, and he also accumulated a good property. He was captain of militia, and, being possessed of more than an ordinary share of personal beauty, was said to make a fine appearance as an officer.

BENJAMIN B. FRENCH

came to Sutton about 1824 with his wife, who was daughter of Chief-Justice Richardson. He was the first lawyer who ever opened an office in Sutton, and was also the first post-master in the North Village. He was much identified with King Solomon's Lodge of Masons, and while here received the three first degrees in Free Masonry, thus taking the initiatory steps in our obscure town, and finished by receiving in Washington City the highest honors in the Grand Lodge of the United States. He removed from Sutton to Newport, and there conducted the Spectator for some time. Since then he has "made his mark" as poet, politician, and in various high positions of public trust in Washington, D. C. He has filled the offices of chief clerk of the U. S. House of Representatives, commissioner of public buildings, and mayor of the city.

GAGE.

Converse Gage, son of Phineas and Phebe (Eaton) Gage, of Enfield, b. in Enfield, June 18, 1817; d. in Sutton April 20, 1882: m. Nov. 17, 1844, Cerlania Carroll, dau. of John P. and Rachel (Powers) Carroll, of Croydon. Children,— III. George W., b. Dec. 12, 1853. He resides on his father's estate.

Mr. Gage was much respected as a neighbor and citizen, and being a man of a cheerful, genial disposition, made many friends in this town, which he represented two years in the legislature, and was selectman nine years. In politics he was a Republican, in religious belief, a Universalist.

MRS. SUSAN WILLIAMS, who became so widely known in Sutton through her generous gifts to the soldiers who went to war from Sutton, was, for many years, a member of the family of Converse Gage, being an aunt of Mrs. Gage. To every man who went from this town to serve in the last war she made a present of five dollars, besides stockings and other needed articles, and to two orphan boys who died soon after they came home she gave ten dollars each, and one hundred dollars "for the purpose of setting up grave-stones and fixing up their graves." She used all her influence to encourage the soldiers, and they, to show their appreciation of her generous aid and sympathy, made her a present of a nice album containing all their portraits. This album she held sacred to the day of her death.

Mrs. Williams was in many respects a most remarkable woman; being the fortunate possessor of a strong mind in a strong body, she could do, and was in the daily habit of doing, an immense amount of physical labor. For many years she took care of twenty cows, and in that time spun and wove many hundred yards of cloth, and yet always found time to read the reports of the proceedings in congress, and, having a very retentive memory, was well posted back from her childhood, especially concerning the events of the war of 1812. As her niece said of her, in summing up her characteristics, "She loved her God and her country, and always stood by the flag."

She died in Sutton, Aug. 8, 1880, being within a few months of 90 years of age. She was born in Croydon in 1791, being the oldest of the twenty-one children of Ezekiel Powers. Seventeen of these twenty-one were daughters, of whom fifteen lived to reach maturity. At the age of sixteen she married John Williams, but never had any children.

Abiah Gile, b. 1746, in Haverhill, dau. of Daniel Gile, who was son of Ephraim and Martha Bradley, m. — Heath, of Sutton.

Ephraim Gile, or Guile, as his name is sometimes spelled, brother to Abiah, b. April 9, 1752, m. Lois Currier. He lived in Sanford, Me., in 1777, and later, for several years, in New London, and perhaps some in Sutton. His children were Zeriah, Daniel, Ruth, Theodata, Lois, and Mary. (This Ephraim Gile is not to be confounded with the Ephraim Gile who m. Mary Simons and became ancestor of the Sutton Giles. The two Ephraim Giles were cousins.)

Ebenezer Gile, named in the Sutton Proprietors' Book of Records as being at one period active in affairs connected with the settling of Perrystown, was uncle to Ephraim Gile. Ebenezer moved from Haverhill to Hampstead in 1740, thence to Henniker in 1765, thence to Hopkinton, where he d. about 1775. He m., in Haverhill, June 6, 1731, Lydia Johnson. She d. in Enfield.

Ephraim Gile, the early settler in Sutton, was a liberal, benevolent man, and became a useful and prominent citizen. Previous to incorporation he was for several years—1779–1783—town-clerk, and to his records, carefully preserved by his descendants, we are indebted for all the knowledge we have of the town-meeting proceedings in those early years. It is by their help we are able to carry back the list of town officers chosen to the very earliest attempt at organization. Those ancient records are now so faded by time that they are no longer entirely legible, but some two and twenty years ago the present writer was so fortunate as to be able to make out the whole, though with some effort and careful study.

The first wife of Ephraim Gile was the mother of his children. He m., 2d, the widow of Ebenezer Kezar, who was also Mr. Kezar's 2d wife, and not the mother of his children. He m., 3d, Mrs. Rebecca D. Eaton, who survived him, dying in 1827, aged 82. She was the mother of John, Elijah, and Nathaniel Eaton.

GREELEY.

Andrew Greeley, the immigrant ancestor of the Sutton Greeleys, came to this country previous to 1640. He was an original proprietor of Salisbury, Mass. In 1669, and perhaps before that time, he was an inhabitant of Haverhill, where he d. June 30, 1697. He married Mary ———. Children,—

A. Philip m. Feb. 17, 1670, Hannah, dau. of John Illsley, or Insley, whence the name of Insley Greeley, occasionally, among their descendants. It is believed that the Wilmot Greeleys are descendants of Philip Greeley, the oldest son of Andrew. The Sutton

Greeleys are descendants of Joseph, second son of the same Andrew, and their pedigree line runs thus,—

D. Joseph, b. in Salisbury, Mass., Feb. 5, 1652; m. Martha Corliss. Son,—

Benjamin, b. in Haverhill, Mass., Feb. 28, 1699; m. Ruth Whittier. Son,—

Frank Henry Carleton, while a mere youth, learned the printer's trade in his father's office. Later he fitted for college at Kimball Union Academy, and graduated from Dartmouth in 1872. He was for some time on the editorial staff of the Union Democrat, Manchester, and afterwards on that of the St. Paul Press, Minn. In 1874 he commenced the study of law in the office of Gov. C. K. Davis, in St. Paul, and has for several years been practising law in Minneapolis.

3. Henry G. Carleton was ten years of age when his parents returned to Sutton. Here his educational advantages were such as our common schools then afforded, which, however, at a later period, he supplemented by some terms at the New Hampton Institution. In January, 1832, he commenced his apprenticeship to the printing business in the office of the Argus and Spectator, in Newport, at the conclusion of which he went to Boston, and was there employed as journeyman printer some four years. He then returned to Newport, and in company with Matthew Harvey, purchased the Argus and Spectator, and from that date for about forty years the paper was edited and published by them. At the time of their retirement it was the oldest newspaper firm in the state. They were co-editors and proprietors, each taking his turn on alternate weeks at the editing and superintendence of the printing. They were cousins, had been playmates, and at some times schoolmates during the later years of their boyhood, and learned their trade by serving their apprenticeship in the same office at the same time. All this, together with the fact named above, that their connection as business partners lasted forty years, makes it evident that the lives of the two men became so intimately associated that the recital of the career of either one tells the story of the other, very nearly.

Henry G. Carleton was register of deeds in 1844-5, register of probate for Sullivan county in 1854-6, and represented the town of Newport in the state legislature. For a long term of years he was director of the Sugar River Bank, and subsequently of the First National Bank in Newport, and president of the Newport Savings Bank. Having said this, it is hardly necessary to add that he has long been recognized as a man of the highest honor, possessed of sound judgment, prudence, and much business sagacity.

The following notice of John Carleton is taken from the Springfield (Mass.) Republican, in which paper it appeared shortly after his recent death:

The death of John Carleton, of West Springfield, is a loss to the town at large and his neighbors in particular. Mr. Carleton was a man of powerful frame and strong constitution, eminently social in his nature, of clear and positive opinions, shrewd and thoughtful in his views, but never obtrusive in his speech. He was a remarkably well balanced man, and thoroughly honest and truthful. Born in Bucksport, Me., in 1823, the youngest of seven children, he started out early to help himself, and learned the machinists' trade. He worked at this business in various places, and went to West Springfield from Holyoke about 1858. Since then he had successfully carried on a farm, occasionally spending the winter in the Mitteneague mills and the railroad repair-shops in this city. He was about his usual work Saturday, and the doctor was first called Sunday. He died on the 4th day after his first attack, of pneumonia.

" . . . Born in Pomfret, Vt., Oct. 8, 1828, graduated at Dartmouth 1852, and in 1853 became principal of the New London (N. H.) Institution, continuing in that position till 1861. He was ordained as a minister of the gospel in 1858, and in November, 1861, installed pastor of the First Baptist church in Charlestown, Mass. He left this place in 1872 to become corresponding secretary of the American Baptist Missionary Union. From 1876 to 1878 he was pastor of the First Baptist church in Cleveland, O., and from 1881 till 1885, when his health broke down, he was president of the Central University in Iowa. During the year 1870 he visited Europe, extending his travels to Egypt, Palestine, and Greece. He has performed editorial service in connection with the Baptist Missionary Magazine and the Watchman newspaper of Boston, besides writing many tracts and review articles. He received the degree of Doctor of Divinity from Dartmouth in 1867."

During the last few years Dr. Gardner has been in impaired health, and has been engaged only in partial public service, but is at present so far recovered as to become pastor of the young and flourishing Beth Eden Baptist church in Waltham, Mass., where he now resides. He also has a beautiful summer home in New London, where with his family he spends several months in the year amid the scenes of his early educational work.

2. Joseph, b. Dec. 24, 1828; m. Dec. 24, 1856, L. Maria Snow, of Dublin. No children.

Joseph Greeley has spent most of his life in North Sutton, where he is known to possess the universal confidence and esteem of the people. He has been post-master there some thirty years, holding the office through all changes of administration, irrespective of political ascendancy, and without any manœuvring beyond the endeavor to accommodate to the best of his ability the people whose mails pass through his hands. He has also during these years kept a store for general merchandise. It will be seen that with all this he must have been brought into official and business, as well as social, relations with a great number of people. To say that he has made no enemies among them all is to say much, but to go farther and venture the assertion that, though a successful merchant, he has made friends of all those he has dealt with, is to credit him with the possession of qualities such as fall to the lot of very few men. And yet it is believed that all will agree in the opinion that he is the fortunate possessor of those very qualities, and that the same figures which would express the number of his acquaintances would indicate exactly the number of his friends. In the busy life that Mr. Greeley has led he has found it necessary to steadily decline all political preferment.

Ada S., b. 1877.

George S. Covell is son of Stanley and Phebe Jane (Sawyer) Covell, of Portland, Me.

In looking at the record of deaths of the daughters of Gilman Greeley, it will be seen that it shows the somewhat remarkable circumstance of two sisters dying within thirty-six hours of each other, though in different places and not of the same sickness.

Dea. Joseph Greeley removed to Warner, and located on Tory hill, where his two oldest daughters were born. In 1792 he purchased of Samuel Andrew the estate in Sutton known in later years as the Nathan Burpee place, and moved into a log house. He built, in the course of a few years, a large dwelling-house, which he opened as a tavern, and also kept a store on the premises, as well as a blacksmith-shop, where he did more or less work on iron, having learned the trade from his father while a boy.

Dea. Greeley was also for the long period of forty years of his life engaged in the business of buying cattle and sheep in the country, and driving them for sale to the city markets. Twenty years ago those were living who could well remember him in the character of a drover, often associated in the business with bluff Col. Flint, of Brentwood, sometimes also with Capt. Bela Nettleton, of Newport. In his sheep-gathering expeditions and consequent frequent transits between city and country, he was always attended by his factotum, faithful Cesar Lewis.

Dea. Greeley served the town as selectman, committee-man, &c., as the records show. He was a deacon of the early Baptist church in the later years of its existence.

He was a man of much enterprise, and for several years—more than twenty—was successful in his various branches of business. But the opening of another road, which drew the travel away from the road that passed his house, closed up his tavern: this was his first business reverse of much account. Becoming reduced in circumstances, he sold his property in the south part of Sutton and purchased a smaller place near Kezar's pond, lately the George French place, and there resided till his death.

He was a man of refined and gentlemanly manners, genial, hospitable, and kind as a friend and neighbor. The reverses of his later years did not in the least affect the uniform cheerfulness and politeness of his demeanor. At eighty years of age he was as straight and nimble as a boy. The writer remembers to have seen him, when past that age, make a very rapid descent down a flight of outside stairs. The steps were eight or ten in number, worn smooth and round on their edges, and made more treacherous by recent rain. He chanced to slip on the edge of the first stair, but, not in the least disconcerted, he never lost his balance, allowing himself to continue to slide down on the edges of the stairs from one to another, and so reached the ground in safety, and passed on his way without even stopping to look back or comment on his adventure.

The most faithful and minute descriptions of the customs and condition of the people of those early days which the writer has been able to obtain have come from the recollections of aged women. A daughter of Dea. Greeley, Mrs. Col. John Harvey, furnished the following :

“I was born in Warner. When I was four years old I came to Sutton with my parents and sister Polly [afterwards the wife of Henry Carleton] in an ox-cart, in which were also some of our household goods. We reached the neighborhood of our new home after dark, went into the last house on the road and lighted our lantern, and then went on through pastures one half or three quarters of a mile to our log house. My mother used to make our house warm for winter by calking the fissures and cracks with tow. She would get a quantity of tow, and with a case-knife crowd it in between the logs. At first our floor was neither boards nor split logs, but simply strips of bark laid over the bare earth. The trees in the woods being of great size, however, strips of bark of great length and width could be procured without much trouble, which, being laid down with the smooth side uppermost, made a clean, comfortable flooring for our log-house.”

GILLINGHAM.

Hiram Gillingham drove the stage from Bradford to New London twenty-one years, thus passing through the whole length of the town of Sutton every day, carrying the mail and doing no small amount of express business besides. In this way he became acquainted with almost every person in town, and by his unfailing kindness, faithfulness, and liberal dealing, secured the confidence, good will, and esteem of all.

When he had been driving on this route many years the Sutton people, wishing to manifest their appreciation of the handsome manner in which he had treated them, invited him to meet them socially at the town hall in North Sutton. At this reception, which was very fully attended, many pleasant things were said, and the occasion was much enjoyed by all present.

Mr. Gillingham commenced driving on this route in June, 1853, and continued on the same till 1874.

Among the citizens of Sutton who acquired a reputation for abilities of a high order displayed in the various walks of life, was William Harrison Marshall. He was b. at Bradford, Oct. 26, 1811, and was the third of seven children born to Walker and Dorcas (Presby) Marshall.

The Marshall family is of English origin, and the grandfather of the subject of this sketch, Joseph Marshall, the founder of the Marshall family in this section, was born at Chelmsford, Mass., where he was living at the breaking out of the American Revolution. He was of that patriotic mould which spurned with indignation the oppression of the mother country, and, attaching himself to the minute men of the period, he took an active part in the memorable Concord fight in 1775, and was also among the patriot band who fought at Bunker Hill and Bennington.

The year after the breaking out of the Revolution he removed to Weare, where he purchased a farm of 175 acres, and engaged in agricultural pursuits when not in the army.

Gouverneur

Wm. H. Marshall

He raised a family of fifteen children, the result of two marriages, and Walker Marshall, the father of William H., was the youngest son save one. In 1817 Walker Marshall removed to Tunbridge, Vt., where, shortly afterwards, his wife died, and the children were at once separated and put out among families wherever a place could be found for them. As the result of this they enjoyed very meagre educational facilities, and the most of the knowledge they obtained, aside from the rough experiences of life which were their portion, was the result of their own persistent inquiry and research during intervals when they could command their own time.

Young Marshall remained at Tunbridge until attaining his majority, when he proceeded to northern New York, and, while employed in the iron mines of that locality, narrowly escaped death from an explosion, pieces of rock and other matter being blown into his side. When able to be about he left for East Weare, which he made his home for a time, finding employment as a carpenter at Concord. At Weare he became acquainted with Miss Mary G. Hart, whom he married at Hopkinton, January 25, 1837, and from that time till the close of his career was blessed with a helpmate who was rarely endowed with all the kindly and self-reliant qualities which are characteristic of the true New England woman, and proved a most loving wife and affectionate mother. Shortly after their marriage they removed to Manchester, where Mr. Marshall, following the vocation of millwright, assisted in placing in position the first wheels run by the great Amoskeag Manufacturing Company, now the most important cotton manufacturing corporation in the world. After the completion of his work at Manchester he removed to Hopkinton, and while there learned of the manufacturing interests then being centred at Sutton, and on Aug. 8, 1840, arrived there, and from that date to the time of his death, which occurred April 18, 1887, from pneumonia, made Sutton his home.

On January 25, 1887, Mr. and Mrs. Marshall celebrated their golden wedding anniversary, it being an event of much importance in the social history of the town. The exercises pertaining to the affair took place in Nelson's hall, and were generally attended by the town's people. Many handsome gifts were bestowed, and all of the worthy couple's descendants were represented in some way.

Following Mr. Marshall's arrival in Sutton he assisted in the building of several mills, and thereafter devoted himself to the calling of a wheelwright, the excellence of his workmanship bringing him patronage from a wide area of country, and "as good as Marshall's wheels" became proverbial. He was likewise an enthusiast in the cultivation of the soil, and originated several varieties of fruits and vegetables, which have enjoyed a wide popularity. In both politics and religion he was of the progressive mould, and took advanced ground. He was well informed upon all topics, a ready talker and debater, and whatever party, question, or idea had him as an exponent possessed a champion whose arguments were supported by reasoning which was both lucid and incontrovertible. Coupled with his power in this direction was a nature as kindly and genial as the sunlight, a disposition so generous and charitable as to place self in the background, and those in want and affliction ever found in him a sympathizing heart and helping hand. He was tolerant of the opinion of others, and never discriminated in the performance of a good deed. It was but natural that a man of his make-up should exercise a commanding influence upon the community, and no man in Sutton was more sought after for advice in the direction of town and individual affairs. He possessed a symmetry of character, a directness of method, which made and retained friends, and when his obsequies were held the whole town, seemingly, paid tribute to his memory. It is recalled of him that as the infirmities of old age approached he felt that his life-work was done, and manifested a desire for the speedy coming of the time when his soul should throw off the mortal and be clothed in immortality.

William Harvey, the father, d. Aug. 15, 1658, and his widow m. Nov. 10, 1659, Henry Tewksbury.

It is believed that (VI) Thomas and (VII) John are the Thomas and John Harvey found on the early Amesbury records.

Thomas first appears as one of a committee on highways in 1689, and from that date till 1714 he was constantly in office as selectman and representative for many years, and held other offices. He m. Oct. 26, 1676, Sarah ——. Their first child, found on Amesbury records, is William, b. March 9, 1687, d. ——. Another William, b. Jan. 15, 1689, m. Sept. 25, 1714, Abigail Martin, and had a son, Thomas, b. April 30, 1716. Thomas and Sarah might have had children born earlier than those named, but Amesbury's record of births does not begin till 1686. Thomas Harvey died 1714.

From (VII) John Harvey the descent is clearly traced to the Harveys of Nottingham, Northwood, Warner, and Sutton.

William Barnes, one of the first eighteen men who organized the town of Amesbury in 1655, and one of the most prominent of their number, was b. in England 1603, d. in Amesbury 1698. He held many important town offices, and his name occurs frequently on Amesbury records. Through the marriage of two of his daughters he becomes the remote ancestor of many Sutton families, which circumstance makes this brief notice of him admissible in our town history. His daughter, Rachel Barnes, b. April 30, 1649, m. March 2, 1667-'68, Thomas Sargent, and the Sargents of Sutton, New London, Warner, and Hopkinton are their descendants, as are the Harveys of the same towns the descendants of Sarah Barnes through her marriage with John Harvey, her 2d husband. John Harvey, father of the above children, d. May 10, 1740. His wife survived him several years. Her will is dated April 22, 1748. In this will she does not name Judith, Anne, nor John, which indicates that they were not living at that date.

His choice of Louisiana for his home and field of medical practice was determined by the fact that an asthmatic difficulty compelled him to seek a milder climate than New England affords. In the autumn of 1831, being then sixteen years of age, Matthew Harvey went to Newport and commenced his apprenticeship to the printer's trade in the office of the N. H. Spectator, B. B. French editor and partial proprietor. From that date the newspaper business became Mr. Harvey's life-work, concerning which, for fuller details, see sketch of Henry G. Carleton, his business partner. At the time of his death, in 1885, he was, with the exception of Mr. Carleton, the oldest editor in the state, and as such his death was extensively noticed in most of the newspapers in New England, especially in Boston. Although always popular as a citizen, Mr. Harvey was never an office-seeker, having little time and less inclination to pursue politics beyond what was demanded by the interests of the Democratic party, of which the Argus and Spectator was an organ. It had been more or less customary to bestow the office of register of deeds for Sullivan county upon the publisher of the paper, in order to help sustain the same, and Mr. Harvey had his turn with his partner in holding this office some five years. He was also assistant marshal of the U. S. to take the U. S. census in 1860.

II. Moses Hazen, Esq., was one of the most useful and honorable men that ever lived in Sutton. He served the public and the town in various ways. From 1842 till his death he did a large amount of probate business as administrator, executor, and guardian. Whatever business was entrusted to him was always executed with strict honesty, his aim being to be just to all parties concerned. In every case he tried to befriend the widow and the fatherless. In him the poor and the unfortunate always felt that they had a friend and a safe counsellor. For what work he executed he made his charges less than is usual, and in cases where people were very poor he took but a trifle beyond what he actually paid out. He was a justice of the peace, and did quite an amount of business as such. For several years he was commissioner for Massachusetts to do work in New Hampshire. During the time of the war he was on the board of selectmen, where his judgment and influence were of great value to the town. He was a good friend to the soldiers and their families during those trying years, and his interest for them lasted as long as he lived. Mr. Hazen received a common school education, and later attended the academy at Hopkinton. He taught several schools in Sutton, Warner, Bradford, and Dunbarton, in which he was considered successful. He always took great interest in schools, and was for several years one of the superintending school committee. HILLS.

Among those whose character and influence rendered them prominent in the early years of this town the name of Moses Hills deserves especial mention. Through the aid of one who well remembered him we are able to present the subjoined description of his personal appearance, and the leading points of his character.

In stature tall and spare, though straight and well proportioned; light blue eyes, features regular and expressive; in manner courteous and dignified. His mental structure was strongly characterized by depth of thought and searching power of analysis. Morally, he was high-toned, just, and incorruptibly honest. Religiously, he was liberal and progressive; cant could not blind him, nor could any man's creed put a check upon the free action of his reasoning powers. Strong of will, and morally courageous, no opposition or pressure from without ever made him false to the truth within him, or caused him to deviate from what to him was right. He came here from Hopkinton. He removed to Orange, where he died, aged eighty-five. His wife was Polly Knowlton, and she died in Sunapee, where she went to live with her daughter Ruth, who married Christopher Blaisdell, and with him went to Sunapee, where they reared a family. JONATHAN JOHNSON.

Jonathan Johnson, the early settler of that name, after purchasing his lot in Perrystown, used to come up and spend some weeks every summer, and work at improving his property, and then go back to Hampstead for the rest of the year. In this way he cleared up quite a large tract of land, built his log house of two rooms, dug his well, and in the summer of 1783 raised his crops, moving his family here in the fall of the same year. He was not exactly alone in the wilderness while building his home, as his brother Joseph was at the same time at work upon his lot adjoining. Here, side by side, the two brothers spent their long lifetime. One spring Mr. Johnson had been clearing a field, and his last act was to burn the ground over, and when he came back in the fall, five months later, there was still fire in the logs in the bog, and in the partly constructed house the wood-dove had built her nest and reared her brood—a pleasant omen.

In finishing his house he took great pains, each room having glass windows, and all the doors having iron hinges—rare luxuries in Perrystown at that date; but Mr. Johnson's repeated transits between his old home and new home gave opportunity to supply himself with needful things not to be obtained here. He was a man of sterling qualities, and had a good education. His faculties, mental and physical, held out till the close of his long life. For further mention of these two brothers, see "Early Settlers."

KEZAR.

Ebenezer Kezar, the ancestor of the Sutton Kezars, was b. in Haverhill, Mass., 1720. He came here from Rowley about 1772. He died here in 1793. His widow (2d wife) afterwards married Ephraim Gile, and died in 1808.

Coming here with the early settlers, and being a resolute and powerful man, ambitious, and possessed of many capabilities, Mr. Kezar became a master spirit among them, and a good share of the public work was done by him for several years. He was empowered by the general court to call the first town-meeting after incorporation, but being even then well advanced in life, he seems to have retired somewhat after that time, and left the town's work for younger men to do.

Before coming to Sutton he was experienced as inn-keeper, tanner, and blacksmith, and had an extensive acquaintance in the older towns and communities wherein he had lived and operated. He was possessed of immense bodily strength, and all these advantages he was willing to turn in for the benefit of the young colony in Perrystown. He owned the first horse ever brought into this town, which was no small advantage where there were no carriage roads made as yet. Through his own force of character, as well as through his numerous energetic descendants, no man who has ever lived in this town has left a more decided mark upon it. He was more than fifty years old when he came here, accompanied by his son Simon and daughter Hannah. The son already had a family, and the daughter, at the age of 19, married Benjamin Wadleigh, Sr., and became mother of a numerous family. She d. in 1836, aged 86.

Simon's wife was of the celebrated Scotch-Irish stock, by name Mehitabel Foster. More children were born after their coming to Sutton, till they had, in all, twenty. Some of the above children died in infancy, and several of the daughters died of consumption soon after reaching maturity. About 1798 six of the children, viz., Simon, Joseph, Amos, Ruth, Dolly, and Elizabeth, removed to Canada (Hatley, P. Q.), where they had large families and where their posterity remain.

Concerning the three brothers who went to Canada, it is said of them that they in early life were hunters and trappers, but all were good farmers. Like the Kezars in Sutton, they and their progeny were fond of water, and several of them settled near Massawippi lake, in form and size much resembling Sunapee lake. One of the descendants of Joseph Kezar is noted as a railroad bridge builder, and another as a farmer and stock-dealer. The descendants of the Kezar family are numerous in Stanstead Co.

Concerning the descendants of the Sutton Kezars, this may be said of some of them, viz., that to the fine taste and appreciation of the picturesque evinced by J. Harvey Kezar and his sons in beautifying the shores of the great centre of attraction, Kezar's pond, as well as to the work they have done in erecting close by it handsome and substantial summer hotels, is due, in no small degree, the constantly increasing growth of the summer boarding business in North Sutton, which has already assumed such proportions that by means of it thousands of dollars are every year put in circulation in town.

During the first years of practice he spent the winter months in attending lectures at Harvard and Dartmouth, and in 1814 received his degree of M. D. from the latter college.

Close application to the study and practice of his profession, continued through several years, told upon his health, and in 1817 he gave up practice for a season of rest. He went South, and after visiting most of the Southern states, accepted an appointment as surgeon in the expedition of Gen. Jackson against the Indians and Spaniards in Florida. After the capture of Pensacola he was stationed there for a short time, and then was ordered to Mobile, Ala., and placed in charge of the military hospital at that post. In the summer of 1820 he resigned his position in the army, and returned to Sutton to settle permanently. He bought a farm near the North village, and the rest of his life was spent in the routine work of a country physician and in farming.

The breaking out of the War of the Rebellion reawakened his military ardor, and it was with keen regret that he felt the infirmities of age bearing too heavily upon him to permit his acceptance of the responsible position in the service which was tendered him.

Toward the close of the war he was appointed by the governor an examining surgeon in the preparation of the draft rolls, and, as it did not take him from the state, he was able to perform the duties of the office.

He continued in active practice till he was eighty years old. In the spring of 1872 he fell upon the floor, crushing the bones of one hip, from the effects of which accident he died May 3d, aged eighty-six years.

For more than fifty consecutive years Dr. Lane was an influential citizen of Sutton. As a physician he stood in the first rank among his contemporaries. He loved his profession and gave to it the best efforts of a clear and vigorous intellect. Beginning practice with a better preparation than was common at that day, he was a life-long student, both of books and in the line of original investigation. He regarded his profession as a field for unlimited research and study, and held it to be the physician's first duty to be always learning.

He was gifted by nature with the special qualifications of a good surgeon, and the circumstances of his army connection gave him unusual facilities for the study of surgery. Upon his return to New Hampshire he gave special attention to that branch of his profession, and soon became widely known as one of the best surgeons in the state. His reputation as a physician was also far more than local, and, in addition to his home practice, which embraced all the towns adjoining Sutton, he almost always had patients under his care in more distant towns. Professionally he may be said to have belonged to the county rather than to the town of his residence.

In the midst of his professional work Dr. Lane found time for the watchful supervision of his farm. He was a devoted lover of New Hampshire soil, and stoutly maintained that it was the equal of any as a field for progressive and profitable agriculture. In this pursuit, also, he was a close student of books and of nature, and in his efforts to harmonize book farming and practical farming he was a generation in advance of his time. He was fond of experiments, and held many peculiar theories; but these were the result of a careful study of the soil and the crops with which he had to do, and for the most part experience proved them true. At a time when New Hampshire farming was generally the practice of a blind routine, his work was based upon an intelligent study of the natural laws which governed it.

In politics Dr. Lane was an old time Whig, and in later years a Republican. Sutton was a staunch Democratic town, only three Whig votes being cast at its polls for several years. After a while the number of Whigs increased to thirteen, and so remained until the little band, known as "Dr. Lane and his twelve disciples," became politically famous in the region round about. In politics, as in all other things, his opinions were sharply defined and tenaciously held, and he was always well informed upon current political ideas and events. He however had no wish for political position, and little time or taste for political controversy, but it was with pardonable pride that he at last saw his faith triumphant at home as well as in the country at large. In 1866 the Democrats failed of a majority at the annual election, and Dr. Lane was chosen the first Republican representative from Sutton to the state legislature. He was then eighty years old, and the oldest member of that legislature.

The mental characteristics of Dr. Lane were strength and breadth of view, united with accuracy and minuteness in the notice of details. Aside from his profession he was self-educated, but his education was broad and thorough. He had marked literary tastes, and was especially devoted to the study of the English classics. When wearied with professional work he habitually found rest in the reading of standard English literature. But he took nothing for granted. Everything that he read must pass the ordeal of his independent judgment. His books, medical, agricultural, and literary, were dotted along their margins with his notes of approval or dissent.

He possessed rare conversational gifts, and a great store of anecdotes, and having a retentive and exact memory his talk was an instructive and interesting mingling of facts and quotations with his own argument. He was always employed, finding his recreation in study or in a change of work, rather than in rest or sport. Thus the measure of his long life was filled with useful activity.

The genealogy of the Lane family may be traced for several generations, until lost in the traditions of the seventeenth century. The ancestors of Dr. Lane were prominent among the early settlers of Connecticut and New Hampshire. His father, Jesse Lane, was born at Lebanon, Conn., Dec. 1, 1746, and removed to Newport in June, 1766. Feb. 22, 1770, he married Hester Wright, of Killingworth, Conn., who was born Oct. 31, 1750. He was a leading citizen among the first settlers of Newport, serving as representative three years and selectman eight years. He died at the age of seventy-two years.

The family of Jesse Lane consisted of eleven children, of whom Robert was the fifth son and eighth child. Jesse Lane was the second son of Robert Lane, who was born at Killingworth, Conn., in November, 1713. He married Mary Thatcher, of Lebanon, Conn., July 4, 1744, and moved to Newport, N. H., about 1770.

It may be of interest here to state that the charter of the town of Newport,—the original document itself,—was preserved by Jesse Lane, by his son, Dr. Lane, and by Mrs. Smiley, daughter of Dr. Lane, and was kept in Mrs. Smiley's possession till she loaned it to Mr. Wheeler, the historian of Newport, to copy from.

In borrowing and here presenting the foregoing sketch of Dr. Lane it is felt that no apology is necessary, since to the discerning reader it must be apparent that it is much better executed than anything of the kind that the compiler of this work is able to do. An item of personal knowledge and experience, however, if here added, will do no harm. Many years ago, when Dr. Lane was a younger practitioner than almost any one now living can remember him, a baby in Sutton received a terrible burn on the inside of the right hand and arm. There was every indication that the hand was spoiled for life. As it healed the fingers showed an obstinate determination to grow together, and, with the hand, to curl up into a solid ball. Dr. Lane gave his personal care and attention to that baby's hand, and saved it, without even a disfiguring scar, and without any loss of its usefulness. He dressed the burns himself every day for several weeks, and, sixteen days in succession, cut the fingers apart with scissors, and bound each one up separately, and then bound the whole, slightly curved, over a ball of yarn wound soft enough to allow some little movement of the muscles. The complete restoration of that hand was considered a great triumph of surgical skill. It has served its owner well through a long life, and it is the same hand that is now preparing these pages for the printer. Without the care and skill of Dr. Lane it would never have been able to hold a pen, or any thing else.

DR. JAMES R. SMILEY.

William Smiley, the grandfather of Dr. Smiley, was of Scotch Irish origin, born in the north of Ireland in 1728. He was one of the first settlers of Jaffrey in 1758. He had ten children, two of whom, David and Robinson, were the first college graduates from that town. David became a lawyer, married Mary Harkness, whose mother, Elizabeth Putnam, was a relative of General Israel Putnam of Revolutionary fame. They had five children, only two of whom lived beyond infancy,—Mary Harkness, born July 5, 1806, married Oct. 9, 1834, to Dea. David Fosdick, died June 25, 1864, and James Robinson, born in Bristol, June 17, 1808.

