REPORT

OF THE

SUPERINTENDING SCHOOL COMMITTEE.

Your Committee would respectfully submit the following report :

DISTRICT NO. 1.

Prudential Committee, JOSHUA F. NOYES.

The summer term of this school was taught in the old house. The number of pupils was small. Some scholars acquitted themselves with credit, and some classes recited well. But there was less improvement than was expected. The order was fair and appeared to have been secured quietly.

The winter term opened in the new house, under a male teacher. The erection of this house had awakened a deep interest in the district in behalf of the school. And the influence of this feeling has been beneficial through the term.

The teacher has secured good order and considerable advance in the various departments of study. He expresses his appreciation of the hearty co-operation of parents and the correct deportment of his pupils. As his examination has not yet taken place, we are not able to make a complete report of his success.

DISTRICT NO. 2.

Prudential Committee, AMOS BUCK.

The closing examination of the summer, showed excellencies and defects. The exercises in Geography, History, and written Arithmetic, were good. But in Colburn's Mental Arithmetic, they were poor. In this branch, as well as in some others, the pupils relied too much on the teacher. The order was good at the first examination, but inferior at the second. Yet it is due to this teacher to state that she had the most difficult school in town, and met with peculiar obstacles. Had she been placed in almost any other district, there is reason to believe that her well known energy and ability would have been more successful.

In the winter term, the school room was crowded by the attendance of many older pupils, and proved to be unfit for the wants of the district. Yet the teacher, with untiring efforts, brought the school under good discipline and general prosperity. The pupils were orderly and studious at the several visits of the Committee, and it is expected that the closing examination will be creditable to both teacher and scholars.

We are sorry to add that sickness has diminished the average attendance to a considerable degree, while some pupils have not been kept in school constantly by their parents, when there was no good reason for their absence.

DISTRICT NO. 3.

Prudential Committee, DANIEL NICHOLS.

This school has presented various difficulties to the teacher. But she labored with much interest, endeavoring by example and precept to instruct her pupils, and manifesting a calm and lady-like temper. The examination gave evidence of a willingness on the part of the teacher to let her school appear just as it was. And for this she deserves especial commendation. Such an example of honesty and truthfulness is of great value in the formation of youthful character.

DISTRICT NO. 4.

Prudential Committee, ALVA H. ALEXANDER.

This school found in Miss Dinsmore a faithful and efficient teacher. The exercises were loud, prompt and correct. And among summer schools, this ranked No. 2.

In the report we find these words written by the teacher: "It has been my object to do justice to all." We have only to add that this object was accomplished as far as our knowledge extends.

The winter term, taught by Mr. Noyes, was successful. The order was good, the instruction thorough, and the feeling between teacher and pupils pleasant and harmonious. We hope this teacher will be re-engaged by some future Committee.

DISTRICT NO. 5.

Prudential Committee, EBEN TABOR.

This is a very small school, too small to be as valuable to the pupils as if there were larger classes. The teacher maintained good order, and her school gave evidence of her faithfulness. The exercise in Physiology and the first in Geography and Arithmetic, were good.

DISTRICT NO. 6.

Prudential Committee, MOSES D. JOHNSON.

Though Miss Moulton is well known to most of our citizens, yet your Committee's opinion of her qualities for teaching, was drawn from personal inspection of her school. Her classes manifested thoroughness and self-reliance. The order was very good, and secured in a masterly way. The advancement of most classes was highly creditable. Even those in the alphabet exhibited much interest, and some were even enthusiastic.

This school has also been under excellent moral influence, and has, in this respect, we think, come up to the requirement of our laws.

This district ranks No. 1 in respect to its school, and we wish the same could be said of its house. In this latter respect, it must remain No. 6, until the enterprise of the district shall be shown in the erection of a new house.

DISTRICT NO. 7.

Prudential Committee, WILLIAM JOHNSON.

