School Report.

In reviewing the school year, the result, though far from satisfactory, is as good as could reasonably be expected.

There has been a wide range in the qualifications of the teachers employed, but in no instance a failure of working up to the ability possessed and a faithful and conscientious discharge of the duties of the school-room.

The teachers are commended for the readiness with which they have seconded any efforts of your Committee, tending to make the common schools of more practical benefit. The ordinary labors of the day have been supplemented by self-preparation by the teacher for the next day's recitations, which has greatly increased the interest in the classes.

They have taught the right use of eyes, ears, speech and hands as tools which will render the pupils more self-reliant, and have awakened a vigorous appetite for self-education, which will make an unabridged dictionary and a daily paper a necessity and not a luxury in every family, in the near future.

They have inculcated habits of kindness and fidelity, which tend toward the maintainance of equal rights in the school-room and on the play-ground.

They have realized that good mental work cannot be accomplished either by teacher or scholar, without a fair degree of bodily health and that the example of correct personal habits, is essential to success.

The interest and co-operation existing in a district is easily determined by the record of attendance and the visits of the parents, for parents will almost invariably be prompted to visit a school in which they are interested sufficiently to see that their children are punctual. They thus aid and encourage the teachers and secure to the pupils the greatest possible benefit.

The best results have obtained where the teachers have been employed for successive terms in the same districts, and where amicable relations have existed between parents, teachers and scholars.

Experienced teachers have been employed in most of the schools, two at least are "beyond the fifties" in their number of terms.

In No. 7 the advantage of methodical training for the occupation was very apparent, and a return to the old methods would not be tolerated.

Particular attention has been paid to penmanship, and in several terms every pupil has attended to this important branch.

The children have made good progress in their studies.

The Roll of Honor is, I think, the largest on record, and the number of perfect recitations, reported, is unprecedented.

There is certainly a fair promise that the future active element of our town, will be comprised of men, who will devise liberal things for the children: of men qualified to combine a generous appropriation of money, with the judicious expenditure of the same, and of women, educated to realize their responsibility for the intelligent use of the ballot in school affairs, which the state has so generously conceded to them, the use or neglect of which, is powerful for good or evil.

I have noted with much pleasure, the interest manifested by your prudential committees. Whenever I have met them in the school-room, they have appeared to be men who had the cause of education at heart, and knew and regarded the wants of their particular districts. In the employment of the teacher is involved the failure or success of the school.

The blackboards nearly all need renovating, being at present quite useless, and I would suggest the practicability of procuring a liquid preparation of slate for that purpose. The expense would be trifling, if purchased in quantity, for all the school-rooms at the same time. For particulars I refer to W. J. Spalding.

I would recommend a supply of books of reference for daily use in the school-room. The first step is to provide a place for their safe keeping. It need not be expensive—an old door stands idly in somebody's work-shop—a little paint—a little work to let a few shelves into the wall—a lock with a key in the hands of the teacher, and the books will come.

You have cheerfully contributed towards a library of 1,500 volumes—for the state prison. The insane asylum and the reform school are well provided with books. You cannot expect or desire for your children the benefit of these collections, allow me to plead the cause of the School District Library. "The road of bye and bye leads to the town of Never." Will you do something in this direction the coming year?

I have finished the introduction of the series of readers, commenced by the former superintendent, and have introduced Brand's Lessons on the Human Body as a text-book in Physiology, but have not made its study compulsory. Successful classes have been formed in the village Grammar and in district No. 7.

The whole amount of school revenue has been $1,041.96.

The largest amount appropriated to any one district, $242.28; the least sum so appropriated, $49.87.

For further information see annexed tabular statement.