When about eight years old James R. Smiley moved with his parents to Plymouth, and two years' later to Grafton. He graduated in 1826 from Kimball Union Academy, and entered Dartmouth college the same year. In his sophomore year he left college, and began the study of medicine under Dr. Renben Muzzey, of Hanover. His studies were interrupted by ill-health, but he resumed them later with Dr. Robert Lane, of Sutton, and received his degree from the Dartmouth Medical School in 1833.

He practised medicine four years with Dr. Lane, and in 1837 married Elizabeth Lane, daughter of Dr. Lane, and removed to Grafton. Here he lived, with two short interruptions, for nearly thirty years, building up a large and successful practice, which commanded the whole of Grafton, and portions of Danbury, Springfield, Canaan, Orange, and Alexandria. He was a thorough medical scholar, a close observer of diseases and their causes, careful and judicious in his treatment of them. He was earnestly devoted to his profession, making himself literally the servant of all if only he might save life or relieve suffering. He received in return, to an unusual degree, the love and confidence of the people whom he served.

Dr. Smiley began at length to suffer from the labors of his profession, and a change became necessary. At the same time the failing health of Dr. Lane required the presence of Mrs. Smiley—his only surviving child. In 1866, therefore, he returned with his family to Sutton, where he spent the remainder of his life in the practice of his profession, and giving attention also to farming.

In 1828 Dr. Smiley received an appointment to the office of deputy sheriff of Grafton county, and to the horseback riding, which its duties involved in those days, he always attributed his restoration to health. He was also about the same time an officer in the old state militia, ranking up from ensign until he held a colonel's commission.

While in actual practice he was a member of the New Hampshire Medical Society, and was a justice of the peace over forty years. He was an early member of the Christian church, organized in Grafton in 1855, and for many years was the superintendent of public schools in that town. In his later life he helped establish a division of the Sons of Temperance, and was one of the charter members of the Sutton Grange.

An old-line Whig and a staunch Republican, he has held intelligent and decided views upon all the great public issues which have entered into the history of the country for the last half century. Dr. James R. Smiley died in Sutton, Oct. 15, 1886.

The daughters of Dr. Smiley were all graduates of New London academy, and all became teachers of high and other schools. Miss Addie has been at two different times the lady principal at New London, her last engagement there covering a period of some fifteen or twenty years.

Robert L. Smiley has been a journalist. Present residence at the homestead in North Sutton.

ROBERT LANE ELA

was eldest son of George W. and Adelaide Lane Ela, and was born at Concord April 17, 1838. When he was five years old his mother died, and he in consequence spent, in part, his childhood with his grandfather, Dr. Lane, in Sutton, and a portion of the time lived with his father in Concord. He was educated at New London, Pembroke, and Meriden academies. On completing his studies at these schools he was employed on his father's extensive farm in Allenstown, and subsequently engaged in the manufacture of shoes in Stoneham, Mass., in which he continued till 1861. At the breaking out of the war he returned to Concord, and recruited a company for the Sixth N. H. Regiment. He was commissioned captain, and was mustered into service Nov. 30, 1861, and served till he was mustered out with his regiment July 17, 1865. In the second battle of Bull Run he was severely wounded in the right arm, and was sent home, where he remained a few months. Partially recovering the use of his arm, he rejoined his regiment, and went with it to Vicksburg, where he was present during the siege and at the surrender. When the regiment, returning to Kentucky, was stationed at Frankfort, Captain Ela acted as provost-marshal. On the reorganization of the army under General Grant he went with his regiment to Virginia, and participated in the Wilderness battles of May 5 and 6; the battles of Spottsylvania, May 12 and 18; North Anna River, May 29; of Cold Harbor, June 3 and 4; then moving across the James river to the front of Petersburg, and engaging in the battles of June 17 and 18, and being under fire every day till the explosion of the mine on July 30. Captain Ela was in command of the regiment at this time, and the Sixth N. H. being one of those selected to charge the enemy after the blowing up of the mine, he led it into the crater, and in the fight which followed was wounded by the explosion of a spherical case-shot in front of him. Both legs were partially paralyzed, causing injuries from which he has never fully recovered. He was afterwards detailed for duty as acting adjutant quartermaster at Concord. He returned to his regiment and was promoted to the rank of major before the close of the war. He was popular with the men under his command, being thoughtful for their comfort and watchful for their interests. As an officer he was prompt and faithful in the discharge of duty, and performed well his part in the war for the Union. After his return from the army he studied medicine and surgery with Dr. Crosby of Concord, and at Dartmouth Medical School, and at Bellevue hospital, New York, taking degrees from both schools. He removed to California some fifteen years ago.

CAPTAIN RICHARD ELA

was the second son of George W. and Adelaide (Lane) Ela, and was born at Concord, Feb. 12, 1840. The death of his mother when he was three years old was the cause of his spending part of his childhood with his grandfather, Dr. Lane, in Sutton, the rest being spent with his father. He attended the public schools, and, later, the academies at Franklin, Pembroke, New London, and Meriden. Having graduated from the latter in 1858, he at once commenced the study of law in the office of George & Foster, in Concord, attending lectures at the Harvard Law School, and was admitted to the Merrimack county bar.

The war broke out, and he entered the service as first lieutenant of Company E, Third Regiment, N. H. Vols., being mustered in Aug. 22, 1861. While at Camp Sherman, at Long Island, he was appointed judge-advocate of the Regiment. The Third Regiment was with General Sherman at Hilton Head, and during their stay of several months sickness visited them, and this, with some being detailed for duty elsewhere, so reduced the number of officers that for six months, with few exceptions, he was the only officer with his company.

In April, 1862, he was promoted to a captaincy. In July following he was assigned to the command of the forces on Pinckney island. He returned in September to Hilton Head, where sickness prevailed to such a degree that, for a time, but one captain besides himself was on duty. His own health suffered severely, and he was given leave of absence for twenty days.

In March, 1863, he was assigned to duty as second in command of provost guard at Hilton Head. He was with the first expedition against Charlestown, and participated in the fighting on Morris island in July 1863.

In April, 1864, the regiment was sent to Virginia to join in the operations against Richmond. Captain Ela's last letter to his father was dated at Gloucester Point, Va.,

Richard Cla

Apr. 30, 1864. Thirteen days later he fell in the charge which captured the first of the outer defences of Richmond. In the desperate charge at Drury's Bluff he led his men to within twenty paces of the enemy's breastworks and died.

The adjutant-general's report says,—“ The fighting lasted but twenty minutes, but in that time more than two hundred of New Hampshire's best and bravest fell dead or wounded. Among the foremost fell the gallant Captain Richard Ela, while in advance of his men, leading them to the charge. He was shot through the brain, and expired almost instantly.” His body was buried on the field of battle.

Captain Ela was a brave and faithful officer. From the time of entering active service the complement of officers was never full. He was always on duty, and the work of absent ones fell on him. Officers and men alike bore testimony to his ability, his faithfulness, and kindly thoughtfulness of others. He was never marked off duty, and at the end of two and one half years of service he was the only one of the original officers who had not been home. Regard for duty was the key-note of his character. Had he lived it would have made him a useful and honored citizen; dying as he did, it made him a hero.

LITTLE.

George Little, the founder of the Newbury, Mass., family of this name, came to this country according to a long current and probably reliable tradition, from Unicorn street, near London bridge, England, in 1640 or soon after, and married Alice Poor, and sailed from Southampton, Eng. in 1638, together with her two brothers, Samuel and Daniel, in the party of Mr. Stephen Dummer. She is believed to have been a native of Wiltshire, b. 1620, d. Dec. 1, 1680. Her husband m., 2d, the widow of Thomas Barnard, of Amesbury, Mass.; 5 children, all of 1st wife, of whom Joseph, 2d child, b. Sept. 22, 1653; d. Sept. 6, 1740: m. Oct. 31, 1677, Mary, dau. of Tristram and Judith Somerby Greenleaf Coffin, who was b. Nov. 12, 1657; d. Nov. 28, 1725. Resided in Newbury, Mass. They had 9 children, of whom George, 3d child, was b. Jan. 12, 1682; d. July 2, 1760: m. Feb. 22, 1711, Edna, dau. of Capt. Thomas and Sarah (Northend) Hale, of Newbury, b. Nov. 21, 1684; d. Oct. 15, 1732: m., 2d, widow Mehitabel Clement, of Haverhill, who d. Nov. 3, 1754. He was a lieutenant in the militia. His name occurs among the proprietors of Boscawen. He removed to Haverhill, and later to Plaistow; 8 children, of whom Thomas, 1st child, b. Oct. 27, 1711; d. Nov. 8, 1766: m. Jan. 12, 1737-8, Mary Bond, of Haverhill, Mass.; b. Oct. 1, 1721; d. June 29, 1801. Thomas Little early removed from Newbury to Haverhill. In 1746 he and his brother Joseph were appointed by Gov. Wentworth to make a plan of Timberlane, now Hampstead. He was a tanner and farmer. His descendants have as a whole been noted for their size of body and physical strength, especially those in the line of his son Bond. In his will, dated Nov. 5, 1766, he makes bequests to all his surviving children. In this will there occurs this particular paragraph: "I give to my well beloved wife my servant-boy, Lot." This Lot Little was a mulatto. He accompanied Bond Little to Deering and to Sutton, and settled in Sutton, and his family is found on our town records. He engaged in farming while living here. Like all other colored persons who were born slaves at that date he was called by his master's name, but it is probable that on reaching maturity he was set free, as was not uncommon in New England, for the good reason that slavery could not be made profitable here. Cases like this of Lot Little, however, were not infrequent, in which the slave, though no longer considered such, still clung affectionately to the family in which he had been kindly reared, and the old feeling of dependence, the natural outgrowth of the peculiar relation of master and slave, made him ready to attach himself to the fortunes of some one member of it. Lot Little m. Susanna Thomas, a white woman. Children, as found on Sutton records,—

In 1775 he removed to the adjacent town of Deering, where he held several town offices, and cleared a large tract of land. In 1786 he went to Fishersfield, where he had made extensive purchases of land. He was a prominent citizen there, served as selectman, was justice of the peace, and, as the records of Sutton show, performed many marriages. At the beginning of the present century he removed with several of his children to Hatley, Stanstead Co., Canada, where he died July 10, 1811. He was a man of much energy, and noted for his great wit and mirthfulness. His wife, of a sedate disposition, was a pious and excellent woman. The town and other records show that he did much work as a justice of the peace in Sutton, and it is thought that he at times had his residence in this town. Children,—

1. Hiram Kinsman Little m. 1856, Susan Harvey, dau. of Capt. Jonathan and Dolly (Harvey) Woodward. Child,—

- (1) Cyrus Harvey, b. Aug. 13, 1859, at Sutton.

After the death of his parents, Cyrus Harvey Little lived in the family of his uncle, Truman Putney. He took a course of study at New Hampton Literary Institution, where he graduated in 1879. He had a high rank in scholarship, and at graduation delivered an address before the Adelphi, one of the literary societies of the institution. In the fall of 1880 he entered Bates college, at Lewiston, Me., but his health, always delicate, failed under his enthusiastic devotion to study, and at the close of his freshman year he was forced to abandon his college course. His health gradually improved, and he was for several years associated with his cousin, Fred Putney, in trade at Sutton. In 1885 he was school-committee in Sutton, and when the town system of schools was introduced he was elected a member of the school-board for three years, and during 1888 was chairman of the board.

Mr. Little is a very ready and interesting speaker in public, in fact seems to have a natural gift of oratory, and has by invitation delivered several Memorial Day addresses, which have been much admired. He is often called on to speak before Grand Army Posts, at fairs, political meetings, &c., and his addresses have often been favorably mentioned by the press. A correspondent of the Independent Statesman, of Concord, in giving an account of an entertainment recently held by Robert Campbell Post, at Sutton, thus alludes to him:

“Cyrus H. Little was the first speaker of the evening, but to a Sutton audience he needed no introduction, his birthplace being in our midst. Left an orphan in early years, we have watched his career with interest, and we can but congratulate him that he has inherited that patriotic love of country which characterized his noble father, Lieut. H. K. Little, of the 11th N. H. Regiment. He tenderly referred to his father, and expressed his interest in all comrades of the G. A. R. He eloquently spoke of the great issues arising from our cruel war, and the responsibility resting upon the nation. His address throughout was marked by the fine scholarship he has so well attained."

A local paper, in a notice of his address on Memorial Day at Warner, thus speaks of him: "Mr. C. H. Little, who gave the address, is the son of one of Sutton's fallen heroes. His remarks throughout were cultured, graceful, and patriotic. He spoke with a strong, pleasant voice, in a simple, manly way, which won all hearts."

Mr. Little is a member of the Free Baptist Church in Sutton, and is also a member of Massasecum Lodge, No. 34, Independent Order of Odd Fellows, of Bradford; also of W. W. Brown Camp No. 1, Sons of Veterans, of Manchester, and has held important offices in both of these organizations. He is now in the employ of the well known firm of Barton & Co., dealers in dry goods, Manchester.

Cyrus Harvey Little is the only child of his father, Hiram K. Little, and grandson of Jonathan Woodward, and great grandson of James Harvey, youngest brother of Dea. Matthew Harvey. With these three generations of honorable ancestry behind him in this his native town, the filial regard he has always entertained for Sutton is in no way diminished by the fact that he has now become a resident, perhaps permanently, of the city of Manchester, where he is taking up new interests and forming new business and social relations. He has been much interested in the success and correctness of this history of the town, being one of the committee appointed by the town, three years ago, to examine the manuscript as then presented, and report thereon. Since going away to live he has also aided much by making important and valuable suggestions, and especially by making much and finally successful effort to collect information on some points that seemed almost beyond the reach of any one.

Clementine B. Abbot m. Sept. 17, 1830, John Reed, of Grafton. Their son, John Reed, spent many of his early years in Sutton. He removed to Minnesota and became warden of the Minnesota state prison, which post he held acceptably several years. He married, and has a family. His mother went to reside with him, and there d. a few years ago.

Thomas Stevens Little, while in this town, lived on the place formerly occupied by Jonathan Woodward.

Hiram Kinsman Little was born in Newbury, N. H., May 27, 1830. He was a descendant in the eighth generation of George Little, who came from London, Eng., in 1640, and settled at Newbury, Mass. His great grandfather, Bond Little, served under Capt. John Hazen in the expedition against Crown Point in 1758, and in 1786 settled in Fishersfield (now Newbury), where he had made extensive purchases of land. He was a prominent citizen there, served in various town offices, and for many years held a commission as justice of the peace.

The subject of this sketch was the son of William and Evaline (Kinsman) Little, and the eldest of a family of four children. Of these Cyrus Baldwin was born Dec. 21, 1831, and died Aug. 23, 1853. He graduated at Frances-town Academy and commenced the study of medicine with Dr. Dimond Davis, of Sutton. A very promising young man, he was cut down in the strength of early manhood. William was born Jan. 31, 1836, and is now a resident of Warner. Thomas was born June 15, 1838, and resides at Peterborough.

The father was a hard-working man and a thrifty farmer. An old friend and neighbor of his says,—“He was the best man to hew timber in town." When young Hiram was about ten years of age his father died. This was a heavy blow to the family. After a few years the mother disposed of the farm at Newbury, and with her young family dependent upon her removed to Manchester, where Hiram attended school. During this time he was very frail, and it was thought that he would not live to grow to maturity, but after a few years his health gradually improved.

In 1850 he went to Sutton, and resided there until his death. He married, in 1856, Susan H., youngest daughter of Capt. Jonathan and Dolly (Harvey) Woodward, of Sutton, and had one child,—Cyrus Harvey, b. Aug. 13, 1859. At Sutton Mr. Little was engaged with his brother, William, in the manufacturing of clothes-pins. He was an influential and popular citizen, and was several times elected a member of the board of selectmen. He was at first a Democrat, but in 1856 joined the Republican party and became one of its leaders in town.

Sept. 4, 1862, he received a commission as second lieutenant of Co. F, 11th N. H. Regiment, of which the gallant Walter Harriman was colonel. He was promoted to first lieutenant Jan. 30, 1863. He participated in the battle of Fredericksburg, the sieges of Vicksburg and Knoxville, the battles of the Wilderness and Petersburg. He was mortally wounded while in the trenches in front of Petersburg, June 20, 1864. His wound was in the neck, rendering him speechless. After that terrible slaughter, with some eight or nine hundred wounded men, he was carried on board the United States floating hospital, New World, then lying at Point of Rocks up the Appomattox, and taken to the government hospital at David's Island, New York harbor, where he died July 4, 1864.

While upon the transport he was recognized by a brother of the Masonic fraternity, Capt. J. M. Durgin, Co. G, 12th N. H. Regiment, of Laconia. Capt. Durgin, at his request, took charge of some few effects that happened to be upon his person, including a beautiful silken sash. September 1, 1882, more than eighteen years afterwards, Capt. Durgin was present at a veteran's encampment at Blodgett's Landing, Sunapee Lake, where the camp bore the name of Lieut. Little. On beholding the name of the camp, memory quickly carried him back to the scene on board the transport, and he says,—“I at once inquired concerning the family of the loyal, patriotic dead, and learned that he had a son, the only survivor of the family, Cyrus H. Little, now arrived at early manhood, and in all respects worthy of so noble a sire; and that on the next day he would be at the camp, where I should make his acquaintance—an event that will be fondly cherished by me while life and reason remain, for I now have the honor and pleasure of presenting to this son the long kept sash, the beautiful badge of a noble father's military honor and fidelity, which he sealed with his life-blood. And now to this much respected and dutiful son I need not say, Accept this sash with the respect and reverence due to so honored a father, and cherish it as among your sacred things. May you preserve it as a sacred emblem, not only of the honored dead, but also of the noblest country on earth rescued from impending ruin.”

Lieut. Little was a brave soldier, and his death was deeply lamented by his comrades. Col. Harriman said of him,—“He was one of the most efficient and valuable officers in the service.” The remains were brought home to Sutton, and the funeral was held in a beautiful grove near the church, on Sunday, July 10th. A large congregation of the friends and neighbors of the deceased were in attendance. He was a member of St. Peter's Lodge F. and A. Masons, of Bradford, and the funeral was conducted with Masonic honors.

His widow, who was in feeble health, grief-stricken by his death, survived him only two months.

It is said that the large old willow near the house grew out of the ox-goad which Mr. Littlehale used in driving his team from Dunstable to Perrystown, planting it in the ground upon his arrival, by the desire of his wife, who wished to have something in her sight which came from her old home, surrounded as it was with willows.

Israel Morrill was for several years after 1807 a resident in Sutton, in the vicinity of Roby's Corner, where he was connected with saw-mills. In 1821 he built a saw-mill near the river bridge at Roby's Corner, which he operated till it was destroyed by the great freshet of 1826, which undermined the mill, making it a total wreck. Mr. Morrill was not further identified with this town. He died while on a business trip to New York, Sept. 19, 1828. For children of himself and 2d wife, Sally Cheney, see Cheney.

NELSON.

Jonathan Nelson, the progenitor of the Sutton Nelsons, came here in 1776. He was fourth in descent from Thomas Nelson, the immigrant, who came, in 1639, from Rowley in England, to Massachusetts, and settled in what was soon after named Rowley. The pedigree line was (1) Thomas, (2) Philip, (3) Joseph, (4) Jonathan.

In May, 1640, Mr. Thomas Nelson was appointed by the court, with Mr. Edward Woodman and Mr. William Paine, to view and settle the bounds between Hampton and Colchester (Salisbury), and make return thereof, which was done.

In the division of his estate, Thomas Nelson gave a double portion to his oldest son, Philip, who thus became possessor of 3,000 acres of land. It was not unusual for the early English settlers in New England who owned large tracts of land to carry out in this manner the English ideas concerning the division of their estates, the aim being, of course, to keep as much of the same entire, irrespective of any especial merit in the favored eldest son. Even down to the Revolutionary period similar divisions of property were occasionally made.

Philip Nelson was a graduate of Harvard college in 1654, and was captain of a Rowley company, fighting against the French at Quebec in 1690.

Jonathan Nelson, who settled in Perrystown, had been in the French war, and his son, Philip, served in the Revolutionary war. In coming to this town, Jonathan Nelson was accompanied or soon followed by both of his sons, Asa and Philip, and they all spent the remainder of their lives in Sutton, and died here, leaving a numerous posterity here and elsewhere. Some ten years ago there were in this town sixteen legal voters by the name of Nelson.

Before coming here to live, Jonathan Nelson had helped to make the first highways in Perrystown. It is said that he helped to hew the logs for the small log structure which the early settlers built somewhere in the present Mill Village, which for a few years served the neighborhood for a meeting-house. He had been deacon of a church in Rowley, and perhaps held the same office in the church in this town, but there is no record in existence to show who were the officers of the early church in Perrystown.

He settled about one fourth of a mile above Mill Village, on the stream. Moses Quimby's lots were 33 and 34, which included most of what is now Mill Village. Jonathan Nelson's was the mill lot, and made the remainder of the village.

Dea. Jonathan was considered a worthy, industrious, and pious man,—not merely a professor, but full of earnestness in the cause of religion. He was kind and pleasant in manner, tall, slender, and remarkably erect in person, even in old age. He died in 1801, aged 77. His wife died in 1802.

Dea. Asa, son of Dea. Jonathan, like his father, was distinguished for piety, industry, and integrity, being recognized as a very exemplary and upright man. In personal appearance, also, he much resembled his father.

Philip Nelson, the other son of Dea. Jonathan, settled on land adjoining his brother, Asa, on the road leading from Newbury to Mill Village. He was greatly distinguished for physical strength and agility, being in his youth a noted wrestler—an accomplishment much esteemed at that date. He died in 1841, aged 86.

Stephen Nelson, a son of an older brother of Jonathan, settled here about 1792, and owned lot No. 14, 2d Div., a little above North Sutton village. He subsequently moved to Salisbury, where he died in 1814. He was connected with some of the early settlers of that town. Several of the settlers of Salisbury and Sutton came from the same vicinity—Hampstead and Kingston—and in early times intermarriages between them were frequent.

ASA NELSON, SR.

Asa Nelson, Sr., married in Warner, and his wife remained at her parents' home till after the birth of their first child, he meantime going back and forth between the two towns, improving his lot, and building his house. Early in the season of 1777 they started for their home in the woods, a walk of eight miles, carrying their child in their arms, and driving their cow before them. Before reaching their house snow began to fall, and, cow and all, they were glad of its shelter that first night, though as yet the door was not hung, and the driving snow kept them busy with the broom to sweep it out. The next day the door and window-shutters were hung, and the cow-stall finished; and the cow lived nicely upon the fodder he had carefully saved, with evergreen-tree boughs to browse upon. In the spring she became the mother of a fine calf, and Mr. Nelson bought a mate for it, giving therefor his wedding shirt of fine linen, and the two calves became his first yoke of oxen. The experience of this young couple was like that of many others in Perrystown. Beginning in this simple, rude way, comfort and independence came in a few years as the result of hard labor and good management.

6. Oren Nelson, first child of Moses and Dolly (Bean) Nelson, was b. Feb. 14, 1819. He lived with his father till he was of age, and in the autumn following, 1840, went to work in a cotton-mill in Peterborough, where he continued till 1845. In the autumn of the same year he returned to Sutton, and in company with J. P. Nelson bought the saw-mill of Albert Richards, and a shop of George Bean, with intention of "roughing out" bobbins for the cotton-mills. In April, 1846, he bought a house of Stephen Woodward, opposite the saw-mill and shop, and in September following married Miss Lucy Goodhue, of Hancock. The water-power not proving sufficient to run the machinery and saw-mill, the partnership dissolved after a few months, and Oren Nelson bought another shop further up on the stream, into which he put the machinery for roughing out bobbins, and about the same time sold his interest in the saw-mill to Ervin Nelson. In 1848 he took into partnership Phineas Crosby, which partnership dissolved at the end of one year, and Mr. Nelson then rented his shop to Crosby, Pressey, Harvey & Co. A short time afterwards, March 11, 1849, the shop took fire and burned down, the building not insured, and very little machinery—two saws and one belt—being about all that was saved.

After the fire had done its work, Mr. Nelson went home and talked the matter over with his wife, who, thankful that he had himself escaped injury, spoke many cheering words. But he was much disheartened—all his hard earnings gone and no money left to start business anew. But friends and neighbors assured him he should have help about rebuilding his shop. The fire occurred on Monday. Tuesday following was town-meeting day, and at that time Mr. Nicholas Rowell passed around among the citizens a paper he had prepared, stating the circumstances and asking help for Mr. Nelson. "Men from every part of the town responded, till the amount of $132, mostly in work, which was better for me than money, was pledged, and the next day, a light snow having fallen, people came from all parts, some with oxen and sleds, and some with their axes, and others with their carpenters' tools, all being prepared for work, with willing hearts and hands. I had a timber lot, and the men went and chopped and drew timber, which other men took and hewed ready for the carpenters to lay out the work. In a few days another shop was raised, and then some brought boards and shingles. Friends in Hancock gave me $25, and with that and a little more I bought some machinery, hired some turning lathes, and in four weeks from the time the old shop was burned down the new one was in running order. God only knows how thankful we have ever been for the kind favors we received in that trying time. Had it not been for the help then received I should never have rebuilt."

This description of that picnic at Oren Nelson's shop is given in his own words, and it is encouraging to read it, showing, as it does, that people are just as easily moved to sympathy now as they were in the ancient days, whenever the occasion for it arises.

In January, 1850, the lease of the company expired, and Mr. Nelson then operated the shops himself successfully for several years. In 1855, in company with Erastus Wadleigh, he bought a saw-mill about one fourth of a mile above his shop, on the same stream. In this mill he labored with much energy, being up in the morning in time to have his help and his cattle ready to commence work at daylight, and in the spring, when the water was high, running the saws day and night, taking his turn with the help in the night work. At the end of one year, finding it gave him too much care, he sold his interest in the saw-mill to Mr. Wadleigh, of whom Mr. Nelson says in the notes already quoted from, "I found Mr. Wadleigh a very honorable man to deal with, ever ready to do what was right." Mr. Nelson goes on to state the amount of business he did at that period. He says,—“I ‘roughed out’ from $1,500 to $2,000 worth of bobbins in a year. The goods were mostly sold to George W. Fisk, of Lowell, and I got some contracts of Parker, of Lowell, and the last two years I ran the shop I sold the larger part of my stock to Joseph Baldwin, of Nashua.”

Finding that he was breaking down, and his wife's health failing, Mr. Nelson sold out his business to Clark C. Carr, who took possession September, 1858, and the following year bought a farm in Stoddard, and a few months later, in company with J. Nelson, Jr., bought out a store formerly owned by Whiting, Scripture & Co. In May, 1860, he moved to Stoddard, and as storekeeper and peddler carried on trade for several years. He sold his farm in Stoddard in 1868, and in 1870 bought a house and land in Hancock, where he has since resided, one of the substantial and most respected men in that town, possessor of a handsome property, acquired by his own industry and business sagacity, aided by the coöperation of his efficient and judicious wife. It will be observed that in furnishing the notes requested for this sketch Mr. Nelson has dwelt more particularly on his business life while in Sutton, than at a later period, doubtless with the idea that his account would furnish, as it does, interesting reminiscences of that period to his surviving contemporaries. He also relates incidents of other persons who suffered from such casualties as are frequent among mills and machinery, one of which, however limited the space left for it, must not be omitted. Henry Flanders, a poor boy, came to work for Mr. Nelson, and live in his family when he was fifteen years old, and remained till he was twenty, when Mr. Nelson sold his business. One morning, when he was oiling the machinery, his sleeve caught on a nut, on the coupling of the main shaft. William Philbrick, seeing his situation, ran instantly and shut the gate, and so stopped the machinery, or else the boy must have been killed. He was wound around the shaft in such a manner that he had to be raised up over the shaft in order to get him down, and when down we expected him to live but a short time. Dr. Lane and Dr. Davis were both summoned, and the former remained with him many hours. He finally recovered, and when the war broke out enlisted, but never came back to Sutton. He was sick in the hospital when his company was discharged, but joined them and died on the way home. He was buried in the sea. Mr. Nelson adds,—“He was one of the best young men I ever knew.”

It is said that he and Stephen Woodward came about the same time, and that they both bought their land of Dea. Matthew Harvey, and settled near each other. Josiah Nichols was born (according to their family record) "March 6, 1755, Thursday." "He married Abigail Long by ye Rev. Mr. Elijah Fletcher, of Hopkinton, Oct. 17, 1785." The Nichols family, both of the first and second generation, may with truth be termed a "Puritan" family, father and son being alike religious, precise, gentlemanly, and conscientious; and, indeed, it may be said of the whole family that they were characterized by strict propriety in dress and behaviour. So careful and orderly were they that they never lost fire in the house for a period of twenty-four years. The velvet vest and breeches that were a part of the wedding suit of Josiah, Sr., when seen by the writer, were ninety years old, and were in a good state of preservation. The elder Nichols always wore his own hair tied and braided in a cue, and was never seen any other way. Almost every man of his generation had his own hair short, and kept a false cue (or braid of hair) laid carefully in the desk all the week, and on Sunday the wife combed her lord's hair and tied on the cue with a ribbon.

The Nichols family were all fond of music. Enoch was a fine performer on the violin, and was the owner of an instrument noted, far and near, for its superior quality. Abigail was skilled on the bass-viol. Dea. Josiah Nichols taught many terms of singing-school, and always led the singing in meeting till extreme old age disqualified him. He was polite and pleasant in manner, though like all conscientious persons, he liked to have people do right according to his standard of right.

Several boys, one after another, served their minority with him, and it is worthy of notice that all of Dea. Nichols's boys were good boys, and proved to be good men. Some people have attributed his extraordinary success in the training of boys to the interest he took in their musical education, fostering in them a taste for music, and thereby supplying them with an agreeable and elevating entertainment for their leisure hours.

Col. Asa Page lived to the age of 86 years. His eyesight was entirely gone for some time before his death, but otherwise he retained his faculties to a wonderful degree. He was able a few weeks before his death to inform the writer concerning some important points connected with the history of the town, from memory, his daughter, Mrs. Dana, carefully writing down the same from his dictation. He possessed the highest integrity of character, and was universally esteemed. Reference to the town records shows him to have presided at town-meetings twenty years; to have served as selectman twelve years; was representative three sessions of the legislature, 1843-'45; state senator two sessions, 1846-'47. In 1827 he was commissioned lieutenant-colonel of the 30th Regiment N. H. Militia.

Among the early settlers of Warner were Moses Colby and his wife Molly (Parsons). They had twelve children, of whom the seventh, Daniel, was b. June 9, 1794; d. Oct. 15, 1820. He was a clothier by trade, and carried on that business in Warner as long as he lived. Daniel Colby m. Betsey Clement, b. in Salisbury, 1794;

d. 1865 in Claremont, dau. of Capt. John Clement, who was b. in Amesbury, March 17, 1753; d. April 12, 1857, in Warner. Daniel and Betsey (Clement) Colby had a family, of whom Hannah, 3d child, m. Enoch Page, Jr.

Being the only son, Enoch Page, Jr., made his home with his father while he lived, afterwards caring for his mother. He received his early education in the schools in Sutton, and later attended Pembroke and Meriden academies, and was a young man of good habits and an earnest student, of sterling integrity, and possessed much executive ability. He taught several terms of school with success. At the age of 23 he was appointed post-master at South Sutton, and continued in office many years, the post-office being in the old tavern building, which his father had remodelled and made a private residence. Mr. Page was a good farmer, and took much pride in the cultivation and improvement of his farm. He also held many public offices, being town-clerk ten years, town treasurer six years, was county ommissioner in 1870, and held several other important offices, for which see record of town officers. He also attended to a large amount of probate business, and settled many estates. Being possessed of good judgment and much knowledge, many persons went to him for advice. Kind-hearted and unassuming in manner, he formed many friendships among all classes. In religion he was a Universalist, though not a member of any church. In politics he was a Democrat till the breaking out of the war, when he became a Republican. He was a magistrate, and also held a commission as officer of militia. He served faithfully in all the offices to which he was elected or appointed. He d. of paralysis, Jan. 14, 1882.

2. Josephine Page was educated at New London academy, and became a school teacher, continuing such till her marriage to George Roby, who is 4th in descent from Samuel Roby, Sr. He enlisted Aug., 1862, and served till the close of the war. Mr. and Mrs. Roby reside in South Sutton village, having purchased, in 1878, the B. Frank Pillsbury estate. Their daughter, Eva Blanche, has been a successful school teacher. Wishing to carry her own education further, she is now pursuing her studies in the classical course at Green Mountain Seminary, Waterbury, Vt.

4. Martha C. Page, resides with her husband, George H. Littlehale, at the homestead in the South village, where lived and died Enoch Page, Sr., and his son, Enoch Page. The mansion has been much improved and modernized. Mr. Littlehale is son of Henry, and grandson of Isaac Littlehale, an early resident in this town. He is a farmer, taking just pride in well kept grounds and well fed stock.

Enoch Page, Sr., for a few years after coming here, lived with his brother Daniel, on Dodge's hill, in the house best known as the Chellis house. Sometime between 1806 and 1808 he built a large house, the second one in what is now the South village. Into this house he moved with his family, and opened a tavern, which he kept for several years. He built also his carpenter-shop, which stood on the site of the present Robbins house. He was an extensive farmer, owning large tracts of land in the south part of this town. He served acceptably in many town offices. Whatever Capt. Page did he did well; his farm was productive and his other business prosperous, and from a humble beginning he by his own exertions gained a competence.

PALMER.