This was Miss Fellows's first school, nor was it the most easy, nor the most difficult for a beginner. The pupils seemed to be advancing during the term, and at the examination gave evidence of moderate improvement. The order through the term was not entirely satisfactory, but on the last day was quite good. And it is to be regretted that there were none of the members of the district present to judge the school for themselves. The teacher deserves especial commendation for making up her report so fully and accurately. Let others imitate her.

DISTRICT NO. 8.

This was Miss Rowell's first term. Circumstances over which your Committee had no control, prevented him from seeing the school often, though he called at the school house three times. The best understanding seemed to exist between the pupils and the teacher, and the parents were satisfied, as far as we know, that she had been faithful in the performance of her duties.

GENERAL OBSERVATIONS.

Having noticed each school separately, it is necessary to speak briefly of some matters of more general concern. In the first place, several new school houses are needed in town. We have already stated that the building in No. 2 is unfit for the purposes of a school. Fifty-four different pupils have been crowded into it this winter, much to the inconvenience of pupils and teacher. The atmosphere of the room has thus been rendered very unhealthy, and it is a deeply significant fact that an unusual proportion of the pupils were taken sick before the term closed. We hope this matter will receive the attention its importance demands.

The houses in Nos. 3 and 5 are both too much out of repair to accommodate a winter school, and it would perhaps be too great a burden for No. 5 to build a good house for its ten scholars. The plan of uniting these two districts, (the 3d and 5th) which has already been agitated, would remedy several existing difficulties. It would be less expensive to build one house large enough for both districts than to build two; and the terms of school would be longer and at more convenient seasons of the year. We hope that this project will meet with favor in both districts and be soon carried into effect. Only two families will be at an inconvenient distance from a new house in a central location, and those families are as near, we think, to the school house in No. 4, as to the present one in No. 5, and can easily be added to No. 4.

The other unworthy school house is in No. 6. May we not hope that this district, long known as one of the best in town, will do something worthy of her past and present position? Shall her scholars contend with this difficulty any longer? And when the new house is erected, we hope to see it on a spacious lot of its own, that the pupils may not be forced into the street, but have room for healthful sports, and that the horse of the visitor may stand hitched in some spot outside of the line of travel on the highway.

We are happy to allude before leaving this subject, to the new house in No. 1. The edifice itself is an honor to the district, and the good feeling manifested during the whole progress of the work is highly creditable to all concerned. Nine hundred and twenty dollars, wisely expended, have secured to this district just such a house as it needs. And we have no doubt that the citizens will find this to be a most valuable investment.

During the winter three male teachers have been employed at almost double the wages paid in the summer. This has resulted in bringing into our schools a number of older pupils, young men and women, who would not probably have been found under the instruction of females in the same districts. We call attention to this fact in order to suggest that the employment of females in our larger districts during the winter, has a tendency to keep a portion of our youth from the advantages of public instruction. We do not mention this to disparage female teachers, but only to point out what seems to be the actual operation of a custom. Many female teachers are eminently qualified for their work, and are an honor to the profession. But at the same time a schoolmaster is generally better fitted to secure order among older boys, and parents feel less hesitation in sending such pupils to him.

The attendance in many schools has been very irregular. The registers are in some instances blackened with marks of tardiness and absence. But in No. 6 we find that Grace H. Moulton, and Sarah J. Heath were neither absent nor tardy the first term, and Marilla Moulton, Charles B. Moulton, and Everett Moulton, were neither tardy nor absent for both terms.

In No. 1, John S. W. Corson, George W. Hoyt, Moses B. Little, Mary J. Little, and Mary Ida Hazeltine were also perfect in attendance for one term, and Mary E. Noyes and Ella V. Corson, for two terms.

In No. 4, Annie L. George, Mary F. Batchelder, Geo. A. Alexander, and George H. Titcomb, were perfect for one term.

In No. 2, several were not tardy nor absent for half of the summer term, and in most of the districts some were nearly perfect.

Finally, we tender our sincere thanks to the teachers, pupils, prudential committees, and parents, for the kindness they have manifested toward us in the discharge of our duties as school committee. And especially would we return thanks to our Heavenly Father for that kind providence that has enabled our youth to enjoy the advantages of public instruction another year.
