ALPHEUS A. HOWE, }
NORA DAVIS, } School Board

Report of Superintendent of Schools.

January 4, 1922.

To the Board of Education and Citizens of Grafton
School District:

An act of the last legislature changes the close of our fiscal year from August 31 to June 30. My report, therefore, covers the period from September 1, 1920, to June 30, 1921.

We were able to continue our schools for the thirty-six weeks required by law, except in West Grafton where the winter term was shortened two weeks. As the number of pupils was reduced to three, at South Grafton, and the teacher wished to be released, this school was closed at the end of the fall term and the pupils have since been transported to the Depot school.

The annual average salary of teachers is increased somewhat from last year, but in no case has it gone beyond the average paid to teachers of the same grade throughout the state. In several cases it has been much lower than the average. This means that under the present law, since the district raises for elementary school purposes an amount equal to one-half of one per cent of the equalized valuation the state makes up the balance required for the support of the schools. If we could secure teachers with normal school training and some years of experience we could pay larger salaries without raising the tax rate or expending an increased amount of local money. The intent of the law is to give the children of Grafton as good instruction as is given to the children of Franklin or Manchester. The greatest difficulty here lies in our inability to find trained teachers who will take rural school positions. Under the recent extreme shortage, and until there is a much larger supply of trained teachers than there is at the present time the cities and larger villages will take practically all the teachers who have had professional training. As the number of girls entering our normal and training schools is increasing from year to year we may reasonably hope that within a few years even the rural towns may have a larger per cent. of really professional teachers. Not every trained teacher, however, is able to adapt herself to rural school work; and we do well to recognize the conscientious, painstaking, and really admirable work done by our untrained teachers. Many things have been left undone that ought to have been done, and some things have been done that ought not to have been done; but in every school there has been good work going on. A closer acquaintance between teachers and parents would encourage the teachers and help them to understand their pupils and the community which they are serving. I wish every parent might meet the teacher during the first month of the school year. This personal touch would do much to prevent the critical attitude which too often develops in rural communities.

Of the five pupils completing the eighth grade last June, four have gone on into high school. The total number of different pupils registered is one more than in the previous year. The average membership is increased from 57 to 64, and the per cent. of attendance from 90 to 94. The transient population in West Grafton and the difficulty in following up matters of attendance in that rather detached section, especially as it concerned children in the lumber camp, and one very un-American resident who demanded unnecessary transportation, gave a low per cent. there. In the Depot school 98 per cent., and in the South, 97 per cent. for one term, are two of the highest three in this Union for the year. The number of cases of tardiness is 83 less than in the preceding year. This ought to be lessened still more in the present year. This can easily be done when the parents realize the advantage to the child in being punctual.

Progress has been made in grading pupils so that they may be given the work best adapted to them. To this end standard tests have been given in reading, arithmetic, spelling and geography. These are scholastic tests, whose results are dependent upon the school work covered. It would be of advantage in many cases to give the so-called intelligence tests also, to determine the child's natural ability. These tests are available at small costs and are somewhat like the army tests given during the war.

The physical examination was made by Dr. Knapp, and cards were sent to parents whose children needed medical attention. The following summary indicates the result of the examination: Defective vision, 12; defective hearing, 3; Orthopedic defects, 1; defective teeth, 45; hypertrophied tonsils, 31; defects of breathing, 1; unvaccinated, 9. It is the opinion of the physician that no other one condition is so serious a handicap as defective teeth. These cause indigestion, malnutrition and other debilitating conditions. The one important business of a child is to grow, and anything interfering with growth injures the child for his entire life. Several children have been fitted with glasses, enabling them to do better school work and relieving them from severe headaches. Many need treatment for adenoids and tonsils. In some cases poor school work appears to be directly due to poor physical condition. When we can introduce hot noon lunches during the winter term we shall unquestionably see improvement in the quality of work done by some children. Those who eat an insufficient breakfast and bring only a small, cold luncheon are not in condition for work. One such case was taken care of last year by a kind neighbor living near the school. Other cases should be taken care of in the school itself. This work is backed up in many places by the Red Cross or other local organizations, in some places it is managed entirely by the teachers, each child paying the few pennies necessary to cover the cost of the cocoa, soup, or other hot food prepared by the teacher. The character of the noon recess is noticeably improved wherever such lunches are served. The children sit at the desks instead of running about, they become more quiet, orderly and courteous, and are in every way benefited. The teachers without experience are generally reluctant to undertake this additional service, and to those with experience it often seems too great a burden, but I could hardly name one who having once established the hot lunch would be willing to give it up during the winter months. The general plan is not to serve an entire luncheon, but one simple hot dish to supplement the cold luncheon brought from home. I hope that some way may be found by another year to start this work.

There have been some improvements in school houses and grounds, The land purchased at the Center for additional playground is a great advantage to that school. The addition of cupboards at the Depot and East enables the schools to take better care of reference books and supplies; the addition of a bookshelf and new curtains at the Depot adds much to the room; a new window in the Gifford school considerably increases the light; new paint on blackboards, and fresh varnish on desks made the school rooms attractive and sanitary for the opening of the new school year. I should mention also that through the efforts of the teachers and pupils the Center and East schools are equipped with organs which help in the school music.

The coming in of new families since the Razor Hill and Wild Meadows schools were closed necessitates two transportation routes this year to East Grafton in addition to the ones maintained last year from South Grafton to the Depot and from the Beals place to West Grafton. Transportation is one the biggest problems throughout the state, and one of the largest expenses. In many cases it seems highly undesirable to continue a school for a half dozen pupils, especially when several of the children are likely to prove but temporary residents, and when it is impossible to obtain satisfactory teachers or suitable boarding places as is often the case. In West Grafton there is but one home open to a school teacher, and in case this should not be available another year there would seem to be no other way but to transport the children to an out-of-town school. It might be well to consider a joint school with Springfield, to be maintained in their Maxfield district, which could be reached with comparative ease from all parts of the Hardy district. The number of our children in that section at present is eight, but may change greatly from that before another year.

In speaking of school house improvements and transportation I have come into the present school year, as these matters are of immediate interest.

Your buildings are in general in good condition, the more important minor repairs having been attended to from year to year. Some alterations suggested last year should however, be made as early as there may be available money.

Respectfully submitted,
IDELLA K. FARNUM.