The Palmers of Sutton and Warner are descendants of Jonathan Palmer. Three of his sons—John, James, and Jeremiah—settled early on a Lord Proprietor's lot, No. 8, drawn to the original right of John Moffat, one of the Masonian proprietors. The locality has been known as Palmerstown, or Palmer Gore, and adjoins Warner Gore. Here the three brothers lived to a great age, and reared large families, and it has since been largely occupied by their descendants. Some ten years ago 17 of the 330 legal voters of Sutton were Palmers, and descendants of this Jonathan Palmer, of Warner, who was from Rye and Chester. Some of the Palmers have possessed much mechanical skill. David and Moses, sons of John, made and operated about the first clapboard- and shingle-mill in Merrimack county, nearly seventy years ago. David was also a cooper, shoemaker, and carpenter. John Palmer came from Rye about 1790, and settled in Warner Gore. In 1818 he removed to Sutton.

HEZEKIAH PARKER

was, as his direct descendants claim, the first settler in the north part of Sutton. During the first years of his residence in this region he subsisted almost entirely by hunting the bear, moose, and smaller game with which the forests then abounded. After a while, however, he commenced operations upon a lot of wild land near the base of Kearsarge mountain, not far from what has, at a later period, been the residence of Moses Hazen, Esq.

To clear up and make productive his mountain land was no light task. He, of course, encountered, in common with most first settlers, many hardships, privations, and dangers, in his semi-barbaric life in the wilderness. In fact, he seemed not infrequently to be the subject of more than the ordinary portion of mishap and ill-luck. At one time there arose in that mountain region a furious tempest of wind, rain thunder, and lightning. The wind blew down his house, the lightning killed most of his cattle, and one of his children was supposed to have perished in the general disaster. She, however, made her appearance the next morning, having fled, doubtless, in the belief that the general wreck of matter was about to take place, and sought shelter and passed the night in a hollow log.

Many were the disadvantages under which Mr. Parker labored, many the difficulties to be conquered, even as compared with many other settlers, in the fact that these mountain lands, though rich in native productive power, were hard of access, and stubborn to resist the discipline of the cultivator. At length, however, by hard labor and untiring patience on his part, the strong, rough soil began to "give forth its increase" and yield abundantly, and thus he was able to secure to himself and his family a comfortable home and subsistence during the remainder of his long mortal life.

Though somewhat eccentric in his habits and fancies, Mr. Parker was a deeply religious, highly conscientious man, strictly honest always.

David Peaslee, of Sandown, the first actual settler in Perrystown, came in the autumn of 1767, and was soon followed by his many sons. He settled at what was afterwards called "Peaslee's Corner," at the foot of Kimball's hill, north of the John Eaton residence. The sons all settled in this town. Concerning these men, father and sons, it was said of them by those who knew and remembered them, that they were all men of honor and honesty, were strong, well made, most of them being six feet tall. They all became owners of farms, and made them valuable by their energy and industry; nevertheless they were more fond of hunting than husbandry. Indeed, some of them were perfect Nimrods. It is not improbable that to this special proclivity they are indebted for the honor of being the first settlers in the wilds of Perrystown.

David Peaslee, the father, died probably about 1800. One of his sons gave his age, at the time of his death, as 87. His widow died at a very great age.

Samuel Peaslee, oldest son, married the sister of William, Samuel, and Cornelius Bean, and their daughter Sally was the first-born female child in Sutton that lived to maturity. For her record, see Samuel Andrew. Her grave may be seen in the North burying-ground. The first born male child in Sutton was son of Cornelius Bean, to whom the town voted a gratuity when he should be of age. He, however, died in infancy. The first born male child that lived to maturity was also of the same Bean stock, being son of Samuel, named Joseph.

One who remembered Samuel Peaslee well, said of him that he was a very worthy man, sensible, capable, punctual, and one of the very best of neighbors. The last named qualification meant a great deal in the days of old, when in their isolated, toilsome lives neighbors depended on each other for companionship, as well as for sympathetic help in time of sickness or calamity.

Samuel Peaslee was farmer and brick-maker. He had a brick-yard about one fourth mile from his house on the road from Fishersfield to Warner. He did a good share of town business, as the early records show, reared his large family, and accumulated a good property. He died here at the age of 75 in 1821. His death was very sudden, and occurred near the time of the great tornado.

Peter Peaslee lived near his father's residence, on the side of Kimball's hill, till he moved to New Chester. He died in Bridgewater, at the age of 90 years or upwards. He had no children.

Abraham Peaslee lived on the Samuel Rowell farm. He came here from the Revolutionary war, having served about seven months, being then 17 years old. He resided here till he died, rather suddenly, of fever, in 1815, near the time of the closing of the last war with England, about twenty days after peace was declared, in which important events, having been a soldier himself, he was naturally greatly interested. He was esteemed a good citizen and neighbor, and a man of good judgment.

David Peaslee, 2d, served in the Revolutionary war five years. He was long a resident of this town.

Isaac Peaslee, 1st, settled near Long Pond, not far from the towns of Bradford and Warner, where he died at the age of 66. He reared his family in comfort, and accumulated some property.

John Peaslee, spoken of as a worthy citizen, lived near Jones's mill, where he died. Charles Peaslee, for several years an esteemed citizen resident in the North village, is grandson of John.

The wife of Benjamin Philbrook, Sr., lived to the age of one hundred years. On the day she was a century old her son, Benjamin Philbrook, Jr., held a religious meeting at his house to celebrate the remarkable occurrence. She lived just twelve days after it. She was long remembered by some of our older citizens as a very kind, good woman, who kept possession of her bodily and mental faculties to the very last of her life; she could see and hear well as long as she lived.

Benjamin Philbrook, Jr., her son, was best known as the "tythingman," though, by the way, he had nothing to do with the collection of tithes, his official duties being only to prevent Sabbath-breaking in general, and to preserve order in the sanctuary during worship. He lived to the great age of ninety-nine years, lacking only a few months of his mother's age.

Another of this family, Mrs. Walker, lived to be very aged, as did her sister, Mrs. Joseph Johnson, reaching eighty-six years.

Mrs. Lovejoy, sister to Mrs. Philbrook, the centenarian, followed to this town her son by her first husband, Leonard Colburn being the name of the son. She died here at a great age. She was long remembered as a very capable, good woman. She was a famous carder of wool, and carded for nearly every family in town.

The tendency to extreme longevity seems to have existed in the Philbrook family before the long-lived woman who was mother of Benjamin Philbrook, Jr., came into it. Nathan Philbrook, of Hampton and Sanbornton, died in 1794, at the age of ninety-seven, and consequently must have been born in 1697, some fifteen years before the birth of Mrs. Philbrook, of Sutton. A Benjamin Philbrook died in Sanbornton in 1862, aged ninety-five years.

The Gile genealogy has the following: "Samuel Gile, born at Haverhill, Feb. 13, 1702-3, married Sarah Emerson, probably daughter of Benjamin and Sarah (Philbrook) Emerson. She was born in 1708, and died Sept. 10, 1804. They lived in Chester in 1823, and later in Haverhill, where he died Dec. 1, 1775." The second child of this marriage was Ephraim Gile, who came to Sutton, and in his case the Philbrook blood seems to have asserted itself plainly enough, by keeping him alive ninety years.

PILLSBURY.

The common ancestor of the Pillsbury families of Massachusetts and New Hampshire was William, born in the county of Essex, England, in 1615. He came to Dorchester in the colony of Massachusetts Bay, in 1640, and there married Dorothy Crosby. He removed in 1651 to Newbury, Mass. (now a part of Newburyport), where he purchased a house built by Mr. Edward Rawson, a gentleman of wealth and learning, and the first local judge. This house then purchased of Mr. Rawson has been in Pillsbury hands ever since. It is situated on High street.

The coat of arms of the Pillsbury family, when in England, is described in heraldic terms thus,—“Per fesse, sable and azure; on an eagle displayed argent three griffins’ heads, erased of the second.” Crest, an esquire’s helmet; motto, “Labor omnia vincit.”

The name of Pillsbury was sometimes spelled Pillesberry and Pillsborough.

William and Dorothy (Crosby) Pillsbury had born to them ten children—seven sons, of whom four lived to marry, and three daughters. Moses, second son, b. 1645 or 1646, in Dorchester, m. Mrs. Susanna (Whipple) Worth, widow of Lionel Worth. They had six children, of whom Caleb, third son and sixth child, was b. in Newbury, 1681; he d. 1759; he m. July 27, 1703, Sarah Morse.

Caleb, son of Caleb and Sarah (Morse) Pillsbury, was b. in Newbury, Jan. 26, 1717; d. Feb. 7, 1777-’78. He m. July 8, 1742, Sarah Kimball, of Amesbury, Mass. This Caleb Pillsbury was at the time of his death the representative from Amesbury to the Massachusetts General Court. Of him the author of the History of Amesbury says, “Caleb Pillsbury died this year, 1778, having led a useful and honorable life. He held almost every office within the gift of the people.” He was captain in the French War, and his commission is yet in possession of Caleb G. Pillsbury, of Holland, Vt.

The children of Caleb and Sarah (Kimball) Pillsbury were eight in number, of whom the eighth, Micajah, was b. May 22, 1763. A little brother, named Micajah, b. 1761, but died in early infancy, has occasioned some confusion of dates in the records kept by some of the descendants.

Micajah Pillsbury m. 1781, Sarah Sargent, dau. of Samuel and Sarah (Kendrick) Sargent, of Amesbury, who were married in Amesbury, May 19, 1757, and soon after removed to Kingston.

Micajah Pillsbury moved from Amesbury to Sutton in February, 1795. He lived in this town till his death, in 1802. His wife survived him many years. She d. June 28, 1830. They settled in the southerly part of the town, on the old road leading from South Sutton to Fishersfield (Newbury), near the top of what was called Coburn's or Dodge's hill. Mr. Pillsbury was a respected citizen, and filled several offices of trust. He was frequently called upon by his fellow-townsmen to settle matters in controversy between them, and acted as a sort of judge or referee.

In his early life Stephen Pillsbury was quite noted as a school teacher. In 1815 he was ordained as a Baptist minister, and was settled as such at Hebron, and afterwards at Sutton, Dunbarton, and Londonderry. His ministry extended over a period of about thirty-five years. He was one of the very first persons in the state to espouse the temperance reform movement, and he published an appeal on this subject to the people of the state, and one also to those engaged in the liquor traffic. He neglected no opportunity to do good to his fellow-men. When resident in Sutton he represented the town in the legislature in 1833. While in Londonderry he was elected superintendent of schools several times, and always identified himself with the cause of education. He was one of the most correct, exemplary Christian gentlemen of his day, prudent, amiable, and unselfish, and was much respected by all who had opportunity to know him. He came to be regarded as one of the fathers of the denomination with which he was so long connected. The wife of Stephen Pillsbury was in all respects a very superior woman,—intelligent, refined, and possessed of a very lovable disposition. She gained the esteem as well as the love of all who came in contact with her. Her literary attainments were of a high order. She composed several excellent religious hymns, and contributed many valuable articles for publication.

1. Mary Bartlett Pillsbury, m. Valentine W. Weston, of New York city, who d. in 1863. They had two daughters. She now resides in Lawrence, Kansas.

Mrs. Weston devoted several years of her life to portrait and landscape painting, for which she early displayed a rare taste and talent. Some of her pictures became widely known, and are highly appreciated by good judges. Many years ago the present writer, knowing the distinction which Mrs. Weston had attained as an artist, wrote to her, asking some points in her career, and received in reply the proof-sheets of the sketch of Mrs. Weston in Mrs. Ellet's "Lives of Female Artists," from which might be gathered the desired facts, and a letter commencing,—

"March 25, 1870.

"Please accept my thanks for the honor you propose do me by giving me a notice in your History of Sutton. My life as an artist is all I care to have known. All the vicissitudes by which one gains the discipline of life are not always interesting or profitable to others. Whether I shall ever be permitted to complete my career as an artist, which cost me so much effort in the beginning of life, is now a little doubtful. Anyway, I am content. My two daughters, whose lives would have been sacrificed had I trusted them in their delicate childhood to the care of an ordinary hired nurse, are worth more to me than all the fame and wealth of the world. Still, my longing to be engaged in works of taste and imagination costs me daily a good deal of suffering."

The sketch of Mary Weston occupies ten pages of Mrs. Ellet's book, and, would space permit its insertion entire in this work, we would gladly transcribe the whole, but a few paragraphs must suffice:

"Mary Pillsbury was born in Hebron. In her humble home among the mountains, though surrounded by nature's wild beauty, the child found nothing to suggest to her an idea of what art could accomplish. Nevertheless she saw objects with an artistic perception, and loved especially to study faces. When taken to church she would sit gazing at those around her, and wishing that in some way, of which, as yet, she had no conception, she could copy their features. When she was twelve years old her parents removed from Hebron to Sutton. One day, when her father was going to preach at a protracted meeting at Bradford, she accompanied her parents thither. Near the meeting-house was a tavern-sign, on which was painted in colors, richly arrayed, the figure of the Goddess of Liberty. This work of art was executed by Elder John Gillingham, a Freewill Baptist minister. [Those are yet living who can remember to have listened with interest and pleasure to Elder John Gillingham's occasional preaching at Sutton.] Having obtained a seat near the window during the services, Mary carefully studied this picture, which appeared to her a perfect triumph of art. After she went home she produced a clever sketch of it. From this time goddesses of liberty multiplied in her hands, and became famous in the school and neighborhood. One of them was actually put into a magazine. Caring little for the sports and pleasures of her age, it was Mary's habit to shut herself up in her father's study, and read over and over again the biographies of great men and distinguished women. She kept in advance of all the school-girls meanwhile, and improved in her drawing during the hours stolen from her spinning tasks and the duties involved in the care of other children. Ambitious dreams and longings broke on the monotony of her lonely life ; she resolved to become an artist like those persons of whom she had read, and compel appreciation from the world."

The sketch goes on to relate the different and successive steps by which she finally carried out this resolve to successful completion, and, of her paintings, says,—“Several of her copies have great merit, as her ‘Angel Gabriel and Infant Saviour,’ from Murillo, Titian’s ‘Bella Donna,’ &c., ‘Beatrice Cenci,’ which last has been pronounced an admirable copy. She made a fine copy of Guercino’s ‘Sibylla Samia.’ Mrs. Weston’s flesh-tints are especially natural and beautiful, and she gives a high finish to her paintings. Those from the old masters and others have such wonderful fidelity that her achievements in this line alone suffice to make a reputation. ‘A Witch Scene,’ from ———, is admirable. One of her own compositions is ‘A Scene from Lalla Rookh,’ and she has painted both landscapes and portraits from nature.”

2. Lavinia Hobart Pillsbury m. June, 1852, Samuel Andrew, of Sutton. She was a lady of very amiable disposition, and an excellent wife and mother, and her death was much lamented by all who knew her. They had two daughters.

3. Josiah Hobart Pillsbury m. April, 1853, Elnorah Pervere, who d. 1868. He possessed quite a literary turn, and was connected with several newspapers. In early life he identified himself with the anti-slavery cause, and was a warm supporter of William Lloyd Garrison and Horace Greeley. It may not be out of place here to allude to the fact of the relationship of the Sutton Pillsburys to Parker Pillsbury, so widely known and remembered for the ardor with which he entered into the then unpopular fight against slavery.

Josiah Hobart Pillsbury was one of the editors and proprietors of The Eagle, a reform paper published in New York city, and also of the Anti-Slavery Standard. He was one of the first settlers in the new state of Kansas, where he was elected a state senator, and was a bold advocate of the cause of freedom, and an uncompromising enemy to slavery. He was there a farmer, and also civil engineer. He was elected a county surveyor, was appointed deputy collector of internal revenue, and was post-master at Manhattan, Kan., for several years, and died there Nov. 5, 1879. He was a graceful and instructive speaker.

4. Stephen Pillsbury m. March, 1852, Sarah Annie Bailey, of Andover. He subsequently studied for the ministry, and became an ordained Baptist preacher. He was settled at Dunbarton, Mt. Holly, Vt., Lee, Mass., and at Manhattan, Kan. His health failing him, he was obliged to retire from the ministry, and engaged in mercantile business at Manhattan. They had but one son, who died in Kansas.

5. Edwin Pillsbury m. Feb., 1847, Mary Ann Reed, of New Bedford, Mass. He removed to Kansas and went into trade. He was quite a traveller, both by sea and land, was an observer of things about him, and possessed a fund of information.

6. Ann Judson Pillsbury m. Feb. 26, 1855, William B. Marshall, of Weare. She was a very successful school-teacher for several years. They moved to Kansas in 1855, where she died the following year, much beloved and respected.

7. Adoniram Judson Pillsbury was a fine scholar, and bade fair to make an active and useful man, but for his early death.

8. William Stoughton Pillsbury m., in 1854, Sarah Crowell, of Londonderry. She died in about one month. He m., 2d, April 15, 1856, Martha Crowell, also of Londonderry. He became one of the most sagacious business men of the state. At the age of fourteen he commenced to learn the trade of a shoemaker. At twenty he started a shoe manufactory at Andover. In a year or two he was engaged with a large shoe manufacturing firm at Derry, acting as agent for the firm. When the War of the Rebellion broke out he at once enlisted in his country's service, was commissioned as 1st lieutenant of the Fourth N. H. Regiment, and left for the seat of war in September, 1861. Meeting with a severe accident soon after, he resigned his commission, and returned to his home. Recovering from his injuries much sooner than was expected, he in a few months again offered his services, and was commissioned a recruiting officer for the 9th Regiment N. H. Vols., which was quickly raised, and he took a commission as 1st lieutenant of Co. A. His regiment was at once sent to Washington city, and in a short time was engaged in the conflict at South Mountain, and at the battle of Antietam, in both of which battles the Ninth Regiment distinguished itself, particularly Co. A, under command of Lieut. Pillsbury. Soon after this he was again attacked with a severe illness, and was obliged to resign his commission. He finally recovered his health, and, as soon as he was able, engaged in recruiting men for the army. He again went into his country's service, and was commissioned as an officer in an artillery brigade. He was in command of a battery for a while, and was in command until the close of the war in 1865. Within a few months after his return from the war he was engaged in the manufacture of shoes at Londonderry. His business soon outgrowing his accommodations, caused him to remove his establishment to Derry Depot, where he has succeeded in building up one of the largest shoe manufacturing establishments in the country, employing some five hundred persons.

Mr. Pillsbury has filled various offices of trust and honor. In 1868 he was elected one of the commissioners of Rockingham county, and during his term of office introduced and carried into effect several radical reforms, much to the interest of the county. He has held the highest offices within the gift of his fellow-townsmen, having been elected a representative to the legislature, where he served with honor, taking an active part in its deliberations and debates. In 1877 he was appointed by Gov. Prescott on his staff as aide-de-camp, taking rank as colonel. Mr. Pillsbury has always been identified with the Republican party. He is a member of the Presbyterian church, but is very liberal and tolerant towards all denominations. By close application to business he has accumulated quite a fortune. Of him it may be safely said that he is an honorable, active, high-toned, energetic business man.

9. Leonard Hobart Pillsbury m. Aug. 23, 1862, Evelyn F. Sanborn. At the breaking out of the War of the Rebellion, in 1861, Leonard was a student at Phillips Academy at Exeter. Notwithstanding his great desire to pursue his studies, his love of country was so strong that he felt it his duty to leave the halls of learning, and to offer his services in that country's defence. He at once undertook to raise a company of volunteers. His efforts and zeal were so great that in a short time the company was raised, and he was commissioned a captain of Co. A, of the Ninth Regiment N. H. Vols. He went to the defence of Washington about the time of Gen. Lee's raid on that city and the Northern states. He was in the battle at South Mountain, and also in the terrible battle of Antietam, where he fell wounded. He was at the battle of Fredericksburg, where nearly one third of his command were killed or disabled. He went to Vicksburg, and was engaged in the siege of that city under Gen. Grant. He was a courageous soldier and officer. After the close of the war he received an appointment in the custom-house at New York city. His health failing him, he went on a farm in the state of Kansas. He afterwards accepted the position of U. S. commissioner and assistant clerk of the U. S. District Court at Memphis, Tenn. He left that place when it was visited by the terrible plague of yellow-fever. Coming North he located in Derry, and engaged in mercantile business. He was post-master at Derry Depot for several years. Mr. Pillsbury is a popular public speaker, and an upright, honorable, much respected citizen. He is a prominent member of the Baptist church.

His family is the only one now living here of the ancient and honorable name and lineage of Pillsbury. He is, in fact, the typical New Hampshire citizen,—honorable, intelligent, and useful,—of good estate, and always a gentleman. IV. John Pillsbury m. April 2, 1811, Susanna, youngest daughter of Benjamin Wadleigh, Sr., b. March 23, 1793; d. 1877. Children, b. in Sutton,—

5. Benjamin Franklin, b. March 29, 1831.

John Pillsbury was a prominent man in Sutton, having held the office of representative and selectman, and filled other positions, always acceptably. He was known as Capt. Pillsbury, having held a commission as such in the militia, and later, after he became a magistrate, as Esq. John Pillsbury. His wife was a descendant of Capt. Thomas Wadleigh, of Exeter, a son of Robert Wadleigh, of the same place, who was a member of the provincial legislature. The maternal grandmother of the children of John Pillsbury was Hannah, daughter of Ebenezer Kezar, so noted and so efficient in the earlier years of the town's existence. The descendants of Mr. Kezar are numerous in Sutton and other parts of the United States and Canada. John Pillsbury and his wife were both professors of religion, and led exemplary lives. All the children of this family received a good common school education.

1. Simon W., the oldest, was a remarkable young man, both physically and mentally. He was a superior scholar, being considered one of the greatest mathematicians in the state at the time of his death, which, it was believed, was caused by his close application to study. When attacked by the disease which cut short his life, this ambitious young man was prepared to enter college two years in advance. He gave the first public lecture on temperance ever delivered in Sutton, in a school-house, it being considered, fifty years ago, sacrilegious to use a meeting-house for such a purpose. His success was most marked, for nearly every sober man present in the house was ready to sign the pledge.

2. George Alfred Pillsbury m. May 9, 1841, Margaret S. Carleton, dau. of Henry and Polly (Greeley) Carleton. Children,—

- (1) Charles A., b. in Warner, Oct. 3, 1842.
- (2) Mary Adda, b. in Warner, April 25, 1848; d. May 11, 1849.
- (3) Fred C., b. in Concord, Aug. 27, 1852.

2. George A. Pillsbury, son of John and Susan (Wadleigh) Pillsbury, was born in Sutton Aug. 29, 1816. Having received a thorough common-school education in his native town, and being of an active temperament, he manifested a desire to enter business at an early age. Accordingly, at the age of eighteen years he went to Boston, and obtained employment with Job Davis, a native of Sutton, who was doing a business at that time as a grocer and fruit-dealer, under the Boylston Market. He remained in Boston but little more than a year, when he returned to Sutton and engaged in the manufacture of stoves and sheet-iron ware, in company with his cousin, John C. Pillsbury. He continued there a few years, they doing an extensive business.

On the 1st of February, 1840, Mr. Pillsbury went to Warner as a clerk in the store of John H. Pearson, in which capacity he served till July of the same year, when he purchased the business, and from that time for nearly eight years he was actively engaged either on his own account, or in partnership with others. His partners during that time were Henry Woodman and H. D. Robertson.

In the spring of 1848 he went into a wholesale dry goods house in Boston, and in 1849, having leased the store of Ira Harvey, in Warner, and bought his stock of goods, he returned to that town and engaged in business, where he remained till the spring of 1851, when he sold back his interest to Mr. Harvey, and went out of mercantile business entirely. In 1844 he was appointed post-master at Warner, and held the office till 1849, there being at that time but one office in the town. In 1847 he served the town as selectman, in 1849 as selectman and town treasurer, and in the years 1850 and 1851 he was elected representative to the general court.

During the session of 1851 Merrimack county decided to build a new jail at Concord, the old one at Hopkinton having become dilapidated and unfit for use. The convention appointed Mr. Pillsbury chairman of a committee with full authority to purchase the site, perfect plans, and erect the building. The site selected by the committee was that occupied by the jail in present use. This lot contained ten acres. The general superintendence was given by the other members of the committee to Mr. Pillsbury, and he devoted his whole time to the work, which was not completed till the spring of 1852. At the time of its erection it was considered one of the best buildings of the kind in the state, and the thoroughness of its construction is shown by the fact that now, after some thirty years of service, it will compare very favorably with other like institutions.

In November, 1851, Mr. Pillsbury received from the Concord Railroad Corporation an appointment as purchasing agent for the road, and entered upon the duties of the position in December of the same year, having, meantime, removed his family to Concord. He occupied this position continuously till July, 1875, a period of nearly twenty-four years. During his administration of the office, which was always most satisfactory, his purchases amounted to more than three millions of dollars, and he settled more cases of claims against the road for personal injury resulting from accident and fire than all other officers combined. In all his long term of office his relations with the officers of the road were of the most agreeable character; no fault was ever found or complaint made of his transactions by the management.

During a residence of nearly twenty-seven years in Concord Mr. Pillsbury was called upon to fill many important positions of honor and trust, and he did much toward building up and beautifying the city. He was one of the committee appointed by Union School District to build the high school building, and several other school buildings that now stand monuments of credit to our people. He was interested in the erection of several of the handsomest business blocks upon Main street, and several fine residences in the city were built by him.

In 1864, Mr. Pillsbury, with others, organized and put in operation the First National Bank of Concord. He was elected a member of the first board of directors, and in 1866 became its president, and continued in that office till his departure from the state. He was also instrumental more than any other person in securing the charter and putting in operation the National Savings Bank, in 1867. He was the first president of this institution, and held the position till 1874, when he resigned. During his connection with the First National Bank, that institution became, in proportion to its capital stock, the strongest of any bank in the state, and its standing is equally good to-day. Up to December, 1873, when the treasurer was discovered to be a defaulter to a large amount, the National Savings Bank was one of the most prosperous institutions of its kind in the state, but the defalcation, coupled with a general crash in business, necessitated its closing up. During the first year of its existence it received on deposit nearly seven hundred thousand dollars, and at the time of the defalcation of its treasurer it had nearly one million six hundred thousand dollars on deposit: its total deposits during the first five years of its existence, up to the time mentioned, amounted to more than three millions of dollars. The bank eventually paid a large percentage of its indebtedness.

While a resident of Concord Mr. Pillsbury was identified with most of the benevolent and charitable institutions of the day, and he was always ready to assist by his advice and contributions all organizations that had for their object the relief of the unfortunate and suffering. He was ever a liberal supporter of all moral and religious enterprises. To his generosity the city of Concord is indebted for the fine bell which hangs in the tower of the board of trade building, and for this donation he was the recipient of a vote of thanks from the city council.

The large and handsome organ in the First Baptist church was a gift from Mr. Pillsbury and his son, Charles A., both gentlemen being at the time members of that church.

He was actively engaged in instituting the Centennial Home for the Aged in Concord, made large contributions to aid in putting it in operation, and was a member of the board of its trustees. He also contributed largely to the Orphans' Home in Franklin, and was one of its trustees from the time of its establishment till he left the state.

Mr. Pillsbury was for several years a member of the city council of Concord, was elected mayor in 1876, and reëlected the following year. During the year 1871-'72 he represented Ward Five in the legislature, and in the latter year was made chairman of the special committee on the apportionment of public taxes. In 1876 the Concord city council appointed him chairman of a committee of three to appraise all of the real estate in the city for the purposes of taxation, and in the discharge of the duties thus devolving upon him he personally visited every residence within the limits of the city. The position was a very responsible one, requiring the exercise of sound judgment and great patience, and the report of the committee gave very general satisfaction.

In the spring of 1878 he determined to leave Concord and take up his residence in Minneapolis, Minn., where, with his two sons and brother, he was extensively engaged in the manufacture of flour. Probably no person ever left the city who received so many expressions of regret as Mr. Pillsbury. Complimentary resolutions were unanimously passed by both branches of the city government, and by the First National Bank, the latter testifying strongly to his integrity, honesty, and superior business qualities.

Resolutions passed by the First Baptist church and society were ordered to be entered upon the records of each organization. The Webster Club, composed of fifty prominent business men of Concord, passed a series of resolutions expressive of regret for his departure from the state. A similar testimonial was also presented to Mr. Pillsbury, which was subscribed to by more than three hundred of the leading professional and business men of the city, among whom were all the ex-mayors then living, all the clergymen, all the members of both branches of the city government, all of the bank presidents and officers, twenty-six lawyers, twenty physicians, and nearly all of the business men in the city.

On the eve of their departure Mr. and Mrs. Pillsbury were presented with an elegant bronze statuette of Mozart. Such tributes, however worthily bestowed, could but afford great gratification to the recipient, showing, as they did, the great esteem in which he was held by his fellow-citizens. Mr. Pillsbury is now very pleasantly located in the beautiful city of Minneapolis, having built one of the most elegant residences in the city, and during the comparatively few years he has been there he has frequently been called upon to fill places of honor and trust.

George A. Pillsbury is a member of the firm of Charles A. Pillsbury & Co., of Minneapolis, Minn., the largest flour manufacturing firm in the world, of whose immense operations some brief mention will be made on another page of this sketch of the Pillsbury family.

The foregoing account of George A. Pillsbury is copied from the sketch of that gentleman by Allan H. Robinson, in the History of Merrimack and Belknap County, printed in 1885. The facts which will follow regarding some of Mr. Pillsbury's acts and generous gifts since that date are given either from personal knowledge on the part of the present writer, or are the result of letters of inquiry concerning his later operations. First, however, space should be given to the following extract from The Northwest, a popular monthly magazine published at St. Paul, Minn., which contains a fair account of him after his removal to Minnesota, up to the date of publication in 1885:

"More than a year ago the writer said, in the columns of The Northwest, that if any man in Minneapolis was asked to whom the city chiefly owed its prosperity, there would be no hesitation in his answer, 'The Pillsburys.' Since then the people of Minneapolis have had no cause to change their opinions, while last spring they gave a somewhat emphatic utterance to them by electing one of the members of this remarkable family,—the Hon. George Alfred Pillsbury,—to the mayoralty of the city by an overwhelming vote. A liking for hard work and a belief in its virtues seem to have been early rooted in the Pillsbury family, for in England, more than two centuries and a half ago, they bore for their motto the words, Labor Omnia Vincit. But in all the generations of the Pillsburys since then who have lived and worked, from English Essex to Massachusetts, New Hampshire, and Minnesota, it may be doubted whether any one of them has better deserved to bear the motto than the present mayor of Minneapolis. It was Lord Brougham who was advised by a friend 'to confine himself if possible to the work of five ordinary men,' but his toil-loving lordship himself might have been envious of the amount of downright hard work which Mr. Pillsbury has got through in his life. Setting his early life aside for the present, the mayor has only been in Minneapolis six years as yet. During that time he has been president of the Minneapolis Board of Trade, of the City Council, of the Homoeopathic Hospital, and the Minneapolis Free Dispensary, and is still president of the Chamber of Commerce, of the Pillsbury and Hurlbert Elevator Company, of the Board of Water-Works, of the St. Paul and Minneapolis Baptist Union, and the Minnesota Baptist State Convention, vice-president of the Minnesota Loan and Trust Company, member of the Board of Park Commissioners, director of the Northwestern National Bank, the Manufacturers' National Bank, the Minneapolis Elevator Company, and a trustee of institutions innumerable. All this besides mayor of the city! Here's a small trifle of work! Eleven trusteeships and nine presidencies is a simple coming-in for one man.

And in spite of the diversity of his duties, there has not been one post among all those which he has filled wherein he has failed to win the heartiest respect and approbation of all who have been brought into connection with him. The more difficult the kind of work he has to do, the more he appears to be able to give his undivided attention to each one. Mr. Pillsbury has shown a capacity, almost a genius, for hard and honest work totally incomprehensible to most men. This alone would compel the respect of his fellow-citizens, but by his generosity, his warm-heartedness, and unostentatious charity he has also won their affection. No stranger could read his public record without admiring the man who could live such a life; but it is a stronger tribute to his character that no acquaintance can see the details of his private life without his admiration growing to something warmer. Mr. Pillsbury is yet only sixty-eight years of age, and it is safe to predict that Minneapolis will yet be grateful to him for much good work done for her, and many benefits received at his hands."

Some four or five years have elapsed since the above was written, and Mr. Pillsbury is still active and vigorous, showing no sign whatever of diminished capacity or executive ability. In 1885 he was chairman of the committee to build the Minneapolis Chamber of Commerce Building, one of the finest buildings of its kind in the Northwest.

In 1886 he was chairman of the committee to build the Baptist church in Minneapolis, the largest and most costly church building west of Chicago, and but few finer ones in the country. Mr. and Mrs. Pillsbury and their two sons, Charles A. and Fred C., at their own expense, placed in this church the largest and best organ in the city, at a cost of eight thousand five hundred dollars.

