ANNUAL REPORT

OF THE

SUPERINTENDING SCHOOL COMMITTEE.

TO THE CITIZENS OF RYE :

It affords your committee much pleasure to say that during the past year your schools have enjoyed a good degree of prosperity ; that, we think, your scholars have made reasonable improvement in their studies ; and that your schools generally have been quiet and orderly, several of them remarkably so, being perhaps model schools in good order and government. No acts of insubordination, or important complaints have been reported, requiring the disagreeable action of your committee, and nothing has transpired to mar the general good feeling and harmony, which, for several years have existed in the schools of the town. Your teachers have kindly received, and readily adopted the suggestions of your committee, while your scholars, by their prompt compliance, and respectful confidence in the counsels of their teachers, their studious habits, courteous behaviour, and moral deportment—both in and around the school rooms—have shown the kind and generous support, and cooperation of the Parents, in upholding and sustaining good government, and maintaining good order, in the school-room.

Happily the importance of common school education, is a subject upon which all parents are interested; the different religious denominations, as well as the different political parties, are united on the subject of school education. The future public and professional men of our country, the future statesmen, and political officers, state and national, are to come from our common schools, and there to receive the foundation of that education, which is to fit them for their station..

The common school is the friend of the poor; the rich may send their children from home, and pay the exorbitant price now demanded for an accomplished education, while the poor man cannot; yet if they improve the facilities of an education, afforded by the common school, they can compete in the battle of life, with their more wealthy neighbors. Here the children of all classes meet on a common level, and are entitled to equal benefits. We have in New England, in our common schools a richer mine than any which California affords. Some of our poorest young men have worked here, and have become rich in intelligence, character, influence and in wealth and they are scattered over our whole country.

The rich have a moral obligation resting on them to promote the cause of free education. It is for their interest, as well as their duty to sustain the common school. It costs less to educate youth than to take care of the uneducated. Intelligence gives security and wealth to the community. Sustain and encourage common schools, and make them what they should be—nurseries of intelligence, virtue and integrity—and you have done much towards securing happiness to yourselves, and prosperity to your children; you have done more towards banishing misery and crime from the land, than you would by erecting an almshouse at every corner, and a prison in every town.

We have a right to be proud of our common school; it has developed a mighty power, which is at work over this whole land, giving impulse to every noble movement, and energy to every active enterprise. The general diffusion of knowledge among all classes, leaves none unbenefited. The agriculturist, mechanic, and statesman of young America, have already become the successful competitors, of those of the old world.

The value of a good moral and practical education, to the prosperity and usefulness of our children, and the future welfare of our country cannot be estimated. To our youth there are two paths in the journey of life: the one is the path of industry, intelligence, rectitude and usefulness, that leads to respectability and honor in life; and a departure amid general regret; the other, the path of indolence, ignorance and vice, where life is disrespected and death is unlamented—a destiny which none desire their children to gain.
