SCHOOL COMMITTEE'S REPORT.

CITIZENS: In accordance with law and usage, we present the following annual report of the schools of Mont Vernon, placed under our supervision:

From a want of that knowledge which comes of a long and intimate acquaintance with the schools, we have turned for the guidance of our way to the reports of our predecessors. That these statements of the past condition of our schools have been a great aid is a fact too apparent to need demonstration.— We shall offer no apology for our errors—shall expect criticism—and claim the right to criticise others.

In dealing with the subject before us, we shall confine our efforts to the statement of facts as they have transpired, and make no attempt to theorize upon the ways and means of education.

EXAMINATION OF TEACHERS.

The first work of the year was a notice to the several Prudential Committees, that a meeting of teachers for the purpose of a written examination would be held in the Center District School Room, at a time therein mentioned. In making out the schedule of examination, our main care was to have it of sufficient breadth to cover all possible cases that might arise in regard to scholarship; and later experience has shown that the standard was high enough. At the meeting were read extracts from the writings of our best teachers, setting forth briefly the method of government in foreign countries, and comparing the mild suasion of to-day, in this country, with the stern discipline of our fathers. Extracts from the laws of N. H., relating to the duty of teachers were also read, for this knowledge should be possessed by every teacher. The results of the examination proved that, so far as technical knowledge was concerned, the teachers were well qualified.

GOVERNMENT.

Obedient to the spirit of the age, the teachers went to their work with a just appreciation of the importance of their vocation, and with a determination to govern by moral suasion, by an appeal to the higher feelings, the generous impulses, and the consenting reason of those placed under their charge. It is possible, had this method been supported by experience, and a little more firmness on the part of teachers, it would have been a success in every case.

That the discipline maintained in the schools the past year, will compare favorably with that of other years we have no doubt; but to say, that it has been good in every instance, would be a misstatement of facts, and of no service to any one.

We grant that teachers have gone wrong in some instances, wrong in granting too much freedom to young scholars, who always take advantage of it.

Defects in management have been pointed out, and in no case have we met with a teacher who thought her way was the only way.

But when insubordination has been a prominent feature in the history of a school, for a term of years, we must of necessity conclude that errors are committed outside of the schoolroom, and over which the teacher has no control. That the parents are actuated by a high sense of the importance of our schools there is no doubt; but, that they commit errors as well as teachers, is equally certain. To suppose one child can acquire knowledge as readily as another is a mistaken notion, and the parent who seeks to push his child along in his studies contrary to the judgment of the teacher, not only injures the child, but every member of the class to which the child belongs. Then, again, this interference on the part of parents tends to lessen the respect that the childbears toward his teacher, and consequently the whole school is affected. In some cases, children are sent to school with the expectation that they are to enjoy the same liberties that are granted them upon the home play-ground and by the fireside. But certain restrictions upon the child attending school, are as necessary as upon people living in a community. The good citizen is willing to give up certain natural rights that he may enjoy the blessings of society; and children should be taught that they must yield up some of the privileges they enjoy at home if they would become useful members of the school.

We conclude this subject by advising that much care should be used in selecting teachers for disturbed schools, bearing in mind always that there is less difficulty in regard to scholarship than almost anything else.

TEXT BOOKS.

The change of reading books commenced by our predecessor, has been completed. That the change was desirable is beyond question; and we might add in this connection, that other text books used in our schools are of inferior rank. A proper supply of books being absolutely necessary, we have not hesitated to procure them at the expense of the town when they were not otherwise obtained. We have held, and advised, that no teacher should allow a scholar to make a practice of studying his lessons from the books of others; for it not only disturbs the whole school, but deprives the owners of their just rights.

REPORT CARDS.

The introduction of Report Cards into our schools, properly belongs to the Committee of the Center District. We were early convinced of their utility, and so stated at the close of the spring schools. We consulted the opinion of the teachers in regard to the matter, and found them in favor of their introduction. If this innovation does not receive the approval of all, we feel sure it meets the approbation of the majority. By the aid of these weekly reports, parents can know something of the progress of their children, even though they find no time to visit the school.

THE NEW MAP OF N. H.

At the last session of our State Legislature, an act was passed, authorizing the board of selectmen and school committee to purchase the new map of the State, and pay for the same out of the school funds. A general description of the work would be out of place here, and we pass it by with the simple declaration that it is the most complete map of the State ever published. The selectmen after due consideration gave their sanction to its purchase, and consequently it will be in the schools at the opening of the next spring term.

WEST DISTRICT.