Mr. Pillsbury has always been a friend and supporter of the cause of education, and while a resident of New Hampshire he contributed liberally for that cause. He was a member of the board of education of Concord for several years. He contributed liberally towards the endowment fund for Colby Academy at New London. Since he became a resident of Minnesota he has taken the same interest in the cause of education. He has served on several committees appointed to build school-houses, and has been elected member of the board of education. He has also been much interested in an academy located at Owatonna, Minn. He has built at his own expense a ladies' boarding hall connected with the academy at a cost of $30,000, besides other liberal contributions for the benefit of the same institution, the name of which was two years ago changed by the legislature of Minnesota from the "Minnesota Academy" to "Pillsbury Academy," in honor of Mr. Pillsbury. An extract from the catalogue for 1889-'90 will give more fully the details of the work he has done for it. It is under the head of "Buildings." "Pillsbury Hall is 128 feet long, and has three stories above the basement. It is heated with steam, and contains parlors, dormitory, boarding department, bath-rooms, and gymnasium, and furnishes to young ladies the comforts of a well appointed Christian home. This building was erected in 1886, and is the gift of Hon. George A. Pillsbury, whose name it bears. The new academy building, erected in 1889, at a cost of $40,000, is 122 feet long and is three stories high above the basement, with tower 140 feet high. It contains recitation-rooms, library, and reading-room, offices, chemical laboratory, gymnasium, bath-room, study-room, chapel, and a spacious auditorium. It is lighted with gas, and is a most commodious school-building. This building is also the gift of the academy's chief benefactor, Hon. George A. Pillsbury."

At the annual meeting of the American Baptist Missionary Union, held in Minneapolis in 1888, Mr. Pillsbury was elected its president, a highly honorable position. This organization has its head-quarters in Boston, Mass. It has in charge all the foreign missionary work of all the Northern and some of the Southern states, distributing annually nearly half a million dollars for mission work in foreign fields by this denomination.

Borrowing again from the History of Merrimack County, we will add the closing paragraphs of Mr. Robinson's sketch of Mr. Pillsbury: "George A. Pillsbury is a gentleman of great personal magnetism, genial and affable in manner, and possessed of entertaining and attractive conversational powers. Warm-hearted and generous, he was ever ready to respond to calls of distress, not only with good counsels but with more substantial aids, as many an unpublished charity in Concord will attest. All who approached him were sure of a kindly greeting, and any petition for favors received a patient consideration and courteous reply. With the young he is very companionable, and with his conservative and liberal views of life he is able to impart much valuable advice and information. His mind is well disciplined and balanced, and his habits are very systematic. He is possessed of sound practical judgment, and great executive ability. Quick to grasp a point he seldom errs in action, and by a faculty of reading character he seems always ready to meet any emergency that may arise. In early life he received a thorough business training, and in his dealings with men he is straightforward and liberal. In his enterprises he looks beyond the present, and results seldom disappoint him. In public life his administration of affairs has always been most satisfactory and able, and has won for him the esteem of all with whom he comes in contact."

It will be observed that the foregoing notices of Mr. Pillsbury are copied from books or periodicals already in print. The compiler here claims the right to add a final paragraph. And the first thought that suggests itself is, that he is a man concerning whom it would be easier, though far less pleasant, to select the materials for an obituary than for a biographical note while he is living. There is so much in his career that merits attention, his attainments and achievements, as well as his benefactions, have been so great and so important, that even the small moiety of them that can be mentioned in this brief sketch seem almost like an exaggeration.

When a man is dead, taste and common custom no longer forbid the free and full expression of the public estimate of his superior qualities, however high that estimate may be, or however appreciative the recognition of his merits. But to discuss his qualities while he is yet their living possessor, and their outgrowth into deed and character, seems to have in it a degree of impertinence, and the higher his character, the finer his qualities, the greater seems the impertinence.

Still, there exists no good reason why justice, at least, should not be done to the living as well as to the dead. In the case of Mr. Pillsbury, there is no need to credit him with the possession of qualities or faculties well adapted to the accomplishment of great good to himself and the world at large, his capacities having already passed triumphantly through the test of successful achievement.

In his many generous gifts he has gone far beyond the limits of ordinary benevolence, and in his furtherance of great schemes for the support of religion and education, those mighty conservators of the peace and well-being of society, he has attained to the height of philanthropy. And yet, with all his great successes, no poor man whom he ever meets will say that he ever received from Mr. Pillsbury a haughty or a cruel word, to remind him painfully of the great difference in the bestowment of the gifts of fortune.

It is a great thing that a man should be able by his own good deeds, as Mr. Pillsbury has done, to place himself above all praise, and above all need of it; but it is perhaps a greater thing, because rarer, that one should have grace given him so to comport himself that he should escape so almost entirely as he seems to have done the "envy, hatred, and malice, and all uncharitableness" which usually start into most intense and stinging activity against every one who becomes exceptionally fortunate.

But perhaps the secret of his popularity lies not so much in a careful policy, or even the possession of qualities which, wherever he has been a resident, have always brought him easily and conspicuously to the front, as in his following out of the precept of the wise man (Prov. 4, 23), "Keep thy heart with all diligence, for out of it are the issues of life."

Simply because he has not, like so many rich men, allowed prosperity to harden his heart, its life issues flow out wide and clear, a constant gratification to himself, and a help and a blessing to many others whose earnest hope and desire is that he may long be spared, with his present active participation in all that concerns the good of humanity, and his own keen enjoyment in the many sources of interest and happiness with which his life abounds.

Most of the foregoing extracts and comments were arranged some two years ago. With much pleasure and pride the compiler now unfolds the manuscript to add thereto the record of three more generous gifts of Mr. Pillsbury, by which he makes the year 1890 a memorable year for three different localities in New Hampshire, in each of which he has at some time had his home. That so much good is to be done is sufficient cause for joy and thankfulness, and Sutton people may well take pride in the thought that the man who does it all is a native born son of their town. In the course of his lifetime a man may have as many places of residence as his choice and convenience may determine. In the case of Mr. Pillsbury, four or five different places divide between them the honor of having been for a longer or shorter period his place of residence. But since, live long as he may, a man can never have more than one birthplace, and since Sutton and none other was the mother of the distinguished Pillsbury brothers, so widely known, east and west, for their many and noble charities, she does not intend to allow the fact of her maternity to be forgotten.

To Concord, George A. Pillsbury gives, at a cost of $60,000, a free hospital; to Warner, a free public library; to Sutton, a soldiers' monument. Not content with giving the money to pay for all these, he, with characteristic business sagacity, makes sure that his plans and wishes concerning them are fully carried out by personally attending to the erection and construction of the same. All these gifts seem to be most wisely planned. The need and the importance of a free hospital to a city like Concord is apparent, without any argument. A free public library would be most thankfully accepted by any town not so provided. As for the soldiers' monument, it is safe to say that, if Mr. Pillsbury had not given it, there would never have been one in Sutton, deeply as all the people have felt that common justice to the soldiers who suffered in the war demanded such an appreciative and enduring recognition of their services and sacrifices. All that the government does in the way of requital, by occasionally pensioning their heirs, will not many years prevent the names and the memories of the dead soldiers themselves from slowly sinking into oblivion, such as now buries up the memory of most of the soldiers of the Revolution. To rescue from this oblivion the memory of the dead soldiers of Sutton is the design of the generous and patriotic donor of this monument, and every loyal heart will forever feel grateful to Mr. Pillsbury for doing for Sutton, not what she would not, but what she could not, on account of its great cost, do for herself. To the surviving relatives, and to the descendants to the remotest generation of those whose names are inscribed on this monument, it will be a source of pride and gratification to see them thus forever honored.

No more fitting or graceful compliment could any husband ever pay a most excellent wife than Mr. Pillsbury has done in bestowing upon the new hospital the name of Margaret Pillsbury. Bearing her name, and fostered as it doubtless will be by her interest, it can hardly fail to be a successful and useful institution. She is a lady possessed of much kindness of heart, a sincere friend, generously responsive to every appeal for sympathy or help, and yet with such strict conscientiousness, and keen penetrative comprehension of character and motive, and ability to grasp and rightly appreciate all the points in any case brought before her, as has caused her judgment to be much valued, her counsel sought, and her influence strongly felt in all matters of church or society wherever she has lived. The following, taken from the Concord Evening Monitor of July 25, 1890, shows the spirit in which the people of that city accept Mr. Pillsbury's great gift :

"MR. AND MRS. PILLSBURY.

"The earth's best product is noble manhood and womanhood. Hon. George A. Pillsbury is a noble man. There is no mission higher than the alleviation of human suffering. His generous gift to our people of a general hospital is a splendid beneficence that touches every individual heart here with profound gratitude. It is an institution that comes home alike to the needs of the educated and the uneducated, the rich and the poor, the high and the low. He could have done nothing better for us. Everybody in this community is glad and thankful that such excellent provision is to be made for the care of our sick and injured, and everybody here is deeply grateful to the very considerate and kindly gentleman, our former fellow-citizen, for the great general good that he is doing.

"As to the institution, our people will take early and appropriate opportunity to express formally and unanimously their earnest appreciation. As to the public-spirited and noble-souled benefactor himself, and his estimable wife, Margaret, for whom the elegant and commodious new hospital is to be named, there is only one sentiment,—Heaven bless Mr. and Mrs. Pillsbury !

"Mr. Pillsbury, with comparative ease, might have written his personal check for $60,000, and turned it over to a citizens' committee, to found and endow a capacious modern hospital ; but this modest, sturdy man with the great warm heart, and his lovely Christian wife, left their sumptuous home in Minneapolis, that they might come among their old friends and neighbors in this state, and have the pleasure of doing, as it were, with their own hands, the grand public work that they are accomplishing. He brought his own architect; he selected and purchased the lot of his choice for the building; and he will personally superintend its construction. A man of superior practical judgment and experience, nobody could do it better. His is not only the generosity to give, but the self-sacrifice to make the gift the practical success that he desires it to be. Within the past few days he has been elected president of a great Western bank, with hundreds of thousands of dollars of surplus to invest, but he telegraphed back that his work here will require his personal attention for the present. Positions of honor and trust have been thrust upon him, but in noiseless charities he finds his greatest pleasure, his chief pursuit. Office and fame have no allurements for him. He is one of the few capitalists who is perfectly satisfied with his wealth. He enjoyed its honorable accumulation; he will now take equal pleasure in its generous and discriminate expenditure. Nobody covets his riches; everybody wishes that he had a still larger fortune to give away in public bequests. He and his wife are here now, with no possible object except to do good and to renew old friendships and associations, and to pay respects to the people who delight to respect and honor them.

"We only seldom have such visitors. Think of it,—a happy, handsome married couple, so advanced in years, and yet so remarkably well preserved; so wealthy and yet so unostentatious; so distinguished and yet so humbly affable and generous; so blest with this world's favors, yet possessed of such excellent native sense; so public-spirited and beneficent, so charitable, kind, and tolerant towards all,—they present indeed a rare and touching sight, one to be cherished in our recollections, beloved and welcome sojourners in our peaceful and beautiful city.

"An institution is defined to be the lengthened shadow of one man; George Alfred Pillsbury will have many worthy shadows, and long after he and his gracious wife have gone from us, perhaps forever, fevered lips of invalid sufferers will whisper prayers of thankfulness that will be encomiums on this good man and woman more eloquent and touching than any we could pronounce. Many who are now well and strong may fall victims to the afflictions of life, and have occasion from disease or accident to feel by personal experience the active goodness of Mr. Pillsbury in presenting to this municipality the splendid city hospital that he is now building for our people."

1. Charles A. Pillsbury is the oldest son of George A. and Margaret S. Pillsbury. He was born in Warner Oct. 3, 1842. He entered Dartmouth college in 1859, at the age of sixteen years, and graduated in the class of 1863. Soon after his graduation he went to Montreal as a clerk for a wholesale firm, but in a short time became a partner in another wholesale establishment. He remained in Montreal some three years, and then went to Minneapolis, Minn., where he engaged in the manufacture of flour, and has become the head of the largest flour manufacturing firm in the world.

Mr. Pillsbury has confined himself almost exclusively to this branch of business. He has, however, against his wishes, been prevailed upon to accept some political offices. He has been elected to the state senate several times, and in one or two instances there was not a vote cast against him. He has been urged by his party to become a candidate for representative to congress, and for other offices the highest within the gift of the people of the state, the nomination to which would be equivalent to an election, but has positively and unequivocally declined to accept such nomination and election.

While a member of the state senate he has nearly always been placed at the head of the most important committee,—that of finance. He is everybody's friend, and nearly every one is his friend. He is a very liberal giver to all objects of a religious and benevolent character. He has, without doubt, within the last twelve years contributed more of his means for these objects than any other person in Minneapolis. His charities, however, are not by any means confined to his own neighborhood or state, as the following letter will show. It was found copied in the Lynn, Mass., papers, immediately after the great fire in that city, and is here presented as affording a good illustration of the nature and disposition of the man who wrote it, and it is felt that it merits permanent preservation in a book as well as almost any document that ever was penned. The circumstances were these: Late in November, 1889, occurred in Lynn a very destructive conflagration, which, by burning up their homes as well as the shoe factories in which they earned their living, in a few hours reduced thousands of people to absolute destitution. Charles A. Pillsbury was at the time on a visit to friends in New Hampshire, but such a thing as a personal appeal to a man who was not, and never had been, a resident in the city, nor even in the state in which the fire occurred, was not, of course, thought of. The cry of distress, however, soon reached his ears, and the letter to his agent was at once written.

Chas. A. Pillsbury.

Goffstown, N. H., Nov. 28, 1889.

Breed & Co., Wholesale Flour Merchants :

Please supply the mayor at our expense with all the Pillsbury's Best he may require to supply the immediate wants of the poor people burned out in the late fire.

Have telegraphed him to call upon you for it.

C. A. PILLSBURY.

No one can tell how timely was the gift, nor how thankfully it was received, any better than the writer of this, a resident in Lynn, and one who, in behalf of some of the sufferers, had occasion, more than once, to visit the Relief Committee's rooms. It was pitiful to see there the throng of respectable looking persons waiting, all numbered, in rows, till each one as his number was called passed eagerly up to the desk, to receive there the order for his weekly bag of flour or other provisions. But this was after some system in the distribution of the supplies of food was introduced. At first the Lynn authorities, entirely inexperienced in dealing with a calamity of such magnitude, and utterly confused and overpowered by the immense number of calls for immediate help, had failed to attend properly to the distribution of the flour, and, as a result, many persons had been allowed a whole barrel each, while many more had received none, thus defeating the purpose of the donor, to supply the immediate wants of as many persons as possible.

Some men would perhaps have found in this failure to carry out his expressed design an excuse for withdrawing any further aid. Such, however, was not the case with Mr. Pillsbury. How much flour in all was given, the writer has not been informed. This, however, is known, that, when the immense quantity of 500 barrels had been given away the agent wrote to Mr. Pillsbury asking further instructions, and received the order to let the authorities have more flour, though at the same time recommending that equality in the division of it which they had by this time themselves learned the need of.

As a business man Charles A. Pillsbury is not excelled by any one in the country. Commencing with nothing, he has succeeded in building up an immense business. The members of the firm of C. A. Pillsbury & Co. are George A. Pillsbury, his brother, John S. Pillsbury, and Charles A. and Fred C. Pillsbury, who are the sons of George A. Pillsbury. This firm stands at the head of all the flour manufacturing firms of the world. They own three mills, and the capacity of the three is 10,500 barrels of flour each twenty-four hours. It requires on an average more than 40,000 bushels of wheat per day to supply these mills, or more than 12,000,000 bushels per year, which is equivalent to the production of one million acres of land, or of thirty-two townships of land as large as the town of Sutton, and every acre sowed with wheat. It requires about 100 cars per day to supply these mills with wheat, and about the same number of cars in which to ship the flour and offal. If the whole product of these mills were to be sent to Boston or New York, it would require five trains of cars each day, and fifteen hundred cars would be on the road continually. The amount of flour and offal sold each year is from $12,000,000 to $18,000,000, depending on the price for which the flour is sold.

The reputation of the Pillsbury flour is world-wide. It is sold in every state in the Union, and in most of the foreign markets. It is as well known in Great Britain and some other countries as it is in the United States. This firm uses only the celebrated Red River of the North wheat, which contains the largest proportion of gluten, and consequently contains more nutriment than any other wheat produced in the world. In order to secure a sufficient amount of this superior wheat to run the mills, and to use only the very best quality, they have built about one hundred and forty elevators and store-houses in the valley of the Red River of the North with a capacity of about 12,000,000 of bushels, thus enabling them at all times to secure the choicest quality of wheat, which gives them an advantage over all other mills. The cost of these elevators is about one million of dollars.

The firm of J. S. Pillsbury & Co., consisting of John S., George A., and Charles A. Pillsbury, own about 250,000 acres of pine land, located in the northern portion of the state. This territory is equal to eight townships of land as large as the town of Sutton. They commenced operating on these lands some two years ago. They have a saw-mill located on the line of the Northern Pacific Railroad, at Gull river. This mill will saw 125,000 feet of lumber in ten hours, besides a proportionate amount of shingles, laths, &c.

(3) Fred C. Pillsbury graduated at the Concord high school in 1870. He at once left for Minnesota, and became a clerk in the hardware store of his uncle, John S. Pillsbury. For about fourteen years he has been the junior member of the firm of Charles A. Pillsbury & Co. He has for a few years been president of the Minneapolis, Lyndale & Lake Minnetoka Railway. He is possessed of excellent judgment, and is a sound, conservative business man. He m. Oct. 19, 1876, Alice T. Cook. Children,—

4. John S. Pillsbury received a common-school education. At the age of sixteen he went to Warner as a clerk for his brother, George A., who was engaged in mercantile business in that town. He afterwards, in the year 1848, entered into a business partnership with Hon. Walter Harriman, a native of the same town. It is a singular fact, that each of these men became governor of the state in which he made his residence, Mr. Harriman of New Hampshire, and Mr. Pillsbury of Minnesota. After leaving Warner Mr. Pillsbury was for some time in trade in Andover, and also in Concord.

In 1854 he visited several of the Western states, and finally in 1855 established his home at the Falls of St. Anthony, in Minnesota. Here he went into the hardware trade, and by his energy and fair dealing built up the largest business in that line in the state. He took an active interest in the affairs of the territory and state of Minnesota. Mr. Pillsbury has never been a politician. His popularity, however, in consequence of his business reputation, was such that he has frequently been called upon to occupy positions of honor and trust. From 1863 to 1875 he was continuously elected to the state senate, notwithstanding the fact that a majority of his constituents belonged to the political party opposed to him. No man exerted a wider influence in the legislature of his state than he did. He was a wise counsellor and a safe legislator. In 1875 he was elected governor of the state, and again in 1877 and 1879, the term of office being two years. This is the only instance in which any man has been elected governor of Minnesota more than twice. No man has ever occupied the governor's chair who has had the confidence of the people to the extent that Mr. Pillsbury has done. During his term of office the grasshopper scourge visited the state. In some portions the crops were entirely destroyed, causing great suffering. During the cold winter months Mr. Pillsbury visited in person, incognito, those afflicted districts, in order to ascertain the condition of the people. He found them in great distress, hundreds of families being destitute of food, clothing, and other necessities of life. He at once, at his own expense, relieved their present needs, and upon his return home published to the people the story of the destitution and suffering he had witnessed. He offered to personally take charge of contributions of food and clothing that should be made, and to forward the same to the suffering families. The people had so much confidence in his representations that they at once began to send in liberal contributions of money and articles of food and clothing, thus meeting his appeals in the most gratifying manner. The governor and his excellent wife were kept busy almost night and day for some time in packing boxes of clothing and other material to be forwarded, until he gave notice that no more was needed. From that day to the present time Mr. Pillsbury has been regarded by those people as their friend, and they have never forgotten his kindness and his sacrifices for them.

Mr. Pillsbury has always been a friend to the poor and laboring classes: the worthy poor have never appealed to him in vain. He is a generous and public-spirited man, and has done a great deal, and perhaps as much as any one, to advance the interests of the state.

At the breaking out of the War of the Rebellion Mr. Pillsbury lent the weight of his influence in raising men to enter the service of the country. He was mainly instrumental in raising three regiments of volunteers. In 1862 he, with a few others, raised and equipped a mounted company for service against the Indians. At a time when a large number of our efficient men had gone to the war, these Indians suddenly banded together, and at once commenced to massacre the whites. In a few days they put to a cruel death fifteen hundred defenceless men, women, and children.

In 1863 Mr. Pillsbury was appointed agent of the State University. At that time the institution was by bad management hopelessly, as it was at that time thought, in debt, and but for Mr. Pillsbury and one or two others the property would have been lost by foreclosure and judgments. Mr. Pillsbury at once went to work to compromise matters, and to save the institution if possible. After a long and tedious process he finally succeeded in settling up its affairs, and thus saving it. He has ever since been identified with the university as president and agent. It is conceded by all who had a knowledge of its affairs that had it not been for his efforts Minnesota would not to-day have such a magnificent institution of learning.

In the year 1889 further action was taken on this important matter, accounts of which were extensively current in the public print. The following are selected for insertion here, the first from the Keursarge Independent and Times, of Warner, April 26, 1889, and the second from the Minneapolis Tribune, of June 3, 1889:

“EX-GOVERNOR JOHN S. PILLSBURY.

“The Minnesota papers, the Pioneer Press, Star, Tribune, Journal, and others, have strong words in praise of a notable event which occurred in St. Paul, April 16th.

“Twenty-six years ago, John S. Pillsbury, a native of Sutton, and for a time a resident of Warner, as a citizen of Minneapolis became interested in the University of the State of Minnesota. It was in 1851 that the first University land grant of 46,000 acres was received, and six years later buildings were erected by mortgaging the land to raise the money. Forty thousand dollars came in this way, and mortgage bonds on the campus of twenty acres, and on the proposed buildings, brought $15,000 more. That was not enough, and a big floating debt was the result, and judgments, frequently obtained during the succeeding years, left the institution sadly in arrears in 1864. The bonds had been used for banking purposes, the banks had failed in some instances, and the bonds had been sold at 16 and 18 per cent. The prospect of a university that would ever amount to anything was small.

"In 1864 Mr. Pillsbury had been elected to the state senate. He was familiar with the affairs of the university, and he made it his business to help it out of its financial embarrassments. Judge Berry, also one of the regents, was a member of the senate. Together they tried to work out plans for a settlement of the university's financial difficulties. Judge Berry had considered the university lost, but was willing to do all in his power to help it out, if a way could be found. The two prepared a bill, naming three men to settle up the affairs of the institution. The men were Mr. Pillsbury, John Nichols, and Captain O. C. Merriman.

"When the agricultural grant of land was made, he secured its union with the university, and thus added greatly to its beneficent results. As governor, he gave them the wisest and most effective help. Both are doing magnificent work, and more and more winning favor in that state, and commanding the approval of the best judges in the country. Recently it has become necessary to erect another hall devoted to science. The estimated expense was $250,000. The legislature was asked for that amount, and gave only $100,000. The regents were in great trouble. A meeting of officers and friends was called in a committee-room of the state-house. There were present regents Keihle, Sibley, U. S. Senator Davis, and others, together with members of the legislature. The trying situation was considered but solved by the words of Gov. Pillsbury, who closed as follows :

" 'Gentlemen, I have thought this matter over carefully, and I have made up my mind that the work must go on. And I'll tell you how I've concluded to make it go on. If this legislature will give me some kind of an assurance that that state university shall forever remain one grand undivided institution, so that I can go down to my final rest with a feeling of security in this respect, I will donate the $150,000 necessary to the completion of the hall of science.'

"One of the papers adds,—The announcement was received with the wildest applause, which continued for some minutes. Gov. Pillsbury was deeply affected, and President Northrup sat by with tears coursing down his cheeks unheeded. It was a most remarkable scene. Enthusiastic remarks were made by members of the legislature, and their solemn pledges were given that they would do everything in their power to keep the University of Minnesota entire. Resolutions committing the state to the policy desired by Gov. Pillsbury were ordered unanimously. Congratulations were showered upon Gov. Pillsbury by all present until that gentleman was entirely overcome and withdrew. Gen. Sibley exclaimed, as he grasped the hand of the generous ex-governor,—‘Glory enough, for one day, my friend,’ and the rest were ready to exclaim, ‘So say we all of us.’

“New Hampshire may well congratulate herself on having sent such a man to the West to rear and maintain the institutions of liberty and education.”

“The names of George Peabody, whose monument may be seen in Harvard and Yale, and men who within the last few years have done great service to humanity by unprecedented gifts, especially Otis, Hand, and Slater, all of Connecticut, will readily occur to you; and I am sure that as I speak all of you are thinking of the recent noble gift to this university by our friend and neighbor, Gov. Pillsbury.

“It is not the first time that he has shown his generous interest in this institution; indeed, it is owing to him that the university exists at all, for by unwearied efforts of his the university was rescued from hopeless debt, even before it was organized for the work. During all the years in which that able scholar, Dr. Folwell, the first president of the university, was laying its foundation and was wisely planning its educational work, Gov. Pillsbury was the sagacious counsellor, the earnest friend, the faithful regent, watching over the financial interests of the institution with ceaseless vigilance, ever ready to sacrifice his time, his business, and his ease to its welfare. By his kindness and charity in his daily life, by his public spirit, his wise services to the state in both legislative and executive positions, his free-handed benevolence to the suffering people of the state in a time of great trial, and his firm and determined stand for the honor of the state in a time of great public temptation, he deserves to be remembered with gratitude by the people of this state to the remotest generation. But for no one of his many noble deeds will he be longer remembered than for this his munificent gift of $150,000 to the state and the university, at a time when the financial condition of the state made it impossible for the legislature, however well disposed, to grant to the university the money which it needed to carry forward its enlarging work. He has shown himself wise in making this gift while he lived, and might justly hope to witness in the increased prosperity of the university the fruits of his own benevolence. He has shown himself wise in estimating money at its just value—not for what it is, but for what it can do; not as something to be held and loved and gloated over, or to be expended in personal aggrandizement and luxury, but as something which can work mightily for humanity; which can reinforce even the educational power of a sovereign state; which can enrich human minds, and can thus lift up into the true greatness of a noble citizenship the sons and daughters of the whole North-west."

No one act of Mr. Pillsbury's, perhaps, has done more to give him a wide and favorable reputation, in the nation as well as the state, than his course while he was governor regarding what was known as the railroad bonds. These bonds, to the amount of one or two millions, were issued in aid of railroad building, while Minnesota was a territory. These roads were not built, in many instances, and in others the bonds were secured through fraud, and the people for many years repudiated the payment of them. Mr. Pillsbury was of the opinion that the bonds having been issued, and some of them being in the hands of innocent persons, it was a disgrace to the state to repudiate them. It was almost entirely through his influence that the state was brought finally to consent to a satisfactory arrangement whereby these bonds were assumed and paid, and the state saved from the disgrace of refusing to pay its obligations.

Mr. Pillsbury is at this time president of the Gull River Lumber Co., with a capital of eight hundred thousand dollars. He is treasurer of the Minneapolis Stock Yards and Packing Co., a director in several railroad corporations and banks. His administration of all the institutions with which he has been connected has been honorable, wise, and conservative. He enjoys the confidence of the people to as great an extent as any one in the state.

She was loved and respected by all who knew her.

5. Benjamin F. Pillsbury is more identified with Sutton history than either of his distinguished brothers, from the fact that here he spent not only his youth, but many of his mature years, and took an active interest in the affairs of this town. He was elected selectman and town treasurer several years in succession. He was also elected representative to the legislature, and was held in high esteem by his fellow townsmen. He was, while in Sutton, engaged in farming, and was also in the lumber business. He was active and energetic, and his departure from Sutton was felt to be a loss to the interests of the town. In 1878 he removed to Granite Falls, Minn., where he now resides, and is engaged in the lumber business, and also in the elevator business. He is the owner of one of the finest farms in the state of Minnesota, which is his own residence, and also of other large farms, which he rents. He married Miss Susan W. Wright, of Warner. No children.

V. Sally Pillsbury m. Sept. 5, 1811, Nathaniel Cheney, of Sutton. They had seven children, for whom see Cheney. Their fifth child was George Sargent Cheney, b. in Sutton, Aug. 30, 1825. At the age of seventeen he went to Lowell and obtained a situation as clerk in a grocery store. Discharging his duties in a way that proved satisfactory to his employers and creditable to himself, he kept on, taking no backward step, till in 1848 he was able to go into grocery business himself. In this venture he was successful, and from that time till a few years since he has been in the same business, either by himself or in connection with a partner, the amount of business constantly increasing. His object in retiring from it a few years since was to be free to invest his interest and his capital in ways demanding less of his immediate personal attention. The fact that Mr. Cheney, unaided, worked his way up from store boy to head proprietor in one of the largest grocery stores in Lowell, indicates plainly enough what his qualities and business abilities must have been. In public life he has held places of trust and responsibility in the city of his adoption. He has served many times on committees, has been connected with the water-supply directors and other city works. He was member of the common council in 1867, and unanimously reelected the following year; he was chosen alderman in 1869. For many years he has served as auditor, and in 1888-89 was elected one of the city assessors, which position he still holds. His skill as a financier is well known, and his services are much valued by the people. He has been one of the directors of the Five Cent Savings Bank since its formation, and the institution has been highly successful. He is very charitable, and his sympathies are always with the poor and unfortunate. To those in his employ he has been ever just and kind. In the church of which he and Mrs. Cheney are honored members he has shown by his course and conduct that Universalism is a good faith to live by. Of this church he has been treasurer many years, a director, and one of the committee on financial investments. Mr. Cheney's domestic relations are very pleasant, and his ever hospitable home is the abode of peace and plenty. A friend long acquainted with him says of him,—“Mr. Cheney is a self-made man, quick to see a point and to take advantage of it, and of unerring judgment. His relations with business men are always agreeable. He never forgets his personal manhood, nor the respect due to his fellow-men. In public and in private life he is always sure to be the honorable, reliable, Christian gentleman.”

XIII. Reuben B., b. May 31, 1840 ; found dead in the woods near Windham Junction. He was last seen alive on town-meeting day, March, 1878, and is supposed to have died on that day. He served with credit in the Louisiana campaign, being commissioned lieutenant, and acting captain much of the time. He came home when the war closed, and for some time operated the home-stead farm. He became prominent as a townsman, was selectman and superintending school-committee. A few years before his death he began to suffer from attacks of vertigo and consequent aberration of mind, during which he acted strangely. On the morning of the day in which he is supposed to have died he took the train at Concord, intending to go to Brentwood. He left it at Windham Junction to wait for his train for that place, and, as it is supposed, wandered into the woods, and, the weather being very inclement, cold and stormy, he, in a half insane condition, died of exposure. His body was not found till nearly three months afterwards, and then, as it was impossible to move it, it was buried where it was found. It is believed that at some future time, when it shall be safe to do so, his army friends and his Masonic brethren design to remove the remains to some place of interment more suitable for a man who left behind him a record so creditable in many respects as did Reuben B. Porter. He m. Fanny Carner, of New York, and later of Concord. She was a great-granddaughter of Dea. Matthew Harvey, of Sutton. Children,—

It will be observed by the reader that though Hon. Reuben Porter was father of fourteen children, he had very few grandchildren born. One of these few was William, commonly called Willie Porter, to distinguish him from his uncle William, for whom he was named. He was b. in Sutton, Oct., 1864; d. in Warner, Nov. 30, 1881, of quick consumption. He was a young man of much promise, and possessed of many fine qualities. He was for some time employed in the store of A. C. and L. S. Carroll, in Warner, and was much esteemed and trusted by his employers.

In making up our special notices of those who have been active in the past years of the town's history, we cannot omit Capt. Amos Pressey. Reference to the town records will show his name connected with many town affairs.

That he was often chosen moderator of town-meetings, whether annual or special, proves the recognition by his fellow-townsmen of his fitness for the position. He was for many years deputy sheriff of the county, at a period when the duties of sheriff were much more arduous than they now are. He in most instances filled the position of auctioneer at vendues, as auction sales were termed. The mere announcement that the witty Capt. Amos was to preside on such occasions was in itself sufficient to secure a full attendance, the occasion being such as called into play the keen and brilliant wit and peculiar power of repartee for which he was so eminently distinguished.

As a humorist he was unequalled, and his sarcasm was scathing. His sayings, so replete with mirth, pith, and originality, will never be forgotten by those who have heard them. With all this, he was a good citizen, a kind husband and father, and as a neighbor keenly sympathetic with sorrow and suffering.

Winthrop Pressey was a man of much energy, and very honorable in all his dealings. He was a successful farmer, and spent his early life upon the west side of Bean's hill, on the farm of his father, Captain Amos Pressey, where their children were born. Subsequently he purchased the Meadow Brook farm, occupied by William Bean before he removed to Maine, and later by Col. Nathaniel A. Davis. Here Mr. and Mrs. Pressey spent the remainder of their lives, and the farm is now owned and occupied by their son, John Pressey, under whose good cultivation it is one of the best in town. The buildings are much enlarged, improved, and beautified, making an attractive summer home for city boarders. With some additions which Mr. Pressey has made to his paternal inheritance, his farm now contains over 400 acres, and yet he finds time to take an interest in public matters, and, as the records show, has served the town in various ways. He is a hearty and liberal supporter of the Universalist society, friendly and charitable whenever his aid is needed, and, with the willing coöperation of his excellent wife, hospitable and agreeable in his home.

John M. Pressey is very energetic and enterprising, and is among the very best farmers in Sutton. For some years past he has dealt quite extensively in cattle. His home is at the old Elder Champlin place, known also as the Aaron Russell place. He still owns the old Pinnacle Hill farm, the home of his ancestors. He has served honorably in town offices, and also served in the late war.

5. Carlos G. Pressey, son of John and Ruth (Moore)s Pressey, was born in the westerly part of Sutton, Jan. 20, 1816, and was educated in the common schools of the town and at different academies.

C. G. Prasey

He taught school several winters in Sutton and vicinity. He went into trade at Wilmot Flat in 1837, in company with John H. Pearson. They continued in company for one year, when he bought out Mr. Pearson and continued the business alone until 1840. From there he went to West Andover, where he was in trade until 1843. In that year he moved to Washington, N. H., where he was in trade for some years.

While at Andover he was chosen collector of taxes for one year. Upon going to Washington he was appointed post-master, which office he held during his stay there. He was also chosen town-clerk.

He moved back to Sutton in 1849, and went into trade at the Mill Village in company with Jacob S. Harvey, under the firm name of Pressey & Harvey, which firm continued about four years, when Mr. Harvey sold his interest to Truman Putney, and the firm was then Pressey & Putney, which continued until 1867, when Mr. Pressey sold his interest to Mr. Putney.

After a short time Mr. Pressey went to Concord, and opened a store for the sale of carpets, crockery, paper-hangings, &c., which he continued for several years, finally selling out to Messrs. Hammond & Ayers, after which time he made his home in Lowell, Mass., not being in active business except to look after his real estate which he owns in Lowell and in the West.

While living in Sutton he served as moderator at town-meetings a good many years. He also represented the town in the legislature in the years 1867 and 1868. He was elected chairman of the board of road commissioners in 1855. And after the law was passed creating the office of county commissioners, he was elected to that office in the year 1857, for the term of three years.

In the year 1870 he was appointed by the court a county commissioner, to serve the unexpired term of Mr. Daniel E. Hill, who had resigned. He was chairman of the board for two years.

While living at Sutton he was appointed a justice of the peace, which office he held several years.

Mr. Pressey, in November, 1839, married the daughter of Hazen and Susan Putney, Miss Mary N. Putney, who died June 5, 1864, leaving one son, George H. Pressey, who died October 8, 1877.

October 8, 1866, Mr. Pressey married Miss Mary McDuffie, daughter of Archibald and Hannah McDuffie, of Candia.

Mr. Pressey died June 16, 1890, at Concord.

George H. Pressey, son of Carlos G., was b. at West Andover, 1842. He was 2d lieutenant in Co. H. 1st N. H. Cavalry. While his regiment was quartered at Camp Stoneman, near Washington, D. C., he, with five other officers, was ordered to take a body of men down the Shenandoah valley to reinforce Gen. Sheridan. They took their men down and delivered them, and upon their return, it being in the night and they having no escort, he and the other officers were surprised and captured by Mosby's guerillas. They were all stripped of everything that was of any value, including horses, money, watches, &c., and were then marched to Richmond and confined in Libby prison. They were subsequently exchanged. Returning to New Hampshire at the close of the war Mr. Pressey assisted his father in his store in Concord, and later was for a few years clerk in the custom-house, at Boston. He d. Oct. 8. 1877.

PUTNEY.

Several families of the name of Putney have lived in this town at different times, but those who have lived here continuously are the descendants of Joseph Putney, Sr., the landlord of the well known tavern on Putney's hill, in Hopkinton.

Two brothers, Joseph and William Putney, from Dunbarton, about 1735 settled in Hopkinton. Their sister, Miriam Putney, became the wife of Ichabod Roby, and settled in Sutton. Josiah Putney, supposed to be their brother, settled in Goffstown, and his granddaughters, Mary and Betsey Putney, children of his son John, became the first and second wife of Ichabod Roby, Jr., and Lydia Putney married Moses Abbott.

He probably introduced the business in that locality, and built the tannery which many now living can remember as located near the bridge. It was partly run by water, yet there was an engine and the necessary machinery for steam-power. Mr. Putney did quite an extensive business, employing several men. After some years he sold the tannery to Gardner B. Gay, of New London, who did business for several years, a part of the time in partnership with Enoch

P. Cummings. Later the tannery was sold to Samuel Blanchard, who operated it a short time, and afterwards had the building taken down, which was much regretted, as it was the last tannery in town. After disposing of his tannery Mr. Putney followed farming. He was very highly respected by the people of this town.

Truman Putney commenced his business life by serving as clerk for his brothers-in-law, Carlos G. Pressey and Jacob S. Harvey, merchants at the Mill village. After a few years Mr. Harvey, finding his health required change of climate and occupation, sold out his share of the business to Mr. Putney, and went to Texas, and later Mr. Putney purchased Mr. Pressey's interest, and continued merchandising in his own name. For nearly thirty-five years he continued the same business in the same place. In April, 1878, he took his son Fred into partnership, under the firm name of Truman Putney & Son.

About 1881 Mr. Putney's health becoming impaired by his long continued devotion to business, and believing that a change of climate might be a benefit, accompanied by his wife, went to Colorado Springs, where he rapidly grew worse, and died Sept. 30, 1882. His body was brought to Sutton for interment, and the funeral services were conducted exactly in accordance with his previously made arrangements.

Entering into trade early in life, Mr. Putney developed a manhood well worthy the imitation of young men. He had a natural aptitude for commercial transactions, and by honesty, perseverance, and industry, he was prospered. By integrity, years of fair dealing, and a strict adherence to his word, he built up a character of solidity, and never dared malice or envy to whisper aught against his name or his broad Christian charity.

In his business relations he was widely known, and his uniform courtesy and kindly manners won for him many friends, both in financial and social circles. He was a leading man in town, and many among all classes sought his counsel and advice, and he was ever ready with his generous aid for any good object, and for a long time took an active part in everything tending to promote the prosperity of the town.

Politically he affiliated with the Republican party, and represented Sutton in the state legislature. He was appointed postmaster at Mill village in 1861, and held the office till his death. For many years he held the office of town treasurer, and other official positions, discharging all the duties with characteristic fidelity. He was not a member of any church, but his contributions for the support of the gospel were numerous and liberal. By his death Sutton lost a valued citizen.

Lewis Richards died in 1870.

The following, prepared by Carlos G. Pressey, Esq., in 1888, gives some account of the stores for general merchandise which have in times past been kept at the Mill village, including those of the brothers, Albert P. and Lewis Richards, and their relative, Alfred Richards:

“The first store that I remember in Sutton Mill village was kept by Nathaniel A. Davis. He was succeeded by Otis J. Story, who sold out to Pressey & Harvey. Mr. Harvey sold his interest to Truman Putney, and then the firm was Pressey & Putney. Later Mr. Pressey sold his interest to Truman Putney, who took his son, Fred Putney, into business, and the firm was T. Putney & Son, and so remained till the death of the elder member of the firm left the entire business to the son. Jacob S. Harvey, a native of Hopkinton, came to Sutton as clerk in the store of Moses Carr, in South Sutton, and subsequently went into trade in the same village in company with Moses Johnson. A few years later he went into company with Carlos G. Pressey, in the Mill village. He was a man of superior ability, was universally respected, and held many important offices. He went to Texas, where he was in business for a few years, but losing his health, he returned to his father's home in Hopkinton, and there died. Some time after Nathaniel A. Davis opened his store, another store was opened in the village by Albert P. Richards. Later it was Albert P. and Lewis Richards, then it was L. & A. Richards, being Lewis and Alfred Richards, and afterwards Lewis Richards. Subsequently it was sold to Truman Putney, and both stores merged into one. Several years after the above named stores were in operation, Joseph P. Nelson built a new one, which was occupied several years by Richards & Burpee, being Alfred Richards and Benjamin P. Burpee. This store was afterwards occupied by some other parties that I do not remember, but it is now kept by J. B. and F. Richards, sons of the former Albert P. Richards."

The Richards brothers originated in New Boston. They were much respected by the people of Sutton, and did a good business while they were in trade here. [See record of town-officers.]

Alfred Richards came to Sutton in 1839, and for twenty-six years was one of our leading merchants. He commenced business at the North village in company with his brother William, under the firm name of W. & A. Richards. In 1845 he bought his brother's interest, and continued the business in his own name till 1849, when he removed to the Mill village, and bought one half of the goods of A. P. Richards & Co., and continued the business with Lewis Richards, one of the former proprietors, under the firm name of L. & A. Richards. In 1858 he removed to the South village, and bought a stock of goods of Frank Robbins. He soon returned to the Mill village and entered into a copartnership with Benjamin P. Burpee, under the firm name of Richards & Burpee, and continued in trade till 1865, when he removed to Andover to engage in the wood and lumber business. Here he also engaged in trade for one year, being connected with the firm of Melendy & Babbitt. In 1869 he removed to Manchester, where he now resides.

Alfred Richards was born in Goffstown, Oct. 20, 1816; m. Dolly A. Simons, of Weare, May 23, 1843. They had one child, Henry A., b. in Sutton, Jan. 23, 1848; d. Dec. 18, 1882: m. Josie S. Rumrill, of Manchester.

While resident in Sutton Mr. Richards was two years a member of the board of selectmen, and with Asa Page, Reuben Porter, Johnson Colby, Jacob S. Harvey, and Albert Richards, organized the Sutton Mutual Fire Insurance Co.

He took great interest in agricultural pursuits. The orchard on the southern slope of Pigeon hill is the product of his labor. He was very fond of hunting, and was a capital story-teller. His memory of the old folks, the people of his day, is remarkable.

RICHARDSON.

Edmund Richardson and wife, Betsey Gile, originated in Haverhill. They came to Sutton at an early period and settled near the mountains, where they resided till death, both at advanced age. They lived in comfort and independence. They had no children. Mr. Richardson was a very respectable man. A sketch of Mrs. Richardson follows. Edmund Richardson d. Jan. 14, 1868, aged 92. His wife d. Nov. 4, 1863. [For her ancestry, see Gile.]

Daniel Richardson, brother to Edmund, lived near him. His wife was Bathsheba Flint. They had four children. He became blind in consequence of an accident, and afterwards supported himself by basket-making and chair-bottoming. He used to go all over town to people's houses, and do their chair and basket work. He died in this town, past 60 years of age, and his family removed to Amherst.

AUNT RICHARDSON.

BY THERESA HARVEY.

Ever pleasant for us in our intercourse with humanity is it to meet with those possessed of what we commonly term originality of character, those in whose make-up there exists the principle of individuality in so positive a degree that false education and falser social habits and customs cannot despoil nature of her maternal character, or obliterate her likeness from her offspring.

Aunt Richardson, as she was known to the people of Sutton (the soubriquet of aunt being accorded her on account of her kindly and motherly nature), claimed relationship to all because of her affection for all.

She was a native of the old town of Haverhill, Mass., where, to use her own expression, she early became a "bound girl" in the family of a highly respectable deacon, who thought that in giving her food and shelter he fully compensated the little drudge for her faithful service in his household. Not a day was she permitted to go to school, nor ever allowed to enter the parlor except on duty and on the occasions of family devotions, when the deacon became so far democratic as to call his whole household together to listen to prayers and the reading of the Scriptures. Such was the eagerness of the little Betsey to know something of the mysteries of books and letters, that while the deacon was slowly droning through the chapter, she would adroitly slip behind his chair, and noting with her eye the figures which marked the chapter, then taking position by a stand whereon lay another Bible, by intense observation and careful comparison of word with word, was soon able to follow him understandingly while he read. In this way she learned to read words before she learned the letters whose combinations make words. This benefit the deacon conferred on her gratuitously, though unwittingly on his own part.

She grew up, married a poor man, and with him came to Sutton and settled on an uncleared farm. Here they toiled, she sharing all the rough labors with unflinching courage and hope that never faltered. Being childless, her great motherly heart sought expression for its sympathies externally in acts of kindness towards all who were suffering through sickness or misfortune, and, in fact, to everything that had life.

One striking peculiarity of her character was the wonderful influence she exercised over animals. There was no creature so vicious or unruly that she could not bring it into order and subjection, from the strong horse or bovine to the little sensitive bee: her potent magnetism could subdue them all. She ever maintained that through kindness and love even the animal's nature is reached, and made subject to moral suasion. Who shall say that her theory was not correct? Modern science seems pointing in the same direction, and demonstrating the mighty truth that love is the all-potent force of the universe.

Whenever we remember and think of Aunt Richardson, we sometimes compare her to a wild vine clambering over rough rocks, yet loaded with lucious fruitage; sometimes to a stately palm-tree in the desert, which yields both shelter and food to the travel-worn traveller; but most of all, she seems like the mountain-spring bursting through cleft granite, whose waters taste sweeter than those quaffed from crystal vase or marble fountain. Many had cause to bless her kindness while living, and many mourned, though few of her kin remained, when her form, unbent by the burdens of more than eighty years, was given back to earth.

An amusing anecdote is related of Aunt Richardson and her bees. In her house was a passage-way between two of her rooms, at one end of which was the chimney, and in this warmest end during the cold weather she kept her beehive. On one occasion, when a religious meeting was appointed at her house, both of her rooms were warmed up, and the minister took his station in the passage-way between them. He had not proceeded far in his discourse when a bee flew out of the hive; another and another followed, buzzing about his ears, he brushing them away and resolutely continuing his sermon, till, at last, the whole swarm appeared to take offence at his doctrine, and attacked him, front, flank, and rear. Aunt Richardson had sat quite still till things reached this desperate pass, but she now arose, approached the bees, addressed them in gentle accents, telling them it was not time for them to leave their hive, that they must be good and go right back, waving them along with her outstretched hands as she spoke. In a few minutes she had them all back in their hive, they moving along with as much docility as if they had full, intelligent comprehension of all she said. The religious services went on as before, and the bees made no further attempt to interrupt them.

In becoming acquainted with the peculiar power which this kind lady evidently possessed and exercised over the lower animals, we are reminded of what is related of the great St. Francis, that he esteemed all living creatures his brethren, and would do them service. He would have them listen to his preaching, and they listened. He was mighty in love, he was a man overflowing with sympathy for man and beast: not only was every man his brother, but every animal,—the sheep in the fields, the birds in the branches, the brother-donkey on which he rode, the sister-bees who took refuge in his kind protection. He was the friend of everything that suffered or rejoiced ; no emotion went beyond his sympathy ; his heart rose to see the gladness of nature, and melted over the distresses of the smallest and meanest creature on the face of the earth. And by this divine right of nature everything trusted in him. The magnetism of the heart, that power which nobody can define, but which it is impossible to ignore, surrounded him like a special atmosphere, and there cannot be any doubt that he must have possessed, in an almost unexampled degree, the power of attracting all creatures to him. .

The author of the life of the great St. Francis goes on to say,—“And, every now and then, God still sends among us a man or a woman with a peculiar, if a limited, gift of reconciliation between mankind and the inferior animals, of restoring, at least in exceptional cases, that harmony which once obtained between man and nature, and which is still prophesied in unmistakable terms as sometime again to become universal, by these select souls sent among us, whose mission and its accomplishment are its pledge and token.”

We do not feel that it is at all out of place to apply the words spoken of the saint of old to Aunt Richardson, suiting her case so entirely as they do. It is curious that both the saint and herself are chiefly remembered for the same thing. Sincere and constant as were her pity and kindness to her fellow human beings, her fame rests on the fact of her great love and pity for and influence over animals. And of him the same is true : St. Francis is known and remembered the world over for his practical recognition of the fact that the inferior animals are simply man's poor relations, and of their consequent claim on his loving-kindness, while very few save the most learned in the Catholic Church know that he was the founder of the immensely powerful order of the Franciscan brotherhood. Herein lies a hint for seekers after earthly immortality.

ANOTHER SKETCH, BY MRS. THOMAS ROBY.

Mrs. Edmund Richardson, or, as she was familiarly called, "Aunt Richie," was married at sixteen, and moved with her husband from Haverhill, Mass., their native place, to Sutton, first locating near Gile pond. After a few years they moved to the east part of the town, or "under the mountain," into a log-house, where by dint of energy and strict economy they secured a comfortable home. A frame house succeeded the log-cabin, it being the third frame house in their district.

Mrs. Richardson's knowledge of roots and herbs enabled her to be very useful. Far and near has she ministered to the wants of suffering humanity, and many a dollar has she saved for the farmer's pocket by her care and cure of his sick or wounded animals. She had great love and pity for animals, and always had many pets around her. Even after she became old in years her sympathetic heart was always young. She was the lady-factotum in those days, managing funerals and weddings, no gathering being considered complete without her presence, officially as well as socially.

She ever maintained an upright Christian character, being a strict Calvinist Baptist. She was a frequent visitor at the house of the father and mother of the writer of this sketch, and, as they were Freewill Baptists in belief and profession, discussions sometimes arose on the great points of free agency and foreordination. On one occasion she illustrated her favorite and oft-expressed assertion of "once in grace, always in grace," by the following pretty word-picture:

"Now, darter," she said, turning to my mother with her peculiar smile, "suppose a living spring to be found in the woods; in course of time that spring will get choked with leaves and rubbish: now get down and clear out the leaves and rubbish, and the spring will still be there."

Prayer-meetings were maintained at her house every

Sabbath evening for twenty years. She will long be remembered for the good she has done. She died Nov. 4, 1863, aged eighty-four. She originated the idea of mud-shoes for horses in wet places.

ROBBINS.

Francis Robbins, of Mason, b. July 9, 1815, son of Abraham and Hannah (Elliot) Robbins, settled in Sutton South village in 1842. He first came to this region as a peddler, and became known over a large territory, and, as he carefully saved his money for judicious reinvestment, was soon able to enlarge his stock in trade. Soon after coming to Sutton he opened the first tin-shop at the South village, in the old red shop that used to occupy the site of the present tin and hardware building. He soon added some groceries to his stock, then stoves and ironware, and built up a good business.

He engaged in various lumbering and farming speculations, and, with the exception of two years spent in Boston, continued to be one of the leading business men of Sutton till 1873, when he sold out and removed to Warner. His departure was much regretted by the people, for not only was he, as one who knew his career said of him, "one of the most active spirits that ever operated in this town," but he was a kind-hearted, sympathetic man, and made many friends. While here he built two houses, the one now owned by Mrs. Israel Andrew, and the Asa Withee house. He owned the store at the South village some years, and employed James B. McAllister to attend it, while he did the buying and outside business himself.

In Warner he bought the John Robertson house, and later erected the fine buildings on Kearsarge street, where he spent the remainder of his days, and where his widow and daughter still reside. He m. The inscription on their gravestone is as follows: "They were among the earliest settlers of Sutton, and by their industry obtained a competency. They lived respected and died lamented." This epitaph, according to what was told of them by persons who remembered them, does not overstate their merits. It is also told of the Robys that they were men of good sense and judgment, as well as stout and strong in body. It seems they were the right men in the right place when they came here, for Sutton, at the time they made their advent, was a very poor place for weaklings.

Dea. Nicholas Rowell, on account of his business, grist-milling, and also by reason of his office in the Freewill Baptist church, which he retained many years and until his death, became familiarly known to almost every person in town, and is remembered as a man strictly honorable in all his dealings, of good judgment, and very kind and obliging to all he came in contact with. With the others of his father's family he came from Hopkinton, Rowell's Bridge being the locality, in 1823. They settled on a hill farm back of the Mill village, which, by dint of constant hard work, they succeeded in paying for and bringing under cultivation. After his marriage Nicholas settled at the Mill village and engaged in the mill business, in which he used constant diligence, being at the same time fervent in spirit to serve the church. His wife was no less active and earnest in the cause of religion than himself. Weekly religious meetings were held at their house for many years, and their zeal in the cause of Christianity will not soon be forgotten.

Ira F. Rowell, their son, was church clerk for several years, as their records show, and his departure from Sutton was considered a loss to the town as well as to the church. His present residence is Claremont. In the summer of 1888, though only on a visit to Sutton, he took considerable pains to put within the reach and knowledge of the compiler of this work some records and other facts from which to glean the early history of the Freewill Baptist church in Sutton.

By reviewing the foregoing record of Sargent ancestry, it will be seen that a great many Sutton people and their issue are the descendants of Christopher Sargent, Esq., of Amesbury, viz., the wife and all the descendants of Hezekiah Blaisdell, Sr., the same of Dea. Joseph Greeley, the same of Jacob Harvey, and also the same of the wife and children of John Pressey of North Sutton. A brief sketch of their ancestor, who was, in his long life, a very eminent man, will not be out of place here.

Christopher Sargent, Esq., d. Nov. 10, 1830, being more than 90 years of age. He was son of Moses and Sarah (Bagley) Sargent, b. May 18, 1740. William Sargent, the immigrant, was his great-grandfather. For nearly half a century he was a very prominent man, holding all the offices in the gift of the people. He spent his life in Amesbury, where he was first chosen selectman in 1771, and subsequently served the town in that capacity for thirteen years, his last term being in 1813. He was representative fourteen years and town-clerk nine years. During the Revolutionary struggle he was one of the few who directed public affairs, and gave his whole great influence to the cause of freedom. He not only managed his large farm, but as a justice of the peace wrote deeds and wills, settled estates, and performed many other duties which were connected with the office in those days." (From Merrill's History of Amesbury.)

He was the great grandfather of the compiler of this history of Sutton, who is the fortunate possessor of his justice of peace commission, signed by John Hancock, and the signature looks very much as the same name does on the most important document connected with our national history,—the Declaration of Independence.

Esquire Sargent's faculties held out wonderfully till the very last of his life. For several weeks before his death he had driven out daily in his chaise, making calls on all his friends, and bidding them what he assured them was a last good-bye, though he was to appearance as well as usual. One Sunday morning he was, according to his custom, winding up his eight-day clock, and, turning around to descend from the chair he was standing on, became dizzy and fell. His son, who was present, ran to him, placed him on the bed, called for help, and was hastening to summon a doctor, but the father called him back. "No doctor," he said, "can reach my case. The wheels of nature are stopping for me, and can never be wound up again like that clock." And so it proved: the clock he had set going was doing duty several days after he ceased to breathe.

The mother of Christopher Sargent, Sarah (Bagley) Sargent, lived to the age of 93. Her pedigree is as follows: Orlando Bagley, 1st, m. March 6, 1634, Sarah, dau. of Anthony Colby; and their son, Orlando Bagley, 2d, m. Dec. 22, 1681, Sarah, dau. of William Sargent, 1st. Their son, Orlando Bagley, 3d, m. Feb. 19, 1705, Dorothy Harvey, dau. of John and Sarah (Barnes) Harvey, b. probably in 1686. She d. Jan. 2, 1757, and her husband, Orlando Bagley, 3d, d. May 2, 1756. Sarah Bagley, who m. Moses Sargent, was their dau.

The wife of Christopher Sargent was Anna, dau. of Capt. Robert Sargent, of whom the History of Amesbury says,— "Capt. Robert Sargent d. Jan. 28, 1808, in the 92d year of his age, being born in 1716. He was a man of some note, having held a commission in the militia for some years, and served the town in various offices as selectman, etc.

1. Warren H. Simons, b. March 16, 1825, in Warner.

Mrs. Polly Swett d. Nov. 21, 1881, in Sutton.

John Simons lived in Sutton till he was twenty-five years of age ; then in Warner for five years ; moved to Newport, and there lived fifteen years ; moved to Springfield, and there lived twenty years ; then returned to Sutton, where he has since lived, and at the age of 92 years has given this record from memory with remarkable correctness as to dates. Mr. Simons has been farmer and drover, and while a young man was often employed upon stone-work, such as bridge abutments, mill-dams and sluice-ways, and double-faced walls; especially while living in Newport he was able to command extra pay for the superior quality of his work.

As a rule, great length of days on earth is not to be desired. Extreme old age is very often accompanied by much that is unpleasant,—feebleness or even helplessness of body, loss of faculty and memory, failure of the organs of sight and hearing, and consequent increasing dulness of perception,—making association and conversation with the unfortunate old man or woman very tiresome and disagreeable for others. In the case of Mr. Simons, however, none of these unpleasant conditions seem to attach to his old age. When the present writer last saw him, which was in the autumn of 1888, he was erect in person, and still able to do useful work if occasion called for it, tidy in his dress, and with the deportment of a gentleman, sight and hearing good, and ready and agreeable in conversation. It seemed almost as if his life had been thus well preserved and prolonged for the sole purpose of encouraging those feeling themselves foredoomed to extreme longevity, by exhibiting in this one individual all the pleasant and desirable possibilities of old age.

In this way he conveyed the boards to cover his barn more than a mile, through the woods, and up a steep hill much of the way. He gained property, and brought up a large family, and was much respected as a citizen and neighbor. In the latter part of his life he was much afflicted with rheumatism, a natural result, it may be supposed, of his taxing his strength so severely in his earlier years. He, however, lived to the age of 90 years. He was b. 1752; d. May 2, 1742, in Sutton. He lived in the south part of the town.

* The brothers, Nathaniel and William, are named in another part of this book. They were people of refined taste, good intellect, and attractive social qualities, and always considered very honorable in their dealings. It was a loss to the town when they moved out of it. Nathaniel removed to Newport, and later to New London. While living here, four of his children died of scarlet fever in four weeks. Contagious diseases have at times made terrible havoc in some families in this town, especially diphtheria. It was remarkable that when it raged here in the winter of 1862-'63, fifteen of the name and family of Hart died of it.

The children of William Todd were.—Frederick, who was for some years in business in Manchester, where he died a young man; Hiram, who was in trade at Wilmot Flat, and died there about 1864; Nathaniel, who settled in New London; Emmeline, who m. ——— Shepherd, died rather young; and Mary Jane, who was the last to reside with the parents on the homestead before they left town.

WADLEIGH.

The father of the Wadleighs, who settled in this town, was Thomas, a resident of Hampstead, who became a proprietor by the purchase of a right, and perhaps of more than one right. As a consequence he was interested in the affairs of Perrystown, and resided here occasionally. His name occurs frequently in the Proprietors' Book of Records, in connection with matters relating to the interests of the town. From this record, as well as from some other known facts, it is natural to infer that he was possessed of much practical ability, good sense, and sound judgment. He was also a man of giant strength. It is related of him that on one occasion himself and two other men were about to lift a heavy log, he taking the small end, and the other two men the butt end. They could not, however, succeed in raising the log till they changed ends, he taking the butt end and the two other men taking the small end, and in this way the log was lifted. He was out in the "last French and Indian War," returning from his last campaign in 1759.

This Thomas Wadleigh was the father of nine sons and three daughters, born probably in Hampstead. Their names, with date of birth as nearly as they could be obtained from records, or from other known facts, are here given :

ERASTUS WADLEIGH, ESQ.,

was the third son of the Hon. Benjamin Wadleigh, and was born April 27, 1808; died May 21, 1881.

A high-minded, honorable gentleman, scholarly, courteous, and hospitable, he was one of those men whose presence gives character and dignity to the community in which they make their life-long abiding-place. Possessed of superior intellectual powers, cultivated and strengthened by the habit of study and investigation, with much natural sagacity, quickened by thorough acquaintance with men and practical experience in the managing of public affairs, his influence was strongly felt. As a politician, he was conservative enough for safety, yet not too timid to adopt new measures in place of the old when the new seemed founded in justice.

In his young manhood, as teacher and as superintending school-committee, he was the means of giving to the cause of education in Sutton a decided impulse forward, being among the foremost of those who substituted emulation to excel in scholarship for the old fashion of seeking to govern by authority founded on the rod and ferule.

No man who ever lived in Sutton has a clearer right to the favorable remembrance of his fellow-townsmen than Erastus Wadleigh, since no man ever did so much as he has done to rescue from oblivion the names and memories of others. He prepared many biographical sketches of deceased citizens, which found their way into the journals of the day, and copies of which are still preserved. In this work he spent many laborious days, but it was his favorite employment, and many of the later years of his life were largely devoted to the early history of his native town. No one so well as the writer of this sketch, who labored jointly with him on that work, can testify to the enthusiastic interest, the study, the faithful accuracy and patience, which he brought to bear upon it.

Both authors were descended from original settlers prominent and active in the earlier years of the town,—the one from Benjamin Wadleigh, Sr., and the other from Matthew Harvey, Sr.,—and both having access to the papers and records of their respective ancestors, much valuable matter was thus collected and recorded. Selections from this unpublished history have, to some extent, formed the basis of the present work. By his separate and individual efforts, Mr. Wadleigh added greatly to that which is the chief merit of those historical collections, as indeed it is of all historical works,—their reliability.

He left no means untried for obtaining correct information. By many letters of inquiry, by conversation with aged persons, and by carefully consulting burial-stones in ancient graveyards, he compelled both the living and the dead to add their testimony to the written record. No part of the town was left unvisited, and from every part he gathered something. In response to his close questioning "North" Sutton "gave up" all it knew about itself, and "South" Sutton "kept not back." He left nothing for guess-work, accepted no statement unless supported by well known facts.

He was, perhaps, at first led into this pursuit by the strong love and interest he always felt for the scenes and localities amid which his infancy and boyhood, his young manhood and mature life, had been spent. To him every hill and valley, every lake and stream, had a history of its own, suggestive of the toils, the alternate successes and defeats, of the men of the preceding generations; of their continuous conflict with the very roughest side of nature; of the cold and hardships, sometimes even hunger, that they braved, of the rocks they blasted, the stone walls they built, the swamps they filled up, and the hills they laid low to make passable roads; of the forests their determined arms converted into fields and farms. Occasionally, too, there bubbled up in his memory, like a living spring in the dense forest, some jest or joke, some anecdote of fun or frolic, that had its origin among those hardy pioneers, and which, having served its refreshing purpose of making an hour or a day of their toilsome life more endurable, had reached down to our time.

Kezar's pond was to him an object of especial love and admiration; there was no sheet of water so beautiful, no sandy beach so white and smooth as that on its south and south-eastern shore. For more than seventy years he had watched its face, playful or frowning, as it lay nestled at the foot of the noble eminence on which stood his ancestral home. Following with his eye the hills beyond, and in every direction, the desire grew upon him to repeople them all, not, like the novelist, with creatures of his own imagination, but with those to whom these localities had been the theatre on which they had acted their part in the drama of real life.

The History of Sutton was commenced, but the work had not proceeded far before the discovery was made that it is one thing to put on record facts already within reach, and quite another to find right answers to all questions of genealogy and descent to which these facts give rise.

(And here, perhaps, is as good a place as any other to state, for the benefit of all those who are ambitious of entering the field of antiquarian and genealogical research, that no one ever yet entered that field with any adequate conception of the amount of labor involved in the attempt to operate there. Why, then, does not the aspirant quickly abandon a work the proportionate results of which are so small? Simply because he cannot. His interest in the work grows with his constantly enlarging conception of its magnitude and its importance. He soon becomes thoroughly identified with it, or, rather, the work has mastered him, and he has become subordinate to it. For genealogical research, apparently so dry, once entered upon, becomes the most fascinating of all literary work, becomes magnetic even in its attractiveness to its pursuer. Very unwillingly, and only under pressure of strong necessity, will the genealogist suspend, even temporarily, his work while searching for "missing links" in some family chain. The clue he may chance to hold in his hand is so slight, so elusive, has been so difficult to obtain, and yet is of such value if it leads to the result he is working for, with the conviction that, if he lets it slip, it is lost forever, and no future genealogist will be able to reach it, and yet will blunder for lack of it,—all this makes him cling to it with a miser-like tenacity till he finds the desired link and has got it fairly riveted in its proper place. Not only does the genealogist feel compelled to do his work, but he must do it aright. An assertion based, for lack of proof, upon supposition, or even upon probability, may prove to be a misstatement, which will fatally bewilder and mislead the future historian. For history is forever going on, and the record is by no means completed when the writer of our day lays aside his pen forever.)

Mr. Wadleigh, of course, realized that in succeeding years some other would take up the work where he dropped it, and would make this, his early work, the foundation on which to build his own. It was this sense of double responsibility to the past which, to his ear, clamored for remembrance, for recognition, and for historical justice at his hands, as well as to the future, which was to sit in judgment upon his work, united with a natural honesty and conscientiousness, which, if a man possess it, enters as closely into his literary work as into his business dealings,—it was all this which urged him to use the strictest accuracy of statement rather than fulness of detail. Throughout his entire work there is no possibility of misconstruction through diffuseness or carelessness.

When, with advancing age, the hand of disease was laid heavily upon him, it was with deepest regret that he yielded to the conviction that he was no longer able to continue his chosen work. And yet he could not fail to view with satisfaction that which was already accomplished. He had brought the thirty years succeeding the first settlement out of the region of fog and fable in which the antiquarian usually finds such years, when searching for material for the centennial address, long before the town had seen its hundredth birthday.

In the following brief words he explains his aims and object, and gives his moderate estimate of what he had accomplished. He says,—

FELLOW-CITIZENS OF SUTTON: I submit to you the following early history of the town, and a sketch of the settlers previous to 1800, and some of their descendants, taken from the records of the original grantees, town records, and information preserved by some of the settlers themselves, together with personal knowledge of a large number of the persons referred to. It is believed by the writer, so far as his knowledge extends, to be materially correct, although deficient in other respects—not embracing all that is desirable. It is designed to be a record of mere facts, as far as it goes, without embellishment or exaggeration. If the writer has been able to make himself understood, he will feel that he has done something towards rescuing the memory of our forefathers from immediate oblivion, which is his principal design.

The love of kindred, always so noticeable a characteristic of Mr. Wadleigh, became much more marked towards the last of his days. This peculiar feature, which not infrequently manifests itself, is always gratifying, yet painful for relatives to observe, indicating, as it does, this return to our earliest affections, this coming back to where we started from, that our life-circle is nearly completed. Whenever we shall detect this change in ourselves, it will not require the knowledge that our seventy allotted years are already past to tell us that the end of our life is near.

With a modesty remarkable in a man of his acknowledged and recognized ability, Erastus Wadleigh never sought distinction or preferment. Here in our quiet town he was content to pass his whole life, here he gave his interest, and here he gained what so many sons and daughters of Sutton have sought elsewhere, and some have failed to find, competence, influence, friendship, true regard.

He was married three times. His first wife, who was the mother of his children, was Elmina Challis, married Feb. 31, 1839, daughter of Timothy Challis. She was born Oct. 15, 1815, and died July 14, 1842. His only surviving child is Milton B. Wadleigh, who lives on and owns the old Wadleigh homestead, which remains unimpaired and undivided, though greatly enlarged, and is one of the finest farms in Sutton.