This school has been under the instruction of Miss Annie I. Riley during the year. That her services are appreciated by the citizens of this District, is evidenced by the fact, that this is the second year of her charge over their children. Miss Riley is a practical teacher and a thorough scholar, well fitted to teach any district school within our knowledge. We find in this school some of the most advanced scholars in town; two young ladies being well advanced in algebra, and understanding thoroughly what they have been over. At the close of the spring term, the little room made pleasant by a profuse display of the evergreen and flower, was filled with parents and friends. Among the many features of interest connected with the examnation, perhaps none were more noticeable than the readiness with which scholars answered practical questions. In this respect the West District is ahead. The closing exercises of the fall term, showed that thorough work had been done. The school is left in a prosperous condition, and it should be the care of the citizens to keep it so.

NORTH DISTRICT.

Spring and fall terms were taught by Miss Carrie F. Averill of this town. This was Miss Averill's first experience in teaching; and though the character of the school was not well calculated to inspire enthusiasm on the part of the teacher, yet it was a success so far as any teacher could make it. Much attention was paid to orthography, and the Little Girl, as a speller, is without a peer among the little girls of our schools. Mr. A. H. Bruce attended the examination of the fall term, and made a favorable report.

This school has been reduced in numbers nearly one half since last year, and is much too small to use its funds advantageously. If a union with the West District could be secured it would be an advantage to both parties.

EAST DISTRICT.

Miss Esther C. Kendall, teacher for the year. This is the second year of Miss Kendall's work in this district, and she has fully sustained the enviable reputation earned last year.-The scholars pay willing obedience to the commands of their teacher, and nothing occurs that the strictest disciplinarian could criticize. This in many respects is the pleasantest school in town. The school-room is adorned with suggestive mottoes which will ever give character to the school. At the close of the spring term, as in the West District, the room was tastefully adorned, which added much to the pleasure of the occasion .---Many questions were asked, and in the main well answered; in fact so many were asked that we had to apologize. The rhetorical exercises were a marked feature, and the "Rock of Ages" was rendered in a manner that would have done credit to a professional.

We failed to be present at the close of the fall term, but have heard favorable reports.

SOUTH DISTRICT.

Spring term. Miss Mary E. McLane, teacher. Miss Mc-Lane came to the District with some experience as a teacher, and so far as literary attainments were concerned gave every promise of success. That her efforts were not crowned with success, was evident to friends who listened to the very poor examination at the close of the term. There are some influences at work in this district which render the school of secondary consequence; and no teacher can be entirely successful, as long as these influences exist. Miss McLane was painstaking and kind—kind to a fault, where kindness is taken advantage of. We have no doubt of her success in other fields.

Fall term, taught by Miss A. N. Colburn, of New Boston.— With considerable experience, together with that quality known as independence of character, she taught the school in a manner acceptable to all. The examination was a great improvement on that of the spring term. But one term is not sufficient to eradicate deep rooted errors, and the district should use all possible care in the selection of teachers.

CENTER DISTRICT.

Spring term, taught by Miss Ella A. Averill, of class '81, Wellesly College, it being the third consecutive term of her charge over the school. Miss Averill is an able teacher, and that she has done much to elevate the standard of this school is evident by the record of last year.

The discipline was not sufficiently stringent as we thought, but there is a point, beyond which a teacher 'cannot go, and retain the friendship of the scholars. The teacher's intimate knowledge of the school would make her judgment better than ours, and therefore it should receive the preference.

The examination elicited that the drill in the various studies had been thorough, and the occasion should be remembered with honest pride by every member of the district.

Fall and Winter terms; taught by Miss Ellen F. Conant, a graduate of Abbott Female Seminary, Andover, Mass. Miss Conant came to the district without experience and we think without the unanimous support of the district. At our first visit we found the school in a bad condition, although, with apparent friendship existing between teacher and scholars. It would seem, that there was but little conception of what belonged to the discipline of a district school.

We advised a change to a more rigid discipline. And when we again visited the school it was a matter of surprise that the standard of order could be so much improved in one week..

• Miss Conant taught the term through with a reasonable degree of success. The examination was fair, though it lacked the thoroughness of the preceding one.

Winter term. After the experience of last term, we were of the opinion that Miss Conant would do better with the school than a stranger. She commenced her work with the knowledge that school-teaching was a reality, and with an honest purpose to succeed. That she did not meet with the success that her efforts would seem to warrant is no cause of censure from us. There has been an element in the school over which kindness has no influence, and to hold a teacher responsible for the rude conduct of boys who have arrived to man's estate, is wrong and unjust. We speak as a disinterested observer without prejudice, without taking coursel with any person in the District and with utter disregard to flying rumors; and our conclusion is, that the teacher did the best she possibly could for the advancement of the school.

The examination was not without merit, and friends spoke in terms of commendation both of teacher and scholars.

We conclude with the following language, found in last year's report: "If there exist any unkindness, any party feeling, any unchristian thought, let us hope it will be laid aside for the future, that the children of this school district and their teachers may enjoy the benefits of joint sympathy, united action and oneness of co-operation in their behalf."