His second wife was Mary W. Flanders, who died May 4, 1865. His third wife was Olive Holmes, widow of Dr. Dimond Davis. She died Nov. 1, 1880.

5. Milton Wadleigh graduated from Norwich University, Vermont, in 1837, as civil engineer. Subsequently went West, and engaged in railroad engineering. Located at Galena, Jo Daviess county, Ill., then distinguished for its mines, and being at the time the most promising and flourishing town in the state. Here for many years he filled the office of city engineer, and, since then, that of surveyor of Jo Daviess county, to which office he has for many consecutive years been elected, irrespective of political ascendancy.

10. Gilbert Wadleigh fitted for college at New London academy, and was graduated from Dartmouth in 1847. After graduation he taught high schools in Sutton, Bradford, and Concord, and read law with Hon. Mason W. Tappan, of Bradford, and with Hon. Asa Fowler, of Concord. In October, 1850, he began practice in Milford, and for nine years was actively engaged in the duties of his profession. From 1859 to 1864, he was cashier of the Souhegan National bank, and was treasurer of the Milford Five Cents Savings Institution from 1871 to 1875. During the Rebellion he was a paymaster in the army. In 1863 and in 1874, he was a representative in the legislature. He was a Chapter Freemason. In all the responsible positions which he filled he proved himself an able, conscientious, and honorable man. In his later years he resumed law practice to a limited extent. Gilbert Wadleigh died March 7, 1886. He was never married.

JONATHAN WADLEIGH

settled early in Sutton, and married a Miss Miles, of Salisbury, who died in 1779, leaving an infant, one week old. This child was the one, elsewhere spoken of in this work, that was carried by Thomas Wadleigh, his brother, to its mother's relations in Salisbury or Northfield, and grew to a worthy manhood, by name Thomas Miles Wadleigh.

Jonathan Wadleigh married, 2d or 3d, 1795, Mrs. Susanna (Russell) Little. He married a second or a third wife in Northfield, whither he removed soon after the death of his first wife. He was an early pioneer of that town, and settled on Bean's hill, and afterwards on Bay hill. One of his sons was Judge Peter Wadleigh of that place. His grandson, Ephraim S. Wadleigh, now resides on Bay hill, in Northfield, where the first farm in town was cleared. Jonathan Wadleigh had several sons and daughters. He died in Gilmanton, about 1833, being then very aged. He was a tax-payer in Sutton in 1779.

JUDGE BENJAMIN WADLEIGH

was born and spent his life, married, and reared his family on the same farm in Sutton. He is remembered as being of good personal appearance, gentlemanly in manner, and possessed of a pleasant, genial nature, which was very attractive to young and old. He was an earnest promoter of education, and no sacrifice was deemed too great to afford the educational advantages of the time to his children. Through life he commanded the confidence, respect, and friendly regard of his fellow-townsmen, while, as a citizen, no man's views had more weight than his, and it was on account of his sound judgment and recognized integrity that his opinions and advice were much sought in controversies, not only between his own townsmen, but by those of neighboring towns. For many years no inconsiderable part of his time was devoted to the settlement of such controversies, he acting as arbitrator, sometimes with associates, but more frequently alone, by mutual consent of parties. One who knew him well said of him, twenty years after his death,—“I remember him well: I remember his unflinching honesty, and if I were his worst enemy or he were mine, I would trust him for honest dealing; he never gave opinions at random.”

Judge Wadleigh was active in the public service during most of his life. His name appears in the record as selectman in 1809, and from that date almost continuously as selectman, moderator, representative, and town-clerk for the next twenty years. He was justice of the peace from 1823 till his death, and judge of the court of common pleas from 1833 till his age disqualified him. He d. June 24, 1864; his wife d. Dec. 17, 1857, aged 76. She was a most excellent woman.

Benjamin Washburn

Judge Wadleigh succeeded to the homestead of his father, who d. Oct. 8, 1817, aged 68, and his mother long survived her husband, dying in 1836, aged 86. Her long period of widowhood gave room and opportunity for the manifestation of that filial devotion on the part of Judge Wadleigh which was so noticeable in him continuously, and up to the last day of this venerated lady's life. She was Hannah, daughter of Ebenezer Kezar. She came to live on Wadleigh hill with her husband and one child when she was only 19 years old, from Hampstead.

LYDIA F. WADLEIGH,

Vice-President and Professor of Ethics in the Normal College in the city of New York, was born Feb. 8, 1817, in Sutton, N. H. She was the youngest daughter of Benjamin and Polly Marston Wadleigh, and inherited from both parents much individuality of character.

Her early education was the best available. Later she entered upon a collegiate course at the New Hampton Literary and Scientific Institution, where her talent was at once recognized, and she was soon chosen pupil assistant, which position she retained until 1841, when she graduated with class honors, and was appointed teacher of Mathematics, Greek, and English Literature.

Miss Wadleigh's class was the first in that notable institution to receive diplomas on parchment, an honor conferred by Hon. Josiah Quincy, of Rumney, N. H., who suggested and bore the expense of the innovation. Upon this occasion Miss Wadleigh read an original salutatory in Latin.

During Miss Wadleigh's connection with this institution she received the ordinance of baptism by immersion (Rev. Eli B. Smith, D. D., officiating), and united with the Baptist church in New Hampton. Some years later she was connected with the Presbyterian church in University Place, New York, holding that position until her death, a period of about thirty years.

In 1845, finding her position as teacher unsatisfactory to herself, Miss Wadleigh tendered her resignation, which was accepted with regret by teachers and trustees, she having proved herself to be not only competent as an instructor, but painstaking and self-sacrificing. No pupils could leave the class professedly ignorant of problems, for she brought them to the blackboard and held their attention till the cloud lifted. She collected the laggards in the recitation-room before breakfast for additional polishing, and many a Greek root was mastered by the tears of the unwary kept after school hours for an extra drilling.

Miss Wadleigh had established so good a record in New Hampton that she received early invitations to other schools. She was first with Mrs. Ellis's private school in Hanover, from which place she was invited to become lady principal of an academy in Derry. She was afterwards connected with the high school in Concord. We find her name in a catalogue as teacher in Georgetown, D. C., in 1848, and in 1852 she was again with Mrs. Ellis, who had removed to Nashua.

She was connected with schools in Philadelphia, Pa., and in Freehold, N. J. She was associated with Prof. Richardson, whose established reputation rendered the position very creditable to herself.

Dissatisfaction in regard to public education had arisen in the city of New York. The course of instruction was limited and non-progressive. Certain influential citizens were especially desirous of increasing the facilities for young girls. The movement met with opposition as being aristocratic, uncalled for, and a waste of public money. It was ultimately decided to create a senior department in the 12th Street grammar school, to be devoted to the higher education of young ladies.

Miss Wadleigh was invited from Freehold, N. J., to become the principal of this senior department. She entered upon her new duties February 6, 1856. The prospect was dubious. Only twenty-six pupils were present, and a few of these were restless under the new discipline. The public was slow to avail itself of its increased privileges. Books were needed, and there was dearth of funds. Everything moved heavily during the first year. Nothing daunted, Miss Wadleigh devoted herself to the onerous duties of her position, regardless of outside pressure or criticism. She was dignified, self-reliant, impartial in government, and accustomed to command. She enlarged the course of instruction until it included higher mathematics, higher astronomy, logic, natural and mental philosophy, and the languages.

For these extra studies no appropriation had been made by the board of education. The text-books had to be supplied and paid for by the teachers, assisted by the pupils. Miss Wadleigh collected books for reference, accustomed her pupils to memorize, to use the blackboards and globes, to avail themselves of the public libraries, and to be thorough in everything.

The school officers soon became convinced that what they had regarded as an experiment was destined to become a success. Eleven of the first twenty-six pupils remained to graduate. Miss Wadleigh prepared and paid for the diplomas given at the close of the three-years course, upon which occasion she inaugurated the annual commencements, which were so attractive that it became expedient to limit the invitations and admit by ticket.

No commencements had previously been held in any school in the city. From this date the senior department was crowded to its utmost capacity, and Miss Wadleigh's educational reputation was established beyond question. For a long term of years the senior department was regarded as the educational centre of New York. Her wonderful mental vigor pervaded everything. The grammar schools vied with each other to raise themselves to this higher plane, while the private and select classes found themselves dwarfed by the growing reputation of 12th Street.

Some fifteen years after the formation of the senior department, the pressure became so great it was found impossible to accommodate the increasing numbers. It was decided to establish a Normal college, and to incorporate into it the senior department of the 12th Street grammar school.

Miss Wadleigh was appointed vice-president of the Normal college (Prof. Hunter being president). Later she was made Professor of Ethics, being the first woman endowed with a professorship in that college. She was said to receive the largest salary of any lady teacher in the state.

Neither promotion nor fresh laurels reconciled Miss Wadleigh to the removal of the senior department from the place where so many literary triumphs had been achieved. She regarded her pupils with pride as well as affection. Of the five prizes awarded for excellence in scholarship to the first graduating class in the Normal college, four were given to 12th Street girls. And when the compositions for the commencement exercises were selected by a committee from whom the names of all the writers were concealed, all of the nine essays chosen were written by her 12th Street pupils.

Miss Wadleigh retained her position as vice-president, with ever increasing honor to herself and to the college, until her death.

Early in the summer of 1888 she had gone to Europe for recuperation and pleasure, by the advice of her physician. She became seriously ill in Paris. The discomforts of the return voyage developed the fatal malady that in a few weeks terminated her life. She was taken from the state-room directly to the residence of her niece, Mrs. Frank H. Chandler, in Brooklyn, where she received every attention that affection could suggest. A council of eminent physicians having decided that recovery was impossible, Miss Wadleigh received the intelligence with Christian resignation. She bore her sufferings with heroism, arranged for the final services, selected the hymns to be used, and asked the last favors of her pastor.

Miss Wadleigh expired quietly at 7 A. M., Oct. 27, 1888. The services were held first at the house, Rev. Dr. Cuyler being present and officiating. The services in New York were in the University Place Presbyterian church, and were conducted by Rev. Dr. George Alexander. The church was crowded, large numbers of her late pupils and former graduates, the faculty of the college, the board of education, many eminent citizens, and throngs of personal friends of the deceased being present.

From New York the casket was escorted to Sutton, where it was received by relatives, and the final services held in the Wadleigh homestead, now occupied by her nephew, Mr. Milton B. Wadleigh.

The burial was in the family lot in Sutton. The relatives and family friends being present, and Rev. Mr. Clark assisting, the casket was lowered by four nephews whom Miss Wadleigh had tenderly loved, and from whom she had solicited this last favor. Her own grave, and that of the brother beside whom she desired to rest, were strewn with evergreens and floral offerings.

What brighter illustration of individual influence could be desired than that afforded by the life of this representative woman? From her quiet, isolated home, without wealth or patronage beyond what other maidens could command, she takes her place in the educational ranks. At a period when the most experienced teachers were poorly paid, she was not only self-supporting, but always progressive! Slipping into the gaps that opened to her as she pressed forward to the front, she seems to have left traces of her influence everywhere. She visits the large cities, and where many fail Miss Wadleigh succeeds, and leaves a most honorable record. She is invited to the city of New York by the board of education, and assigned to the special trust of instructing the daughters of the better classes. For thirty long years she exerted a wonderful influence over thousands of young girls, who in their turn will mould the pliant characters of those to come after them. From salaries too small for mention, through her own individual merit she commanded thousands, and even then the sum was a trifle compared to the reward she received in the confidence and estimation of an appreciative public.

The Instructors, Graduates, and Students of the Normal College,
The lady principals of the Grammar Schools, and Other Friends of Miss Lydia F. Wadleigh,

in appreciation of her noble work as an Educator, have decided to establish a Memorial in the Normal College building. This is to be an Alcove, filled with books on Ethics, Philosophy, and Pedagogy, to be known as the Wadleigh Alcove.

[Extract from the Business Woman's Journal.]

The graduates, pupils, and teachers of the Old Senior Department of the 12th Street school propose to honor the memory of Miss Wadleigh by equipping the microscopical and chemical laboratories of the new building about to be purchased for the Woman's Medical College of the New York Infirmary.

A handsome marble tablet bearing her name, and a suitable inscription indicating the origin and intention of the endowment, will be placed in a conspicuous part of the hall devoted to that purpose. . . .

One of the last acts of Miss Wadleigh's life was to make a liberal donation toward the fund of this new building.

THOMAS WADLEIGH, ESQ.,

did not finally locate in Sutton till after the close of the Revolutionary war, in which struggle he was a participator, and was among the heroes at Bunker Hill. It is related of him that on that occasion, when the little band of patriots were compelled to retreat across the Neck, exposed alike to a raking fire from sea and land, one of his comrades, running for his life, cried out to him, "Why don't you run, Tom?" His response was, "Never will I run for a red-coat!" "I walked," said he, in relating it to our informant years afterwards, "as coolly, deliberately, and with as little fear as ever I walked from my house to my barn." Thomas Wadleigh served in the Revolutionary war six years and seven months. He was a native of Hampstead, and probably served for that town.

Mr. Dresser, in his notes of several of the early settlers, says of Thomas Wadleigh,—“He was very highly esteemed by the citizens of this town, for capacity, integrity, and patriotism.”

He was the first town-clerk after incorporation, and every year afterwards till 1806, a period of twenty-two years. He also represented the town in the legislature ten years, and was a captain in the militia. He was a civil magistrate.

All the offices of trust to which he was elected he filled with faithfulness and ability, while as a farmer he was as successful as he was in everything else he undertook. On the farm which he cleared with his own hands, and on which he reared a numerous family with comfort and honor, he resided till his death, which took place February 26, 1827, aged 72.

He was a clear-headed, large-hearted man, hospitable towards all, being one of whom the poor and needy never asked in vain for food or shelter. Sociable and affable in manner, his presence and bearing showed the stamp of nature's unmistakable seal of the true gentleman.

Thomas Wadleigh was born March 29, 1755; married

Dec. 11, 1783, Merriam Atwood. She died in 1843, aged 80. She was born Jan. 18, 1763. They had twelve children.

MRS. MEHITABEL (WADLEIGH) CARR.

In making up personal sketches of those men and women who lived and acted in this locality, and whose graves are visible in our burying-yards, no character stands out on the pictured walls of memory more peculiarly and strongly marked than that of Mrs. Carr.

She was the eldest daughter of the first Benjamin Wadleigh, Esq. Her mother was daughter of Ebenezer Kezar, and she thus inherited from both parents a large share of physical strength and vital energy, with a corresponding degree of mental power. Her educational advantages were such only as the common school afforded, which at that early period in the town's history were exceedingly meagre. Had her opportunities equalled her capacity for improvement, she would doubtless have taken a high rank in scholarly attainment.

She married early in life, and became the mother of two children. Her marriage, we have been told, was an unhappy one, and resulted in much domestic misery. Death, however, soon released her from matrimonial bondage, and ere long two little graves in the north burying-ground were all that remained to tell the world that Mrs. Carr had ever borne the name of wife or mother. Of this episode of her life she seldom spoke, and few there were who had the audacity to force an entrance, or even knock for admittance, to the secret cabinet of her heart's history, when she had closed the door in their faces. Whatever may have been her sufferings, she seemed to regard them as weaknesses. By an iron austerity of manner she alike rejected sympathy and repelled curiosity.

Thenceforth her character seemed to assume a new phase, in the form of religious development. In this direction, as in every other, she was strong, positive, and self-centred in her views and opinions. She was as much of a devotee in her conscientious performance of her duties to the Calvinist Church, as were her Catholic sisters, St. Cecilia and St. Ursula, to the Church of Rome. With her strong mental powers and psychologic will she became a power in the church, and could not fail to exert a controlling influence on the minds of both clergy and laity. In all church councils, especially touching matters of doctrine and discipline, in all female organizations connected with the church, such as missionary movements and the like, she was the acknowledged head and leader. Her mental powers were ever busy in the effort to reconcile the apparently conflicting doctrines of predestination and free moral agency, an effort in which she seemed to be quite as successful as any one ever was among the many millions who have wrestled with that difficult problem.

We would by no means ignore the existence of the gentler and more womanly virtues in her nature. Though her face was hard and its expression forbidding, her manner often curt and morose, yet she has been known to walk miles in a winter's day, through snow and storm, to assist a sick or distressed fellow-being, whether of her own religious creed or of no creed, thus asserting through her own act her recognition of a universal brotherhood and a common humanity.

To fashion, style, and custom she was altogether a non-conformist. She was her own milliner and dressmaker, as well as the cultivator of her own land. In her little house by the pond shore she dwelt alone, supplying by the labor of her own hands her material wants, almost scorning all offers of aid or companionship from others,—strong, even in her old age, in her courage and self-reliance. The only relaxation from hard labor, apart from religious duties, which she ever afforded herself, was an occasional visit to the village singing-school, vocal music being something in which she excelled, and which she much enjoyed. Its influence seemed to harmonize the somewhat discordant elements of her nature.

Thus she lived for years, in her isolation and stern independence, without sickness or the necessity of ever asking assistance from others. But, at last, one bleak winter's morning, her curtains remained undrawn, and no smoke ascended from the chimney. As the sun rose higher, neighbors drew near and entered the door, but it was found that an unseen visitor, the Death Angel, had entered before them, and held in his strong embrace the tenant of that lonely dwelling. Breath still lingered in the chill form, but all efforts to restore the physical vitality were unavailing, for the spirit was "outward bound" and would not turn back, and it was soon freed from the sinewy, strong structure that had served it so well for seventy-six years of mortal life.

Such types of strong individualism are not soon forgotten. The strongly marked features on the face of humanity, they stand out in bold relief, doing much to relieve it from the utter insipidity and sameness that would otherwise characterize its outward expression. Were we called upon to give a term that would symbolize the entire character of Mrs. Carr, we would simply utter the word strength.

WALKER.

Thomas Walker, sent to New England with other soldiers in the service of England during the French war, found opportunity to desert, and located somewhere in eastern Massachusetts or New Hampshire. He m. Abigail Philbrook, sister to Benjamin Philbrook, the tything-man, and had the following children :

I. George, b. —.

II. John, b. March 4, 1775.

III. Abigail, b. Oct. 23, 1778.

IV. Thomas, b. June 17, 1782.

III. Abigail Walker m. Joshua Flanders, and lived at the South village, where for some years Mr. Flanders operated a rifle-shop, but later moved from this town.

Before coming to Sutton to live Thomas Walker served in the Revolutionary war, and his son George served with him some portion of the time. The Thomas Walker named among the soldiers from Sutton in the War of 1812 is supposed to be his son.

I. George Walker m. Olive Whitcomb, the first female school-teacher in Sutton. Their children, as found in Sutton records, were,—

1. Thomas, b. Dec. 17, 1792; m. Betsey King.
2. James P., b. March 8, 1797.
3. Abigail, b. March 6, 1799.
4. Margaret, b. March 12, 1803; d. Jan. 8, 1884; m. Isaac Littlehale.

- (2) Alanson, b. Dec. 28, 1817.
- (3) Adeline. (4) Alonzo. (5) Angeline. (6) Maria. (7) James.
- (8) Frederick. (9) Olive. (10) Ednah.

Thomas Walker, Sr., d. in Sutton, 1822, at the great age of 103 years. Farmer and Moore's Gazetteer, printed in 1823, very shortly after Mr. Walker's death, may be supposed to be correct in the notice given of him under the head of Sutton. The remarkable circumstance of a man dying at that great age would naturally have led to some inquiry as to antecedents and origin, and as "Farmer and Moore" were at that very time making up their Gazetteer, it is not strange that Mr. Walker's case should have been reported to them among the Sutton items. The book says that Thomas Walker was a native of Wales, that he served in the French war and in the Revolutionary war, and was in several important battles,—Saratoga, White Plains, and Brandywine. Mr. Walker's wife also lived to a great age. She died in the winter of 1826 at the house of Samuel Kezar, in the north-west part of Sutton.

Hillsborough. During his life in Warner he became captain of the artillery company, and was said to make a fine appearance as an officer. He came to Sutton in 1837, purchasing one of the Wheeler farms upon Birch hill. He became prominent as a citizen, holding several town offices, and was very popular with all classes of people. WELCH.

Dr. Selim N. Welch, since 1877 a resident of Sutton, was born in Burke, Vt., Sept. 6, 1834. He was son of Moses Welch, of Warren, and Mary (Whicher), his wife, a native of Danville, Vt. He received his education at the common schools of his native town, and at St. Johnsbury academy. He studied medicine from 1860 to 1863 with Drs. Holbrook and Sanborn, of St. Johnsbury, and commenced practice in Peacham, Vt., April, 1863. In 1864 he moved to Cabot, Vt., where he resided till 1870. While living in Cabot he was engaged somewhat in real estate business, in connection with his practice. He was also connected with the U. S. Soldiers Hospital, at Montpelier, Vt., in the fall and winter of 1864-'65.

He married August, 1865, Louisa, eldest daughter of Theophilus E. and Rosetta Wilson, of Cabot, Vt. No children.

In 1870 Dr. Welch sold out in Cabot and moved to Roxbury, Vt., where he remained in the practice of his profession till 1875. He then sold out and spent a year in attending medical lectures, taking a degree from Dartmouth college in the fall of 1876. He bought out Dr. Bronson, in Sutton, in March, 1877. Since that time Dr. Welch has been a resident in Sutton, engaged in a very large and lucrative practice.

He is a member of the N. H. Medical Association, and is also a Freemason and a Granger.

While attending school at the academy, and while studying his profession, Dr. Welch followed teaching a portion of the time to procure funds necessary to pursue his studies. He has a local reputation as a public speaker, and has, by invitation, lectured at various places in this state and Vermont before good audiences. He was one of the historians of his native town for Miss Hemenway's "Vermont Gazetteer." In religious belief he is inclined to Universalism. In politics, he has usually acted with the Democratic party. He has never sought office, though something of a politician, preferring to give his time and attention to his profession, but has served as moderator at town-meetings several times, and is at present a member of the school-board.

The ancestors of both Abel Wheeler and his wife were among the early inhabitants of Sutton, Mass. The town of Croydon was granted in 1763, and most of the grantees were residents of Grafton, Mass., Sutton, and neighboring towns, which circumstance of course induced a large emigration from that vicinity. Among others came the Wheelers.

The Jehonnets (or, more properly, Johannots) were of French extraction. Daniel Johannot, with his parents, who were Protestants, came to this country and settled with other French Protestant families in Oxford, Mass., which town was granted in 1683, for the accommodation of about thirty French families, who had escaped from France after the Revocation of the Edict of Nantes.

The French Protestants, or Huguenots, as they are termed in history, proved a most valuable addition to the manufacturing arts and industries of this country, being, when they came, already skilled in those arts which had, at that date, made but little progress in this country. Some of the most useful inventions and improvements in manufacturing machinery have been made by those claiming descent from these French refugees from persecution.

Abel Wheeler moved into this town about 1840, with his wife and six sons, and continued to reside here till his death. His wife was a very intelligent, industrious, and worthy woman. Three of the six sons served in the army during the war, viz., Ransom, Leonard H., and J. Dearborn, and also one or more of the grandchildren. Leonard H. Wheeler was a man of much force of character. He was a good scholar, and when a young man was a good school-teacher. He held the office of selectman.

After his return from the war he was engaged quite largely in lumber business, and accumulated considerable property, and always bore a character of the highest honor. Isaac Jehonnet, brother to Mrs. Wheeler, lived in North Sutton several years. They had a daughter, Martha, who m. James Monroe Coburn, and had several children born in Sutton. [See Coburn.]

WHIDDEN.

James G. Whidden m. Mrs. Hoyt, a widow, and has ever since been a useful and respected citizen of this town, a period of between thirty and forty years, living most of the time in the Mill Village. They had no children. Her children, by first marriage, were George Hoyt, who has been for many years a resident in Haverhill and Bradford, Mass., engaged in shoe-making; William, who at one period drove the stage from Warner to New London, before the railroad was open to Bradford, married Sarah, dau. of Gilman Greeley, and had a daughter, Sarah; and third, Lucinda, who has always remained at home to care for her mother, who lived to be aged and helpless. Mr. Whidden has many times obliged his neighbors by managing at funerals, a position he is well adapted to fill by his polite manners and knowledge of the world's ways.

The Sutton Whitcomb family are descendants of Jacob Whitcomb, who was born in Stowe, Mass., 1743. He emigrated to Henniker in 1770, and after some years, about 1780, removed to Warner. Olive Whitcomb, the first female school-teacher in Sutton, was aunt to Daniel Whitcomb.

On the mother's side Daniel Whitcomb was a descendant, in the 4th generation, of Ebenezer Kezar, the man so noted in Sutton's early history, and he seemed to have inherited much of his ancestor's ingenuity and capability. He was a blacksmith, and lived, with the exception of a few years, in Manchester, always in the North village, where he had a house and shop. He had a fine taste in music and a superior voice for singing, and was a favorite and successful teacher of singing-schools. He died of quick consumption induced by measles. He was of a pleasant, genial, companionable disposition, and had many friends. His wife still survives, and her present residence is with her son, Joseph G. Whitcomb, Potter Place, Andover.

One who knew and well remembered the families of both Eliphalet and Stephen Woodward said of them,—
“The characteristics of the Woodwards, all of them, were honesty, integrity, and capability.”

He was a cooper by trade, and besides managing the large farm, found time to do considerable coopering work. He was captain in the "Grenadiers" of the old state militia. James Harvey Woodward was the eldest child of Capt. Jonathan and Dolly (Harvey) Woodward, and a grandson of Stephen Woodward and James Harvey, who were prominent among the early settlers of the town. He resided at Sutton till 1835, when he went to Brighton, Mass., where he worked for several years as a carpenter. He afterwards purchased a lumber wharf at Brighton, and did an extensive business as surveyor of lumber. In 1860 he removed to North Cambridge, Mass., and opened a furniture store on North Avenue, where he built up a large and lucrative business.

Mr. Woodward was a man of activity and great natural ability. When he first arrived at Brighton, a young man of twenty, after paying his stage fare he had only two dollars in his pocket. In after years, through his own efforts, he became a man of wealth. He applied himself closely to business, and never sought political preferment. He was often urged by his friends to permit the use of his name as a candidate for various offices in the city government, but always refused.

For many years he was a prominent member of the Unitarian church at Brighton, of which the Rev. Frederick A. Whitney was the honored pastor, and for a time served as deacon of this church. After his removal to Cambridge he united with the North Avenue Universalist church. His religion had no Calvinistic flavor, but he fully believed in the fatherhood of God and the brotherhood of man. He was one of the many men who have gone forth from Sutton to achieve success in wider fields. He ever manifested a deep interest in his native town, which he annually visited, that he might meet his old friends and acquaintances. Sept. 21, 1843, he married Abigail G. Rice, youngest daughter of Dea. Edmund and Abigail (Maynard) Rice, of Brighton. They had four children, all of whom died in youth. The loss of his children was a blow from which he never fully recovered. He died Dec. 1, 1885, and was buried in the family lot on a beautiful elevation in the Cambridge cemetery.

DANIEL EMERY.

The following, received too late for insertion in its proper place, is here added, the interest attaching to the fact of Mr. Emery's having served in both our wars with England making it important to preserve all that can be learned concerning him. The information was obtained through the agency of Charles E. Emery, of New York city, and from Rev. Rufus Emery, who is now engaged in collecting material for a history of the Emery family.

This Daniel Emery was baptized in Newbury, Mass., Feb. 26, 1764. The baptism of infants usually took place on the 2d Sunday after birth. He settled in Sutton, and m. Mary Jones, and d. in Wilnot, Aug. 29, 1850. His wife d. Nov. 12, 1849. Children,—

I. John, b. March, 1795 ; d. when 18 years of age.

II. Daniel, m. Rebecca Chase.

III. Ezra, m. Jane Dole.

IV. Judith, m. Eben White. She was b. 1804.

V. Timothy, b. 1808 ; m. Fanny Jones.

It was within the recollection of Sutton people that Mr. Emery's wife was a daughter of Ezra Jones, Sr., the first miller, but there was some confusion as to her given name. Mary is not found on the Sutton record of Mr. Jones's children, probably because she was born before the family came to Sutton. The Betsey or Hitty who is marked III of Ezra Jones's children on page 780 of this history, should therefore read simply "Betsey, b. June 16, 1788," as it is here made certain that she is not, as was supposed, the wife of Daniel Emery.

It is also fully established by the knowledge and recollection of Sutton people that the Daniel Emery who is named among the soldiers from Sutton in the War of 1812 is Daniel Emery, Sr., and not his son Daniel, as has been suggested lately. The circumstance of his serving in both wars was frequently spoken of by the old people, and never doubted or contradicted. It will be seen that the name on the list of 1812 soldiers was not Daniel Emery, Jr.

As to Mr. Emery's Revolutionary service his pension record gives the following information :

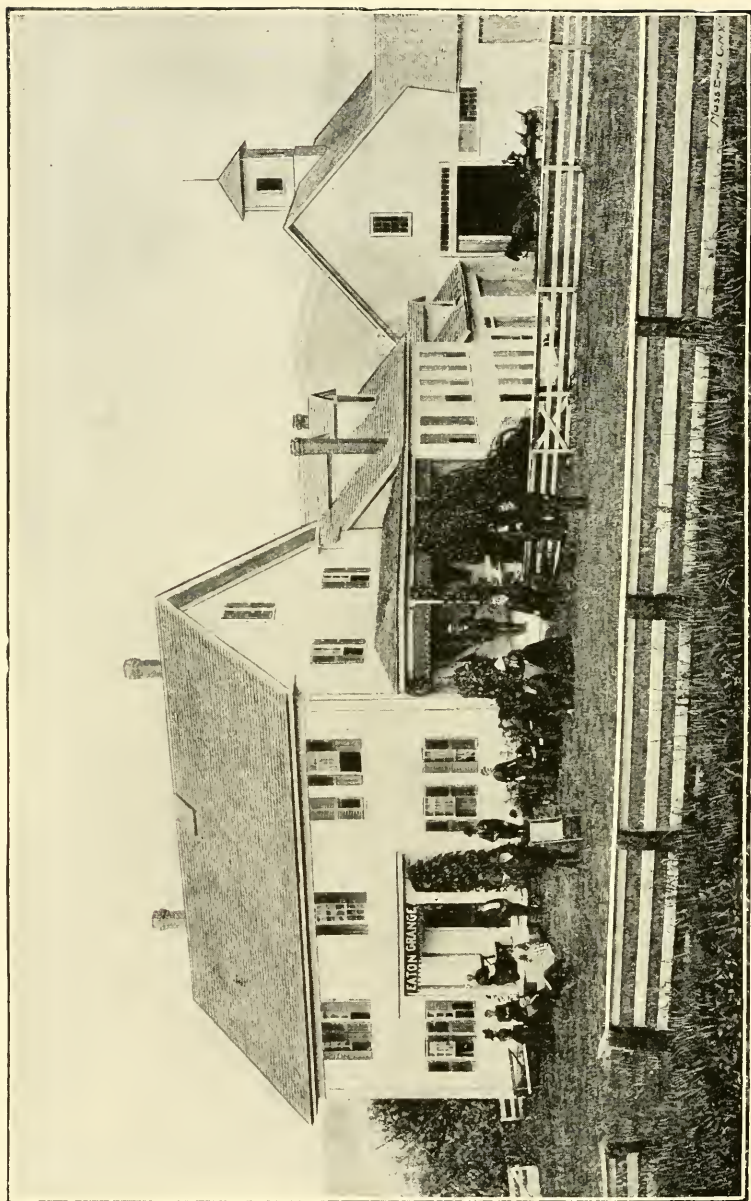

He enlisted for three years in March, 1780 or '81, under Capt. Eleazer Frye, in Col. Dearborn's regiment (called the 1st). He joined this company at a place called Soldier's Fortune, near West Point, N. Y. In November, 1821, he was aged 57 years, and his wife, named Mary, was aged 53 years at the same date, his daughter Judith, aged 17, and son Timothy, aged 13.

DEAF AND DUMB.

In 1822 the legislature of New Hampshire made appropriation of a sum of money to be expended at Hartford Institute for the education of such deaf mutes as desire an education.

Ozro Kimball, son of John and Lucinda (Fowler) Kimball, was born in Sutton Sept. 7, 1811. When about three years old he lost his hearing, in consequence of being very sick with canker-rash. His uncle, Capt. Levi Fowler, was much interested in the child, and, after some years' time and considerable effort, managed to obtain admission for him to the asylum at Hartford, taking him there himself. He was remarkably smart and intelligent, learned rapidly, and acquired a good education. He grew to manhood, married a deaf-mute, a lady whose acquaintance he made at the asylum. They had three children, all of them bright and intelligent, and they can hear perfectly well. Mr. Kimball was for several years employed in a pianoforte manufactory in Boston, where he had charge of some department of the work. He acquired a good property. He was killed on a railroad a few years ago, not hearing the approaching train behind him, when he imprudently attempted to cross the track.

Mary Ann Parker, daughter of Elisha and Lydia (Ambrose) Parker, also lost her hearing in consequence of canker-rash. She had just begun to speak some words, and those she never forgot. She was very quick to learn, and possessed of remarkable beauty. When she was twelve years old she could "cipher," as it was then termed, as far as the "rule of three," her cousin, David Davis, having taught her by a process of his own invention. She usually attended school because she chose to go with her brothers and sisters. While in school she used to spend most of her time in writing, the teacher setting her copies willingly. Soon after she was twelve years of age she was sent to Hartford Asylum for her education, went through the course of study, and became a teacher there. Some years elapsed, and her health failing, her cousin, David Davis, sent for her to come to him, and when she came, evidently far gone in consumption, he married her, as he wrote to a friend, in order to take care of her. She soon after died. She was born July 23, 1815.

EATON GRANGE.

EATON GRANGE.

Eaton Grange, the summer home of the sons and daughters of John Eaton, is located in the south-eastern part of the town of Sutton, on the road from South Sutton to Warner, near the highest point of Kimball's hill, so called from Caleb Kimball, its first settler, who is supposed to have come here about 1780-'81. The altitude of the site is some twelve hundred feet above sea level. The air is breezy, cool, and most healthful. The roads are hilly, but the drives are embowered with trees, shady and attractive, and the views from the open heights are magnificent. South-eastwardly can be seen the steeples of the Warner churches; southerly is Stuart mountain, 1800 feet high; south-westwardly is Lovell's mountain. Turning to the right the eye takes in Sunapee mountain, at whose base nestles Sunapee lake in all its beauty, at an altitude of about 1,100 feet; then Dresser's, King's, and New London hills, the last with its church and academy, until directly to the north the eye rests upon Kearsarge which in its majesty crowns the surrounding landscape at the height of 2,942 feet. The summit of the mountain is about eight miles from the Grange, toward which it descends continuously to Stevens brook as that courses its way toward Warner river along the foot of Kimball's hill. It is supposed that the location of Mr. Kimball's buildings was determined by the proximity of a rock-sheltered spring, on the northerly slope of the hill, of exceptionally pure water, still greatly prized.

In 1784, the town voted "to appoint a committee to accept the road laid out, passing by Joseph Wadleigh's (South Sutton) and Caleb Kimball's to Warner." Here is evidence of the home on the hill and of the highway to the commerce of the world. For a generation this was the main road, hilly as it was, of travel south and south-easterly for a large population in more northerly towns. The increasing travel suggested a tavern, and soon the moderate-sized red house, first built, gave way to a more pretentious mansion. Here for years at night the weary traveller found rest and food for himself and beast. Sometimes the number of lodgers was so great that they slept in rows on the floor. Here news was exchanged from the up-country and the city. Those still living recall the busy and merry scenes presented. On the broad field at the east the militia paraded at regimental muster, and the children and adults of this and surrounding towns gathered in gala dress to enjoy the holiday and the martial display. On the opposite side of the road near the barn, Mr. Bartlett, of Warner, established a store, which was tended by his son Levi, afterward the well known agricultural and historical writer. Mr. Levi Bartlett in his old age said to the Eatons,—“I have known seven generations of your family.”

In 1786, Caleb Kimball was one of a committee to locate the south meeting-house, and, as one of the selectmen, had care of the expenditure of twelve pounds raised that year for the support of schools. His home was in the “third district,” and the school for his children was located on the ledge at the brow of the hill south of the road and within view of his home—a sightly spot, a solid foundation. Rev. Dr. Horace Eaton, his grandson, who took his first lessons in this school-house, was wont to say that his education was “founded on a rock.” Here the children and grandchildren of Mr. Kimball attended school, and in part acquired the intelligence for which they were noted. Tradition tells us of the sensation of admiration and wonder produced by a visit to the school of a soldier returned from the War of 1812, dressed in a captain’s red coat. When another and better “people’s college” was built, at a point on the road farther toward Warner near the Benjamin Kendrick place, this old house was removed to the new district on the road passing Jonathan Roby’s, and rebuilt near Thomas Morgan’s where it remains to this day. In this house John Eaton, afterward U. S. Commissioner of Education, at sixteen years of age taught his first school.

Near the school-house on the ledge, crossing the road, John Eaton, who married Mary Kimball, built his first house, carried on his trade as a brazier, and opened a store. All trace of this home is now gone except the cellar, the well, and the tansy patch. On the opposite side of the road lived Jonathan Stevens, whose daughter became Mrs. Jacob Osgood, and died in Warner over one hundred and two years of age. Only the old well and a slight depression of ground mark the site of the Stevens house.

The next house crossing the road at the foot of the first hill was the home of Elijah Eaton. It is now vacant. Elijah was the brother of John Eaton, above mentioned, and of the centenarian, Nathaniel Eaton, who lived farther down the road. Here Elijah's son, Carlos, lived, raised his family, and died. Then came the Kendricks—Samuel, William, and Benjamin—the children of Dudley Kendrick, whose home was the second of these, the William Kendrick house. The Samuel Kendrick house was at one time occupied by John Morgan, and is now occupied by John Colby and his son Demerit. The William Kendrick house, once occupied by the Simmonses, by Holton Martin, and the Philbrooks, is now vacant. The Benj. Kendrick homestead, once occupied by his daughter, Mrs. P. S. H. Wadleigh and family, is now owned by Leonard F. E. Dresser. Near here Benj. Kendrick had a blacksmith shop. The new house, built by Benj. Kendrick across the road and occupied by his widow until her death, is now removed to a point opposite Hon. Geo. C. Eaton's.

A few rods up the road from the Benj. Kendrick homestead was erected, about 1824, the successor to the school-house on the ledge near the grange. This was burnt, and the old red school-house across the road appeared, in which all the Eaton brothers and sisters went to school. In 1884 this was changed into a new and more commodious white house. But it is no longer crowded as were the older ones with hearty children. The few who attend of another generation still play in the sand, build their miniature stone walls around their miniature farms, houses, and barns, roll up the big snow-balls, slide gaily down the hill, and have their childish quarrels as those before them.

The next house below the Kendricks on the south side was the home of Edward Ordway, father of Samuel Ordway and ancestor of all our Ordways. It is now occupied by the widow and children of Daniel Ordway. Of the next house on the same side of the road, Joseph Johnson's, nothing remains to mark the site but the orchard.

Nearly opposite stands the mansion, built in 1814 by John Adams, who married Sally Kimball. They first settled and lived on the summit of Adams hill near by. His son John Adams afterwards occupied the homestead now owned by Highgate Jordan. On the other side, at the corner of the Waterloo road, stands the house built by Edward Ordway, the son of the Edward above mentioned. It is now the home of Hon. Jacob K. Adams, who represented Sutton in the state legislature, as it was of his father, B. F. Adams. Across the Waterloo road from here was the home of John Kezar, 1814-'20, which long since disappeared.

On the north side farther down stands the mansion, built in 1814, of Nathaniel Eaton, who lived to celebrate, in the possession of all his faculties to a remarkable degree, his hundredth birthday. It is now occupied by his son, Hon. Geo. C. Eaton. The next house, and the last before passing from Sutton into Warner, was the home of Jonathan Rowell and his sons Ira and Silas Rowell, later of George and Charles Rowell, the sons of Silas, and now of James B. Sawyer.

Passing westerly from Eaton Grange, the first house was that of Peter Peaslee, son of David, of which only the cellar remains in what has ever since been known as the "Peter orchard." At the foot of the hill, near the corner of the road leading to North Sutton, lived the Taylors. Here at one time was a busy centre,—a tavern, a store, a potash, a tannery, and a cooper shop. All traces of this home and these activities have disappeared excepting the cellar, the vat-holes of the tannery, and the orchard of the old Taylor homestead. Several of the Taylor sons became clergymen;—one, Rev. Wm. Taylor, organized many Baptist churches, among them those in Bradford and Concord, N. H. He was one if not the chief of the founders of the academy at New Hampton, N. H., and of the college at Kalamazoo, Mich.

In this Taylor homestead also afterward resided Mr. Silsby, a clergyman, who carried the mail on horseback through a considerable region of this county, and announced his approach by a blast from his tin horn.

Down the roadway towards North Sutton is the steep hill known as Potash hill.

Rising the Downing hill on the road towards South Sutton, on the north side, is the cellar which marks the site of the old home of Seth Downing, afterward occupied by Joseph Peaslee.

About an eighth of a mile up the South Sutton road from its junction with the North Sutton road on the north side, David Peaslee, above mentioned, made the first settlement in the town of Sutton. The site is now covered with forest, and is marked only by a few surviving apple-trees. All these places named, westwardly from the Grange, are now included in the Eaton estate. . . .

John Eaton succeeded his grandfather, Caleb Kimball, in the ownership of Eaton Grange. He was a conquering farmer, who by indomitable energy and unceasing industry added farm to farm, until he was said to own "all the land adjoining him." His children retain about one thousand acres, perhaps one half of what belonged at one time to their father. They have removed the barns from the south side of the road and remodelled the other buildings, retaining the old two-story house with its massive frame of oak and pine, so firmly put together that it has been said it could be rolled down the hillside to Stevens's brook without breaking to pieces.

The sons and daughters of John Eaton, who are the present proprietors, have all resided beyond the limits of the state of New Hampshire for over twenty-five years; but hither they come with their families as opportunity permits for their summer rest and recreation. They are John Eaton of Marietta, Ohio, Mrs. S. M. Pennock of Winter Hill, Somerville, Mass., Nathan A. Eaton of Encinitas, San Diego Co., Cal., Frederick Eaton of Toledo, Ohio, Lucien B. Eaton of Memphis, Tenn., Christina L. Eaton of Memphis, Tenn., James A. Eaton of Grand Rapids, Mich., and Charles Eaton of Memphis, Tenn. These Eaton brothers and sisters have restored and beautified their old home, and, as they could, have made an annual pilgrimage to it, not simply for their own pleasure, but as some expression of the tender affection which they cherish for the father whom they honor and for the mother whose memory they idolize. It is a matter of great thankfulness to them that the ranks of this band of six brothers and two sisters had not been broken by death up to the close of 1889. During the first days of Sept., 1889, these brothers and sisters were all together at the old homestead, the first time for forty years.

Gen. John Eaton, the oldest, has always been the executive in charge of the affairs of Eaton Grange, and Miss Christina L. Eaton, its matron and hostess. To the devotion and admirable management of Miss Christie are due in the largest degree the pleasures of the delightful family reunions at the Grange.

Here have gathered every summer, without interruption for over fifteen years, some of them with their friends and their kindred scattered from Maine to California. The latch-string hangs out to all, with a warmer welcome to any of the Kimball, Eaton, Andrews, or Gregg lineage. All mere formal restraint is laid aside. All are children again. The old mansion resounds with laughter and frolic, song, music, and the dance, and in turn come earnest discussions and tearful memories. As Dr. Jacob S. Eaton, the brother of John Eaton, was wont to remark, "Perfect order and perfect freedom reign."

Sometimes large parties of friends arrive, lunch is served, toasts given, speeches made, side-splitting stories told, the old familiar songs are sung, and then perhaps visits to the spring, and music and dance and round and round of jollity.

On Sabbaths, in the days of Rev. Horace Eaton, D. D., came friends from the neighborhood, and sometimes from more distant villages, to hear his thoughtful, eloquent, and sometimes very touching discourses. One of these sermons, upon the text II Samuel 23: 15, "And David longed and said, 'O that one would give me drink of the water of the well of Bethlehem which is by the gate,'" will never be forgotten by those who heard him. He dwelt upon the heart's yearning for the old scenes and hearthstones, and the beauty of children's restoring the old dwelling, and gathering as here in the home of their parents and their childhood.

It was the delight of the Eaton brothers and sisters to see how dear the old place was to their uncles, Dr. Jacob S. Eaton of Harvard, Mass., and of Rev. Dr. Horace Eaton of Palmyra, N. Y., and to their aunts, the sisters of their father, Mrs. Ruth K. Sherburne, Mrs. Sally Dresser, and Miss Lucretia K. Eaton. Here they found the fountain of youth, and revelled in the scenes of their childhood. Dr. Horace wandered over the fields and climbed the hills as one in a trance, possessed of a heavenly vision. Dr. Jacob and "Aunt Ruth" referred to it to the last with the enthusiasm and rapture of a Mohammedan saint to the Mecca of his joy. "A charm from the skies seemed to hallow them" here.

An instance of the gay humor of Dr. Jacob S. Eaton when here, even in his old age, must be perpetuated. At eighty-two years of age, he sat at the table with aunt Christina (Andrews) Callan, of Washington, D. C., then seventy years of age. As he met her at the breakfast table his first morning, taking her hand warmly and drawing her slightly and gently aside, he said to her with the grace of a cavalier, "Madam, I dreamed of you last night."

Among the most interesting incidents of the reunions at the Grange was the golden wedding of "Aunt and Uncle Sherburne," Sept. 6, 1875, of which a contemporary newspaper gave the following account:

EATON FAMILY GROUP.

One of the most delightful social gatherings which has taken place in this neighborhood for many a day was that at the old 'Kimball mansion' otherwise known as 'Eaton Grange,' on the occasion of the golden wedding of Mr. and Mrs. Robert H. Sherburne, of Concord, on Monday, the 6th inst. The ancient mansion in Sutton, from which the bride was married fifty years ago, is now the summer home of the Eaton brothers and sisters, the eldest of whom is Gen. John Eaton, Commissioner of the Educational Bureau, Washington, D. C. Thither they come with kith and kin to forget business cares for a few weeks, and to refresh their hearts and health in that high place among the hills and mountains. It was very appropriate that the venerable couple around whom the chief interest centred should have complied with the wishes of their nieces and nephews at the Grange, and come back to the old homestead to celebrate their golden nuptials, bringing with them their children and children's children.

The weather was everything that could be wished, the company numerous and in a mood to enjoy themselves, and the reception most hospitable and gracious. Of the immediate relatives present, there were Gen. John Eaton, wife and three children; Judge and Mrs. S. M. Pennock, of Somerville, Mass.; Col. Lucien B. Eaton, U. S. Marshal of Memphis, Tenn., his wife and son; Miss Christina L. Eaton, of Memphis, Tenn.; James A. Eaton and wife, of Adrian, Mich.; and Charles Eaton and wife, of Toledo, Ohio. Mr. and Mrs. Sherburne have four children, twelve grandchildren, and four great-grandchildren. Of their family present there were Joseph Sherburne, Mrs. Rolfe and husband, Hon. Henry P. Rolfe and two children, Mrs. Col. Jesse A. Gove and her daughter Jessie. The younger son, Robert H. Sherburne, Jr., a resident of McHenry, Ill., was unable to be present. A sister of Mrs. Sherburne, the wife of the late Samuel Dresser, of Sutton, and her son, Mr. Leonard Dresser, were guests.—also her brother, Rev. Horace Eaton, D. D., of Palmyra, N. Y., and Mrs. Frederick Eaton, of Warner. Of the cousins and more distant relatives who came up to greet the happy couple, may be mentioned Geo. C. Eaton and lady, Mr. and Mrs. Carlos Eaton, Moses Hazen and wife, Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Adams of Sutton, Mr. and Mrs. Allen of Fisherville, Mrs. Wadleigh of Manchester, Dr. and Mrs. Rix, Mr. and Mrs. A. C. Carroll, Mr. and Mrs. L. H. Adams of Warner, Mrs. J. Y. Mugridge of Concord, and Mrs. John Andrews of Melrose, Mass. Besides these were present, Rev. Dr. Eames, Hon. Geo. G. Fogg, Mrs. ex-Gov. Harriman, Concord, N. H., Enoch Page and daughter, James Sawyer and wife, Rev. Mr. Moody, wife and daughter, Mrs. Dr. Smiley and daughter, of Sutton, Col. N. G. Ordway, Rev. Wm. H. Walker and wife, Rev. M. A. Gates, Robert Thompson and daughter, Hiram Buswell and daughter, Henry L. Harris, Misses Amanda B. and Mary Harris, Dr. Cogswell and wife, Mr. and Mrs. Ira Harvey, Mrs. Dr. Wilson, Mr. and Mrs. H. H. Harriman, Willard Graves, Mrs. Dr. Frank W. Graves, Mr. and Mrs. Uriah Ager, Levi Bartlett, Mrs. Lavinia K. Davis, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. K. Bartlett, Alfred W. Sargent, Geo. Barnard, Mrs. Julia A. Barnard, Mr. and Mrs. B. F. Heath, P. S. H. Wadleigh, all of Warner, and Rev. and Mrs. John C. Ager, of Brooklyn, N. Y.

The religious exercises were conducted by Rev. Dr. Eames, the pastor of the Sherburne family, in the same room in which, fifty years before, the marriage ceremony had been solemnized. First, "Praise God from whom all blessings flow" was sung. Then followed a most impressive prayer and benediction upon the venerable pair, this part closing with "Blest be the tie that binds," which was sung by all present.

Gen. Eaton, in behalf of the brothers and sisters, made an informal address, tenderly welcoming the bride and bridegroom, referring to the past history of the old mansion and those who had dwelt under its roof-tree—a touching, eloquent memorial, coupled with words of cheer and gratitude.

Hon. H. P. Rolfe followed with feeling remarks, alluding in pleasant terms to the relationship which existed between himself and the family and to the member of it who for more than a score of years had walked life's uneven road by his side.

Letters from friends who were unable to be present were read by Col. Lucien B. Eaton, among them a charming, gossipy one, full of reminiscences, from Dr. Jacob S. Eaton, of Harvard, Mass., a brother of the bride, and an off-hand and very felicitous one from Hon. Wm. E. Chandler. Most kindly congratulatory letters were also read from kindred in distant states, from Rev. Dr. N. Bouton, Rev. Dr. Cummings, and many others. Dr. Bouton's letter, coming from one who was married the same day, and who for a long time lived a near neighbor to Mr. and Mrs. Sherburne, was particularly interesting. Levi Bartlett gave some genealogical data and facts concerning the ancestry of the family, who were of the right blue and the right true blood. Hon. Geo. G. Fogg, a classmate of Dr. Horace Eaton, responded to a call on him in a few fitting words, in which he eulogized the spirit of young men who, having left the paternal roof in New Hampshire and gone out into the world to meet wealth and fame, are not ashamed of the old homestead, but return to beautify it as the boys of that sturdy old farmer, the late John Eaton, are doing to-day. Hon. N. G. Ordway, like the late Mr. Lincoln, was reminded of "a little story," and so told it. Rev. Dr. Horace Eaton was the last to give one of those informal addresses, in which there had been such a mingling of the joyful, the grave, and the gay, of the memorial and the congratulatory. His happy little speech combined the facetious, the tender, and the religious. The benediction was pronounced by Elder Moody, of Sutton, formerly pastor of the Eaton family.

All through these pleasing exercises, music had come in at intervals to do its part toward the entertainment. In addition to the two hymns sung at the earlier stages of the exercises, many ballads followed that are dear to our common humanity, the sweet familiar words of "John Anderson my Jo, John," "The Last Rose of Summer," "The Land o' the Leal," "Oft in the Stilly Night," concluding with "Home, Sweet Home." Miss Jessie Gove rendered them with good effect, being accompanied on the violin by Mrs. John Eaton.

Refreshments were most generously served by many kind hands, grace having been said by Rev. Mr. Walker, after which many of the party retired to the pleasant grounds just west of the house. Here the inspiring strains from the violin recalled the gay scenes of former years to some who had long been unused to the mazy dance, and Mr. and Mrs. Sherburne lead the dance on the greensward in the old orchard. In the same set danced Levi Bartlett, having for a partner Mrs. Dr. Frank Graves. Col. Ordway was especially jolly, and did all he could by precept and example to keep up the fun. Valuable presents were made, among them a handsome gold-headed cane to Mr. Sherburne. And now guest after guest departs, leaving the happy old couple to the enjoyment of the present hour, and grateful to the proprietors of "the Grange" for a day of pleasure.

But the glad faces of these gray-haired children of that generation of Eatons, that of the former John Eaton, will probably never more be seen at the Grange. There were in all seven brothers and five sisters. The last survivor of the generation, Lucien B. Eaton, never visited the old hive after 1837.

Of the descendants of Caleb Kimball beside the Eatons, who have shared largely and successfully in the activities of life, may be mentioned his son, Jacob Sawyer Kimball, the jeweller, of Montpelier, Vt., his grandsons, Edwin H. and Franklin Haddock, capitalists, of Chicago, Ill., Lorenzo K. Haddock, a lawyer, of Buffalo, N. Y., Lemuel Adams, a large farmer, of Sheldon, Vt., Caleb Kimball Adams, the prosperous farmer, of Ogden, N. Y., Hon. Wm. Henry McCrillis, lawyer and capitalist, of Bangor, Me., Mrs. Harriet (McCrillis) Griswold, widow of the author, Dr. Griswold, Hon. Jacob Kimball Moore, merchant and farmer, of Griggsville, Ill.; his great-grandsons, Dr. J. S. Adams, an eminent physician and surgeon, of Oakland, Cal., Edward Payson Adams, a manufacturer and large farmer, of Swanton, Vt., John Adams Andrews, a leading merchant, of Boston, Mass., Rev. John Q. Adams, of San Francisco, Cal., and Miss Harriet Andrews, the artist, in Boston.

To one raised on the farms among the New Hampshire hills who returns to the scenes of his childhood, one of the most striking features is the number of homesteads, as shown in the above sketch, of which nothing remains except the cellar, the old well, the orchard with trees full of dead branches or decrepit and broken down with age, and perhaps the tansy patch, or the lilac- or rose-bush. These are touchingly and mournfully suggestive of the hardy pioneers who drove out the wild beasts, cleared the forests, so thoughtfully planted these apple-trees, and with lofty cheer heroically wrestled with these rocky soils for a livelihood, and who here sheltered their loved ones from the wintry storms around these once blazing hearth-stones. These fires which lighted up the faces of soberer age and of the children, who frolicked and laughed as others of a softer fortune, have long since died out, and the paths to these thresholds long since ceased to be frequented. All have gone. The weary pioneers rest from their labors ; and if their children survive, they are scattered, gray-haired and feeble with age, through the great West.

CALEB KIMBALL,

AND HIS DESCENDANTS, EATON, HADDOCK, ADAMS (JOHN), ADAMS (LEMUEL), KIMBALL, MOORE, PINKERTON, McCRILLIS.

Caleb Kimball was one of the earliest selectmen of the town, and one of the largest tax-payers. He was one of a committee in 1784 to locate a meeting-house, and served his fellow-citizens at various times. He was one of those who built the first saw-mill, at the foot of Jones's hill on Lane's brook. Tradition says that he spent one year in town preparing his farm, camping in the forest, before bringing his family. Benjamin and Asa Kimball appear as proprietors of Perrystown or Sutton. Caleb Kimball was born Sept. 25, 1748, in Hampstead, N. H., originally a part of Haverhill, Mass. He married, Feb. 8, 1769, Sarah, daughter of Edmund and Sarah (Rowell) Sawyer, of Hampstead. They lived two years in Hampstead, then moved to Goffstown, remaining there eleven years, when he removed his family to Sutton. Mr. Kimball was a prominent contributor to the early development of the town. In his later years he suffered from paralysis agitans, or shaking palsy. His wife was characterized by strength of intellect and high purpose, and heartily seconded her husband in his endeavors for advancement. No efforts were spared for their children.

We are indebted to S. P. Sharpley, Esq., of Boston, for the following succinct account of the ancestors of Caleb Kimball.

A. Richard Kimball, b. 1593 ; d. June 22, 1675 : m. Ursula Scott. He came from Ipswich, England, on the ship Elizabeth, Capt. Andrews, master, which sailed April, 1634. He first took up land in Watertown, afterwards, about 1637, moved to Ipswich, Mass., where he died.

He was deputy secretary of state from 1850 to 1855, and was then appointed captain of Company I, 10th Regular U. S. Infantry, recruited his company, and was ordered to Fort Snelling, Minn. Here he served until the Mormon rebellion broke out. He participated with his regiment in this service and in other arduous frontier duty until the War of the Rebellion. Vice-President Henry Wilson had just raised the 22d Massachusetts Infantry, and tendered him the colonelcy of it, which he accepted. Massachusetts had no better regiment and no abler commander. His regiment in the Army of the Potomac, under McClellan, actively participated in the battles before Richmond, and Colonel Gove fell while gallantly leading his command at Gaines's Mill, Va., June 22, 1862. She was gifted with a fine literary and poetic taste. She came to see her mother, and to aid in the care of her the last of her life. She spent her last years with her brother John, in Sutton, and d. at Eaton Grange, Dec. 9, 1852.

John Eaton, b. Nov. 7, 1798, learned the currier's trade at Croydon, and worked at this for Consul Jarvis at Weathersfield, Vt., and afterward for his uncle, Wm. Haddock, in that portion of Salisbury now known as Franklin. His grandfather, Caleb Kimball, when aged, offered him his homestead farm on Kimball's hill if he would take charge of it and support him and wife till death. He accepted this proposition, and became a farmer. He m. in Sutton, June 5, 1828, Janet Collins, b. in Fishersfield, Jan. 2, 1808, the daughter of Nathan and Hannah (Gregg) Andrews. In John Eaton was united remarkable vigor of mind and body. He was a man of great energy and industry, and added farm to farm until he was the largest land owner in his section. He contributed to the excellent education which his children received. In Mrs. Eaton were blended strength and gentleness with the loftiest spirit of consecration of the New England mother. She sought to communicate to her children aspirations for a broader and higher life. She seized every opportunity for their education, but was still more eager for their religious training. She often gathered them about her, "as a hen gathereth her chickens," for prayer. She pointed to heaven and led the way. Mrs. Janet Collins Eaton d. Feb. 7, 1846, and her husband, John Eaton, May 9, 1873. Children,—

John Eaton, like all his brothers and sisters, was kept at hard, manual work through his youth when not attending school. In addition to his schooling in his district, and a few extra terms at Warner and Bradford, he was educated at the academy at Thetford, Vt., under Hiram Orcutt, LL. D., Dartmouth college, and Andover (Mass.) Theological Seminary. He graduated from Dartmouth college in 1854, and became principal of a school in Cleveland in the same year. He was superintendent of schools of Toledo, O., from 1856 to 1859.

His educational work was begun in his sixteenth year, and before entering Thetford academy by teaching one term in the Morgan district, near his home. The school-house still stands unchanged. With the exception of $243 dollars furnished by his father, young Eaton paid the entire expense of his education from his own earnings.

He was ordained minister of the gospel, and in August, 1861, he became chaplain of the 27th Ohio Volunteer Infantry. In the fall of 1861 he was taken prisoner at Lexington, Mo. When our troops retired from Springfield, Mo., he volunteered to stay behind with Colonel, now Major-General, J. W. Fuller, of Toledo, O., who was sick and expected to die, becoming again a prisoner in the Confederate lines, and while there was called upon to preach to the Confederate soldiers. The colonel, however, recovered, and they were both allowed to reach the Union lines at Rolla in safety.

In 1862 he became brigade sanitary inspector. He was appointed by General Grant in Nov., 1862, superintendent of the colored people, who came into the lines of his army by thousands and tens of thousands in northern Alabama, western Tennessee, and northern Mississippi. His supervision extended with the operations of the Army of the Tennessee from Cairo to the mouth of the Red river, and up the Arkansas to Fort Smith, and came to embrace also the care of the thousands of white refugees that flocked to the Federal lines, and were furnished food, clothing, and medicines, and sent to places of safety. He had an office and force of assistants at each military post. Under his administration the colored people were, as far as possible, made self-supporting, and all possible forms of industry were devised for them. They were cooks, nurses in the hospitals, laborers in the army; thousands and thousands of cabins were built, wood cut, cotton, corn, and vegetables raised. Marriage obligations were enforced, schools were established in which benevolent teachers from the North did great service. These schools became largely self-supporting. His camps, it is estimated, furnished over 70,000 colored soldiers.

General Grant, in his Personal Memoirs, refers to this service of Chaplain Eaton as follows:

It was at this point, probably, where the first idea of a "Freedman's Bureau" took its origin. Orders of the government prohibited the expulsion of the negroes from the protection of the army when they came in voluntarily. Humanity forbade allowing them to starve. . . . The plantations were all deserted: the cotton and corn were ripe: men, women, and children above ten years of age could be employed in saving these crops. To do this work with contrabands, or to have it done, organization under a competent chief was necessary. On inquiring for such a man, Chaplain Eaton, now and for many years the very able United States Commissioner of Education, was suggested. He proved as efficient in that field as he has since done in his present one.

Chaplain Eaton became colonel of the 63d Colored Infantry, and was made brigadier-general by brevet, and in May, 1865, assistant commissioner of the Freedman's Bureau, and was ordered to Washington, D. C.

In 1866 General Eaton founded and was editor of the Memphis Post, a daily, weekly, and tri-weekly Republican paper. In 1867 he was elected state superintendent of public instruction for Tennessee, and secured the attendance of 185,000 pupils in the new schools. He was appointed United States Commissioner of Education by General Grant, and assumed the duties of the office in March, 1870, when the office had only two clerks, not over a hundred volumes belonging to it, and no museum of educational illustrations and appliances. He served as commissioner till August, 1886, though in the fall of 1885 he had tendered his resignation and had been elected president of Marietta (Ohio) college, and had moved there with his family; but, at the request of the administration, he retained the responsibilities of the Bureau of Education till the date named. Under his direction the bureau became the exchange of educational thought and fact for the entire country. It noted the progress, experience, and methods of education the world over, and conveyed its information to school officers, teachers, educational workers and writers in every county and city of the United States. The clerical force of the bureau was increased to thirty-eight, the library was enlarged to 18,000 volumes and 46,000 pamphlets. His publications and opinions were sought in every part of the world where there is progress in education, and were translated into most remote languages, as those of Finland and Japan.

General Eaton has twice visited Europe, and, travelling much in the states and territories, made himself familiar with the actual condition and needs of education. Every phase and problem of education has received his attention. He has promoted important changes in elementary instruction, aided improvement in school-houses, promoted greater attention to hygiene in public schools, helped efficiently to advance the qualifications of teachers and the standards of legal and medical instruction. He has done much for the improvement of our colleges and universities, and especially of agriculture and mechanic arts, and for the establishment of schools of manual training. He has been the promoter of the kindergarten, and has aided the progress of education in every department. He always urged education for every child in the land. He early and ably showed that the condition of illiteracy in the United States requires national aid. The provisions of a government for Alaska and schools for its people, so long withheld, were especially aided by his endeavors.

He was appointed by the president to represent the Department of the Interior at the Centennial Exhibition in 1876; has been twice elected president of the American Social Science Association, and one of the vice-presidents of the American Association for the Advancement of Science, and president of section "I;" was chief of the Department of Education for the New Orleans Exposition, and organized that vast exhibition, and was president of the International Congress of Education there, and vice-president of the International Congress of Educators, in Havre, France. The degrees of A. B. and A. M. were given him by Dartmouth college, Ph. D. by Rutgers, and LL. D. by Dartmouth. He has served on the board of visitors appointed by the president to examine the instruction and concerns of the Military Academy at West Point; has been a trustee of Fiske university, and is now a trustee of Lane Theological Seminary, Cincinnati; of Howard university, and of Columbian university, Washington; and was one of the incorporators and is one of the trustees of the funds of the National Educational Association; has been called to preside as the moderator of the Presbytery of Athens and of the Synod of Ohio. He was by the appointment of the governor one of the commissioners representing Ohio at the centennial celebration in New York city in April, 1889. He was a member of the Mohawk Conference on Indian affairs. He is now a trustee and the president of Marietta college.

His books have been reports,—one of the schools in Toledo, one of the schools in Tennessee, and an annual report of education in the United States, with a review of education in other parts of the world each year from 1870 to 1886. These reports have been circulated, some years to the number of 40,000. He has also published important special reports, such as on libraries and on industrial education; also a series of circulars of information and bulletins, some of them having been called for to the number of a hundred thousand. He has delivered numerous addresses upon educational topics. He has been made a member of various learned, scientific, historical, and benevolent societies in Europe. He was decreed honorary member of the French Ministry of Public Instruction. The emperor of Brazil offered him the order of the Commander of the Rose. He is a member of the society of Japanese savans for the promotion of education.

Perhaps no one in the United States has a more extensive personal acquaintance with the men who have distinguished themselves in peace and war, in philosophy, science, education, politics, and religion, in the past thirty years. He had the confidence of President Lincoln, and was an intimate friend and confidant of Gen. Grant from the time of their acquaintance in the war till the latter's death.

The venerable Professor Sanborn, of Dartmouth college, in presenting Gen. Eaton to an alumni meeting once, declared that their honored guest was the best informed man on education in the United States. Rev. Edward Everett Hale, D. D., in speaking of him, said, "I will not simply say he is one of the most distinguished educators in this country, but one of the most distinguished educators known to the world."

In a history of Memphis, where the general served the public as an editor, are the following fitting words:

"General Eaton's whole life has been consecrated to the highest benevolence and to the broadest patriotism, and to going about doing good in every direction."

He m. Sept. 29, 1864, Alice Eugenia, daughter of Capt. James and Adeline (Quincy) Shirley, of Vicksburg, Miss. She was born at Carrolton, Miss., May 2, 1844. Captain Shirley was a native of Goffstown, and graduated at Dartmouth the year before his life-long friend, Rufus Choate. Mrs. Adeline (Quincy) Shirley was a daughter of Abram Quincy, of Boston, a favorite great-niece of John Hancock, and one of the Boston medal scholars. She was well known for her literary taste. Their home was known in the siege of Vicksburg as the "White House," the only one near and outside the Confederate lines not burned. Its upper windows were often used by General Grant in observing the operations of the enemy. Mr. Shirley and his daughter were in Clinton when the siege began. Mrs. Shirley, after the house had been riddled with cannon and musket balls, found safety in a rude cave prepared by her servants, while the youngest son joined the Union forces in their attack. The daughter's diary, found by the soldiers, became a means by which Gen. Grant recognized the loyalty of the family.

Mrs. Alice (S.) Eaton was instructed mainly by tutors at home and at Mr. Young's school, and finished her school days in the Female College under Rev. Dr. and Mrs. Hilman, Clinton, Miss. She devoted much time to music, singing, also playing on several instruments; but she was most fond of the piano. She is a ready writer, and has greatly aided her husband with her pen. Children,— Elsie Janet, b. Feb. 6, 1871, at Washington, D. C.

John Quincy, b. July 14, 1873, at Washington, D. C.

Frederick Charles, b. Aug. 9, 1877, at Washington, D. C.; d. June 15, 1878.

James Shirley prepared for college in the high school at Washington, D. C., and entered Dartmouth college, but transferred his connection to Marietta college when his father became president of that college, where he graduated in 1889. He is now employed in the auditor's department of the East Tennessee, Virginia & Georgia system of Railroads, under the presidency of Gen. Samuel Thomas.¹

Elsie Janet entered the Washington high school, and became a member of the high school at Marietta. She is now member of the class of '91, in Lake Erie Seminary, at Painesville, Ohio.

John Quincy fitted for college in the preparatory department at Marietta. He is a member of the class of '93 of Marietta college.

Caroline Eaton m. May 27, 1869, at her brother Frederick's in Toledo, O., Samuel McMaster Pennock, b. April 27, 1821, at Stratford, Orange Co., Vt. At the early age of seventeen his father sent him to Boston to buy goods. At twenty-one he became a merchant at Hardwick and Wolcott, and in 1854 removed to Morristown, Vt. He was a member of the house of representatives one year, two years of the state senate of the state of Vt., two years sheriff of Lemoille county, and two years was county judge. He engaged in wholesale business in Boston, in 1867, and removed his family to Somerville, Mass., and has been a member of the school committee two years, and of the city council of Somerville four years. Mr. Pennock died suddenly and without pain, sitting in his chair beside his wife, who was reading to him, Nov. 7, 1889. His life was a model of justice, integrity, and kindness. He possessed rare equanimity, and won the confidence of all who knew him. Caroline (Eaton) Pennock, at the death of her mother, little girl as she was, began to take care of her father's house. She attended the district school until she was fifteen, when she went to Bradford and Warner fall and spring terms. She attended the academies at Thetford and Orford; in the meantime she taught district schools three seasons,—one in Warner, one in Wilmot, and one in Bristol. She entered Mt. Holyoke Seminary in the fall of '54, graduating in '56, when she became teacher and lady principal of the high school in Toledo, Ohio. After six years' successful service, she resigned, much to the regret of her pupils and the school authorities. She has been active in church, missionary, and charitable work.

She has no children, but has taken a mother's interest in the care of Mr. Pennock's children by his first wife, all of them, except those who early settled in the West, Isaac in Wabasha, Minn., Mrs. Carrie (Pennock) Dyer in St. Paul, Minnesota, and Annie, who died the year she would have graduated at the high school. Mattie teaches in the Winter Hill school. Samuel M. is in business in Boston. John graduated from Harvard college, and is the expert chemist at the "Solvay Process Soda Ash Works," Syracuse, N. Y. Nida married Clinton D. Hardy, of the Lenawee County Savings Bank in Adrian, Mich.

Nathan A. was named for his grandfather, Nathan Andrews. He had only a common school education. He left home when only sixteen years of age, and fought his own way in the world. In 1850 he went, via the Isthmus, to California, and engaged successfully in mining. He was able to loan his oldest brother, John, money to complete his course at college. In 1859 he returned, via the Isthmus route, visiting his uncle, Charles Eaton, at Plaquemine, La., and visited his brothers and sisters, and his father in the East. He subsequently engaged in trade in Waterloo, Ind., and afterward in Chicago, Ill. In 1873 he returned to California, and pre-empted government land, which he has improved and which he has increased greatly in value, near Merle, San Diego Co., Cal. He has salt works on his place; also several hundred hives of bees. In 1880 he was visited by his brothers, John and Lucien, and in 1886 by his sister, Mrs. Pennock, and her husband. In 1887 he revisited his brothers and sisters in the East; and again, in 1889, he was present at the reunion of all his brothers and sisters at the old home at Eaton Grange. Forty years had then elapsed since they had all met together.

Frederick Eaton has been a merchant in Toledo, Ohio, for over thirty years. His education, outside of the public schools, was obtained in one term at Thetford academy. While on the farm he did his share of the hard work the year round. In mentioning Mr. Eaton during one of his annual purchases in Boston, the Journal referred to his first visit to that city as follows, including these facts of his career:

Mr. Eaton, being an entire stranger in Boston, was introduced to those firms by letters from Mr. Daniel Carr, the veteran store-keeper in Bradford, N. H., with whom he had first served as clerk, beginning in 1852 at $55 a year, and from Mr. Otis Barton, a Manchester merchant, for whom he subsequently worked till going to Ohio. Mr. Eaton's oldest brother, Gen. John Eaton, now Commissioner of the United States Bureau of Education, was, in 1857, superintendent of the Toledo schools, and he lent his name and some of his earnings to the enterprise for a few years, the style of the partnership being Fred Eaton & Co. Their starting cash capital was only $1,200, the opening stock of goods but $3,000 in value, and the first year's sales but $12,000. The financial crash of 1857 came the very month the store was opened, and hard was the experience of the merchants in that young city of 6,000 to 8,000 inhabitants. But the new enterprise weathered the storm, and Mr. Fred Eaton's business has survived all subsequent financial disturbances, great and small, that have overtaken the country, without his seeking shelter under insolvency or bankruptcy laws, and, what is really remarkable, without ever having the stain of protest attach to a single one of his obligations. His sales now amount to over one million of dollars annually, a sum which but few Boston merchants exceeded twenty-five years ago.

He is a member of the First Congregational church, and a large contributor to its support, as he is to the many benevolent objects in the city, a director in two banks, and vice-president in one of them, and director in a number of manufacturing institutions. He has been twice called to manage and preside over the tri-state fair held in Toledo by the people of Ohio, Michigan, and Indiana. He is one of the most active business men in bringing new and important enterprises to locate there. Though mentioned by the people as a Republican candidate for mayor of Toledo, for lieutenant-governor and for governor of Ohio, he has never allowed his name to be used in any nominating convention. William H. Maher, a literary gentleman and brother merchant of Mr. Eaton's, in a letter to the press a few years ago, alluded to him as follows :

The merchant of to-day must be very bold and very cautious ; he must be more than a mere salesman or shop-keeper. He must be as well acquainted with manufacturing as the manufacturer, as well posted in foreign markets as the importer, and as sensitive to the public temper and mind as the keenest politician. It goes without saying that Mr. Eaton has possessed these qualities, for otherwise he would not be where he is. How many boys and girls have grown up under his roof ; how many families have been supported by his energetic forcing of business ; how many men have gone out to begin the battle of business for themselves after studying their lessons with him. The names of these must be in the hundreds, and if each one shall bring a stone in grateful appreciation, it will build a monument no higher than he deserves. But let us hope that no monument will cover him for a score of years, during which he may enjoy the success he has earned.

His ready wit and genial humor, added to his solid qualities, make him a favorite on social and public occasions of interest. He m. March 8, 1860, Mary Helen, b. May 23, 1839, daughter of Robert M. and Sophia (McCutcheon) Shirley. Her father was of the firm of Lawrence & Shirley, wholesale merchants of Boston, residing on Shirley hill, in Goffstown, and was one of its most honored citizens. After she left the district school she studied at the academy at New London, and at Bradford, Mass. Her substantial qualities everywhere won friends. She abhorred pretence, and admired the genuine and true, whether in friendship, hospitality, virtue, charity, or religion. She was a devoted wife, a precious sister, and a true friend. She was active in her church and Sabbath-school, and in works of charity. She d. Jan. 2, 1887. Child.—

Frederick Eaton m., 2d, Jan. 23, 1889, Laura Helen, b. July 10, 1852, in Cleveland, O., daughter of DeWitt Clinton and Laura May (Wheeler) Baldwin. Mr. Baldwin is a gentleman of large experience in the financial and railroad affairs of Cleveland and Toledo. It was in the home of his parents where the first prayer-meeting was ever held in the Western Reserve. Mrs. Baldwin's father was deacon of the first Baptist church organized in Cleveland. Mrs. Helen (Baldwin) Eaton graduated at the high school in Toledo, and taught successfully in the public schools, most of the time in the high school, where she was highly esteemed. In her kindness of heart and active, cultivated mind, enlisted in the welfare of others, in the family, society, and the church, her friends, old and new, find those enduring qualities which attract and hold them.

This manuscript is opened to record the death of Mr. Eaton. The Toledo Blade, Feb. 4, in an extended article, says.—“Frederick Eaton, the merchant prince of Toledo, is dead.” He suffered in December from the ulceration of a tooth, and in January from la grippe. In response to the great demands of his many business interests upon him he overtaxed himself, and did not give his system rest to enable it to rally. He d. Feb. 4, 1890. His brothers, John, Lucien, James, and Charles, and his sisters, Carrie and Christina, hastened to his bedside and his burial. His wife was well-nigh overcome by the suddenness of his death. Those sharing in his large business interests in Toledo and elsewhere, the citizens with whom he had been a favorite associate for a generation, could hardly realize the change. The crape on the door of F. Eaton & Co.'s lion store brought grief to many hearts and tears to many eyes. Said one of his clerks, “He has been more than a father to me; he was the soul of generosity.” Ellery Eaton remarked, “He has been more than a cousin to me." Said Mayor Hamilton, "I know of no man in Toledo who will be missed as much as Frederick Eaton." Said Banker Ketcham, "Toledo cannot realize its loss all at once." Said another, "He was a man of great commercial ability. I consider his death a public calamity." Said his pastor at his funeral, "No one among us was known to so many or will be missed by so many."

Flags on many of the buildings were at half mast. His employés, and the merchants and bankers and others, held meetings, and passed resolutions of respect and condolence. Telegrams and letters came from many parts of the country. None were more considerate than those from Mr. John Claffin, with whose house Mr. Eaton had held close business relations for a generation. The family desired a private funeral, but the public demand for services at the church prevailed. Many business houses were closed. The family and immediate friends joined with Rev. W. W. Williams, D. D., in brief services at the house, where were many floral tributes. At the church these tributes were specially touching. It was one of the largest, if not the largest, funeral gathering ever seen in Toledo. The people could not be seated in the First Congregational church, but overflowed in the aisles and on the sidewalks. The services were impressive. The hymns sung had been favorites with Mr. Eaton, such as "Nearer, my God, to Thee," "Lead, kindly Light." His pastor, with a voice broken with emotion, offered appropriate prayer, read selections of scripture, and in brief and fitting words spoke of the lessons of the life that had closed, and of his hope in Christ. At the close the great concourse tearfully passed by the coffin, taking a last look of the face of their friend.

He was buried in the family lot in Forest Cemetery, by the side of the wife and daughter who preceded him. The press of the city, the Blade, Bee, Commercial, and Journal, and of the neighboring towns, and in the distance such papers as the Advance, of Chicago, and the Independent, of New York, contained notices of his death and tributes to his worth. No words can convey a more truthful tribute to his memory than a description of the facts connected with his death and burial. He was everywhere a favorite. Child,—

Frederick, b. May 31, 1890.

Mrs. Helen (Baldwin) Eaton d. June 2, 1890, and on the 4th was buried beside her husband, widely and deeply mourned.

Lucien Bonaparte Eaton was so named for his father's brother. He worked on the farm, attending the common school in the Eaton district, and sometimes in the Morgan district, and in the Gore until fifteen years of age, when he went to the academy at Thetford, Vt. He afterwards attended the academy at Orford a couple of terms. He entered Phillips academy at Andover, Mass., in 1854, and graduated in 1855, and thereupon entered Dartmouth college and graduated in 1859. While in college he taught school winters. He spent the fall of 1859 reading law with Hon. George Collamer, at Woodstock, Vt. In December, 1859, he became principal of the Hudson Street grammar school, in Cleveland, Ohio. Early in October, 1861, he resigned and entered the 65th Ohio Vol. Infantry as a second lieutenant. The teachers of Cleveland presented him with a sword. He raised a part of a company in Cleveland, and, reporting to his regiment at Mansfield, Ohio, was commissioned first lieutenant. His regiment served with the "Army of the Cumberland." He participated in nearly all the campaigns and battles in which that army was engaged. He was at the battles of Shiloh, Perryville, Stone River, Chickamauga, Missionary Ridge, Rocky Face Ridge, Resaca, New Hope Church, and many skirmishes and minor engagements. After the battle at Stone River he was commissioned captain, and served as brigade inspector on the staff of Gen. Charles G. Harker, who was killed at Kenesaw Mountain. In 1864, just before the last named battle, having been appointed lieutenant-colonel of the 69th U. S. C. Q., he was ordered to Arkansas, and was afterward appointed colonel of that regiment. He served as inspector of the freedmen's department for that state.

At the close of the war he settled in Memphis. He became interested in mercantile houses in Memphis and Lagrange, Tenn., and in Corinth, Miss., but devoted himself to the study of the law. In 1866 he joined his brother, Gen. John Eaton, then editing and publishing the Memphis Daily Post, as an assistant, and in 1867, on Gen. Eaton's being elected state superintendent of public instruction for Tennessee, he became editorial and business manager of the Post. In 1868 he was elected and served as a member of the board of education for the city of Memphis. Early in 1870 the Post was discontinued, and he was appointed by President U. S. Grant United States marshal for the western district of Tennessee, and served till April, 1877, when he resigned. His term of service as U. S. marshal was during the reconstruction and ku-klux era, and four of his deputy marshals were killed. In 1872 he was admitted to the bar; in 1877 he began the active practice of his profession. He, however, devoted much of his time to the purchase and improvement of real estate. He was one of the very few who had the courage to buy real estate in Memphis after the great yellow fever epidemics of 1878 and '79. He now owns several thousand acres of cotton lands in Shelby county, and hundreds of houses in the city of Memphis, and has one of the largest rent-rolls of any of the capitalists of Memphis. He is the head of the firm of L. B. Eaton & Co., the owners of the oldest office furnishing abstracts of titles to lands in Memphis and Shelby counties, and of the firm of Eaton & Smith, lumber dealers. He is a member of the Knights of Honor, of the Historical Society, of the American Public Health Association, and of the American Social Science Congress.

In 1880 he was elected and served as representative in the state legislature, and in 1882 was a Republican candidate for state senator, but was defeated. In 1888 he was nominated as the Republican candidate for congress in the Tenth Congressional District of Tennessee, and was undoubtedly elected, but was counted out. He has taken proof and filed his brief in the contest for his seat in congress, and is confident of securing it.

She was a woman of delicate health, but of superior mental attainments.

Jacob Sawyer Eaton, b. Jan. 4, 1805, pursued studies preparatory to college under Rev. Dr. Woods and Rev. Mr. Kelley, but deciding to enter the medical profession without a collegiate course he entered the office of Dr. Buswell, of Warner, and attended lectures at medical colleges at Hanover, and at Philadelphia, Penn. He began the practice of medicine at Alexandria, and afterward, on a general invitation of the townspeople, removed to Bristol, where he remained twenty-four years, very successful in his profession, and greatly beloved by all who knew him. For the health of his family in 1855 he removed to Stowe, Mass., and afterward to South Deerfield and Harvard, Mass., where he spent his old age in the surprising possession of all his faculties. With a rare enjoyment of elegant literature, with a brilliant imagination, with a heart full of sympathy for all the trying conditions of humanity, he was always at the front on all questions of reform. Early consecrating himself to the service of his Divine Master, he was prominent and active in the various departments of church work. He remained for years secluded from his friends, making them a general visit but once. He supported himself by his own exertions while securing his education. He was ordained pastor of the Sixth Street Presbyterian church, New York city, in June, 1843. In June, 1848, he became pastor of the Presbyterian church at Palmyra, N. Y.

He travelled while officiating at Palmyra through Europe, the Holy Land, and Egypt, and made a second visit to Europe. He wrote much for the press, and published many sermons. In the exactness to which he held himself in all high duties he was the Puritan of the Puritans, but in the genial overflow of all that was innocent in wit and humor and friendly intercourse, he was the cavalier of the cavaliers. His devotion to his mother and to his kindred was unsurpassed. He was respected as a father in the church by his fellow-clergymen. He maintained his thorough scholarship in the classics and in Hebrew until his old age. Dartmouth college conferred the honorary degree of D. D. upon him in 1869. He d. Elijah Eaton, b. in Haverhill, Mass., Jan. 12, 1770, son of Nathaniel and Rebecca (Dodge) Eaton, m. Jan. 1, 1797, in Bedford, Elizabeth, b. Aug. 10, 1777, daughter of James and Abigail (Richardson) Vose. Her father was b. in Milton, Mass., on the same farm where his ancestors from England settled in 1654. Elijah Eaton and wife lived a few years in Haverhill, Mass. Early in the first years of the present century they moved to Sutton and located on the eastern slope of Kimball's hill. Elijah, though not as tall, was like his brother John in great strength, and like his brother Nathaniel in agility: he could outstrip younger men in a foot-race. With these physical gifts was blended an earnest, devoted piety. He was styled the "peacemaker." He was the scholar of his family. In early life he began the study of medicine, but not believing in the practice of those days he conscientiously abandoned it. He was a Baptist. His sons, Ariel Kendrick and Pelatiah Chapin, were named for ministers of that denomination. His sons Jubal, Elijah, Nathaniel, and Carlos became members of the Baptist church. He d. Sept. 6, 1818. NOTE. It is related in connection with the conversion of Rev. William Taylor, that when he became duly impressed with the need of forgiveness for his sins, living with his father at the corner of the road near Potash hill, he struggled to quiet his conscience until into the night, but could not. He felt the disapproval of any misconduct, by no one in the neighborhood so much as that of Elijah Eaton, yet in his distress his thoughts turned specially to the good man, and gathering courage in the darkness of the midnight hours, he wended his way over the hill to Mr. Eaton's. He rapped on the door. Mr. Eaton came at once, light in hand, for he was engaged, as was his custom, in the reading of the scriptures and in prayer.

Mr. Eaton was county auditor of Randolph county, Ind., from 1841 to 1844. He was admitted to the bar in 1842. In 1844 he went to Iowa, from that time on taking a lively interest and an active part in the growth of Iowa. From 1846 to 1855 he lived in Delhi, Delaware county, practising law, holding county and other public offices of trust, and was member of the legislature four years. From 1855 to 1858 he was "receiver of public moneys for the Turkey river land district," the sale for the period covering over two million acres of public land. In 1858 his office was located in Osage, Mitchell county, where he now lives, and is occupied in the management of his business, and writing occasionally for the press. Nathaniel Eaton, b. in Haverhill, Mass., May 4, 1775, son of Nathaniel and Rebecca (Dodge) Eaton, m. in that town Oct. 11, 1797, Sarah Emerson, of the same place, b. April 21, 1778, daughter of Eltrimer and Sarah Eaton Emerson. He first moved to Hopkinton, and bought a farm about a mile north of Contoocookville. Here he remained but two years, when he sold out and bought for $950 the eighty acre farm of Josiah Cutler, in Sutton, where he established his home in 1801 and spent the remainder of his life. Mr. Cutler bought of Abraham Wells, and had a small frame building on the site of the present mansion, and barns where the present barns are.

In 1814 Nathaniel Eaton built the house in which he afterward lived and died, and in 1822 the large barns opposite. He had the first chaise in use in the neighborhood. He was an enterprising and thrifty farmer, of clear and strong mind, and decided convictions. He was a good neighbor, and his relations to all were cordial, but that between “Neighbor Adams”—John Adams, who lived near him—and “Neighbor Eaton,” as each called the other, was for over sixty years a model of unbroken friendliness. He was an active member and a zealous supporter of the Baptist church in Sutton, and afterward of that in Warner. He was greatly attached to all his relatives, and followed them with a lively interest wherever scattered. His mother spent her last days with him and his brother Elijah, and died at his house. He made long journeys to visit his scattered kindred in New Hampshire, Massachusetts, and Maine. He was accustomed for years with his wife to visit his relatives in Haverhill, Mass., and then always to make a stay at the beach at Plum Island near Salisbury, Mass., and sometimes he was able to take trips to Saratoga Springs. On one of these visits to Haverhill his wife suddenly sickened and died, aged 67 years. Hers was the first burial in the neighborhood burying-ground on the Waterloo road. He died on the 9th day of May, 1875, over one hundred years of age, in full possession of all his faculties, revered as a patriarch by a large circle of relatives, and respected by all who knew him. His centennial birthday was celebrated at his home on May 4, 1875, by a large gathering of his kindred and friends. A letter in the Boston Journal gave the following account of that interesting event:

To-day the venerable centenarian, Nathaniel Eaton, of Sutton, completed the full term of a hundred years, and the rare and unfrequent occurrence of such an event was duly observed and commemorated by the many relatives, friends, and neighbors of this worthy patriarch, who paid their respects to him and his in a way so cordial that it was made the source of much pleasure to all. Mr. Eaton lives with his son, George C. Eaton, Esq., one of the most respected, hard-working, and, withal, well-to-do farmers in all this section of the country, and on the identical farm to which the father moved when yet a young man, now nearly three fourths of a century ago, and on which he has ever since resided, and reared a large family of children, who are and have been among the most worthy and respected of the community. Here he has toiled and prospered, and lived to see his whole ancestry, the companions of his youth, the associates of his mature years, and the companion of his bosom, all fall, one by one, in the way of life, until now only he remains among them.

Mr. Eaton, dressed in a new and his centennial suit of black, received his friends in a cordial way, easily recognizing and remembering all, and gave each as hearty a grasp of the hand and as warm a welcome as most men of seventy. His mental organism shows little impairment, and he yet converses fluently and quite intelligently, while his physical strength, with the store of latent vitality yet left to draw upon, warrants his friends in hoping for several years.

As previously stated in the Journal, Mr. Eaton was born in Haverhill, Mass., and was the son of Capt. Nathaniel Eaton. His wife was Mrs. Sarah Emerson, by whom he had ten children, four of whom are now living, three being present. Hon. Leonard Eaton, for many years a successful practitioner in the healing art at Warner, and now deceased, was his eldest son. Among those present were six nieces and nephews, between the ages of seventy and eighty, whose average is seventy-three—a fact pleasing to the new advocates of biometry had they been present, as length of years seems to attach to all bearing this name.

Among the relatives present were Dr. Jacob Eaton of Harvard, Mass., Hon. John Y. Mugridge and family of Concord, Miss Susan Eaton, Mrs. Sherburne, and Mrs. Col. Jesse A. Gove, also of Concord, Hon. George C. Gilmore of Manchester, D. C. Emerson, Esq., of Chelmsford, Mass., Mr. R. Mason of North Conway, Jubal Eaton, and Carlos Eaton and family.

Among those present not related to the hero of the occasion were Rev. David Gage of Manchester, Rev. W. H. Walker of Warner, R. Thompson, Esq., A. Whittier of Newburyport, Mass., and several representatives of the press. The exercises closed at a late hour with music, singing, speaking, the reading of a spicy, witty, and humorous poem from Dr. Jacob S. Eaton, and letters from absent ones, including that of Gen. John Eaton, U. S. Commissioner of Education, Charles Eaton, Esq., of Washington, D. C., Rev. Horace Eaton, D. D., of New York, and Rev. Albert Heald, of Amherst. The day and the occasion were most enjoyable.

SAMUEL ANDREW,

AND HIS DESCENDANTS, ANDREWS, PEASLEE, MARTIN, PUTNAM, AND JONES.

The Andrew or Andrews family, resident in Sutton, trace their origin to Samuel and Mary Dodge Andrew, who came from Danvers, Mass., and settled in Sutton. The orchard and site of the house where they once resided are now pointed out on the old road that leads from Long pond to Sutton Centre.¹ Samuel Andrew was here before 1786, for that year he was appointed one of a committee to locate the meeting-house. His ancestors, it appears, inter-married with those of the name of Porter, Putnam, and Peabody.

Dr. A. P. Putnam, who, by one of these marriages, is connected with the Andrews, says that Daniel, the father of Samuel Andrew, was born at Danvers, or Salem Village, as it was called, Sept. 28, 1725. This Daniel was descended from the Daniel who came from Watertown to Danvers, who was descended from Thomas, the first of the line to arrive in America, and who settled in Cambridge, Mass.

Daniel, the father of Samuel Andrew, married, Sept. 20, 1730, Ginger Hutchinson, widow of Elisha Hutchinson, and daughter of Israel and Sarah (Putnam) Porter. He died before 1756.

Israel Porter was son of Israel, son of John Porter, emigrant from England, and settler at Salem Village. His wife, Sarah, was daughter of James Putnam, son of Capt. John, son of John Putnam, immigrant, also settler of Danvers, and progenitor of all the Putnams in the country.

The only child of above Elisha and Ginger (Porter) Hutchinson was Col. Israel Hutchinson, a very prominent citizen of Danvers, and greatly distinguished in the Revolutionary war.

The father of the last named Daniel Andrew was also named Daniel. He was born at Salem or Salem Village, and was baptized at the First church, Salem, Sept. 2, 1677, and died Feb. 6, 1728. He married, Feb. 12, 1701-'2, Elizabeth, daughter of Capt. John and Hannah (Andrew) Peabody, of Boston, Mass. This Daniel's father was the Daniel, born in Watertown, Mass., in March, 1643, who removed to Danvers. He married Sarah, daughter of the above John Porter, immigrant, and died Dec. 3, 1702.

Israel Andrew, brother of Daniel, and uncle of Samuel, married Anne Porter, descendant of John Porter, immigrant, and had five daughters,—Sarah, Anna, Mary, Eunice, and Hulda. Sarah married Dea. Edmund Putnam. Mary married a kinsman, John Andrew, grandfather of Israel W. Andrew, resident of Danvers, Mass., and recent Greenback candidate for governor in Massachusetts. Eunice married Elias Endicott, who was a lineal descendant of Gov. John Endicott, and whose daughter, Anna, married Israel Putnam, grandfather of Dr. A. P. Putnam, and son of the above Dea. Edmund Putnam. To simplify this matter, it may be put thus :

Thomas and Rebecca Andrew.

Daniel and Sarah (Porter) Andrew.

Daniel and Elizabeth (Peabody) Andrew.

Daniel and Ginger (Hutchinson) (Porter) Andrew.

Samuel and Mary (Dodge) Andrew.

This Samuel, the first Andrew in Sutton, was lame,—tradition has it, from injuries received in the French and Indian war. He worked at the trade of tailor. He was a very kind neighbor. He was born in Danvers, Mass., April 11, 1741, and died in Sutton March 7, 1796.¹ He married, June 1, 1762, Mary Dodge who died in Sutton, April 19, 1809, in her 65th year. Children,— Shubel Greeley, of Salisbury, was father of Mary (Greeley) Foster. Dr. Foster commenced the study of medicine with Dr. Benjamin Lovering, in Sutton, in 1820. In the years 1821 to 1824 he studied with Dr. Lyman of Warner; graduated at Burlington, Vt., in December, 1824; began the practice of medicine in Washington, Vt., June, 1825, and there remained till 1837, when he removed to Lake county, Ill., where he practised many years, being the first physician in the county. In all, his medical practice extended over a period of fifty years. On retiring he returned East to spend the remaining years of his life. He now resides with his daughter in Auburndale, Mass.

By the practice of his profession, and by the rise in value of land in and near Chicago, purchased before the city was built, Dr. Foster became quite wealthy, and being of an amiable, friendly disposition and an excellent physical constitution, with every faculty of body and mind unimpaired, though now in his 90th year, seems to have as complete enjoyment of life as if he were half a century younger. He reads without the help of glasses, eats and sleeps well, drives out in his carriage, and goes unattended in railroad and other cars, studies the daily papers, and keeps well acquainted with current public events, tells a good story, and laughs at other people's jokes as heartily as ever he did.

Nathan Andrew, Samuel Andrew's third child, b. in Danvers, Mass., Nov. 15, 1767, m. at Bradford, Feb. 13, 1798, Hannah Gregg, of New Boston, and settled in Fishersfield near the mill-pond. Mrs. Hannah G. Andrew was born in New Boston, Aug. 26, 1771. Her parents were James and Janet (Collins) Gregg.¹ Mrs. Andrew's brother, John Gregg, built the first mills at Bradford Mills, and died from a rupture of a blood-vessel at the age of thirty, leaving behind him the memory of a character of marked excellence. Tradition has it that at a time of great scarcity he restored, unobserved, the toll to the sacks of the poor and needy, who discovered his generosity on emptying them.

The first immigrant of the line of Hannah (Gregg) Andrew is believed by Miss C. Augusta Gregg² to be Capt. James Gregg, born in Scotland; settled in Antrim, Ireland, with his parents, in 1690; married Janet Cargil; had four sons and one daughter; and came to Londonderry in 1718. He had acquired considerable property as linen draper, and received honorable mention for his generous use of it and for his resolute and encouraging bearing among his fellow-colonists who landed at Cape Elizabeth, where they were obliged to pass the winter. In addition to his pro rata share of land he received one hundred and fifty acres and control of Beaver river for building the first saw- and grist-mill in his town. His descendant, Dea. James Gregg, in 1814 built the first horse-wagon in town. Another descendant, Thomas Gregg, who married Ann Leslie, was Mrs. Hannah Andrew's grandfather. He settled in the northern part of New Boston, where he pursued the trade of weaver.

The Greggs were noted for more than ordinary strength of body and mind, having little aspiration for popular favor, but being most tenacious in adherence to their religious convictions.³

² Miss Charlotte Augusta Gregg, a daughter of Mrs. Andrew's brother Daniel, lived with her sister in Boston, and studied at Bowdoin school and Charlestown academy; taught at Danville, Ind., and three years at the Ohio Female College; also at Putnam Female Seminary, and in charge of a female seminary in Chicago for twenty-seven years having had under her instruction, it is believed, not less than two thousand five hundred young ladies.

Dr. Samuel Gregg, a well known physician in Boston, was Mrs. Hannah G. Andrew's cousin. Joseph, her brother, resident in New Boston, attained marked success. In any case where he was a party in litigation, he would conduct his own suit. Mrs. Andrew's sister, Sally Gregg, m. John Brown, whose sons, Jeremiah and Joel, graduated at Dartmouth. Jeremiah pursued law in Boston, and Joel practised medicine in West Newton, Mass. Gov. J. Q. A. Brackett, of Massachusetts, is a grandson of this Sally Gregg and her husband, John Brown.

Recapitulation of the Gregg family,—

Capt. James Gregg, m. Janet Cargil.

Thomas Gregg, m. Ann Leslie.

James Gregg, m. Janet Collins.

Hannah Gregg, m. Nathan Andrew.

Nathan and Hannah Andrew were both famous for their industry, and, though she was lame from childhood, she was not one whit behind him in this characteristic. Her skill with the loom was widely known. They were people of thrift, kind to the poor, and neighborly to all. In due time, with the enlargement of their means, they erected, in 1811, a more ample house and barn in Sutton, where they removed. A characteristic of Mr. Andrew was manifested when these buildings were suddenly reduced to ashes in April 19, 1834. It was the custom then, in a loss by fire, for the neighbors to aid in making it good by their gifts. This aid Mr. Andrew declined. He rebuilt better barns, and erected the brick house in which Mr. and Mrs. Andrew departed this life. The brick house was burned Aug. 28, 1890. They raised their children with the utmost care, training them in industry and intelligence, according to the precepts of the Bible. They attended the Congregational church at Bradford Centre most of the time, but Mr. Andrew became deeply interested in immersion, and he and his sons, Nathan, John, and Samuel, were among the largest contributors to the building of the Baptist church, near the Mill Village; indeed, Mr. Andrew gave the church about half the pews in it. Mrs. Andrew, after ninety, would repeat numerous hymns learned in her youth. Nathan Andrew d. Sept. 7, 1853, aged eighty-six, and his wife, Hannah Gregg Andrew, d. On account of the proslavery preaching of the pastor, she ceased attending the church, and her name was dropped from its rolls. Later, when the church had come more nearly in accord with her position, she was restored to full fellowship. From her savings she made various bequests; among them was one to an orphan asylum in New York city, and one to the American Missionary Association.

Nathan Andrew, Jr., m. Dolly Sargent Pillsbury, b. Feb. 16, 1801, the daughter of Micajah and Sally Pillsbury. They lived all of their married life, of nearly fifty-seven years, upon the same farm, adjoining that of Nathan's father, which was managed by his brother, Samuel. The relation between Nathan and Samuel for all these years was a model of unbroken fraternal reciprocity and kindness. Nathan was a sturdy farmer of untiring energy. In his younger days he was a captain of the militia. He was a man of a fine vein of humor, of rare good judgment, and of strong principle. There was never any doubt where Nathan Andrew stood upon any public question. His wife, Dolly, was loved by all who knew her for her kindliness and for her wonderfully even and sunny temperament. Nathan and Dolly, in their old age, greatly enjoyed a visit they made to the great West, and to the homes of their prosperous sons, Thomas F. and George H. Andrew, in Minneapolis, Minn. The burning of their home was the cause of their taking this, to them, long journey. Their sons, finding their parents, in spite of their enjoyment, yearning for their old home, without their knowledge rebuilt the house as it stood before the fire, and probably they were never happier nor more surprised than, when allowed to return, to find their home restored. Both died at the old homestead, Nathan on March 16, 1883, and Dolly on June 29, 1883. Children,—

"It is now definitely known that ex-Gov. John S. Pillsbury is making arrangements to present to Sutton a town hall and library building, to be erected next season."
