Report of Board of Education.

Agreeable to the vote at the last school meeting a supervisory district was formed with Hampstead and Raymond, and the services of Clarence E. Baker of Raymond were secured at a salary of nine hundred dollars, making the cost to the town one hundred fifty dollars.

The schools have been in charge of the following teachers:—North, L. Franc Fellows; South Primary, Fronie E. Towle; South Grammar, Grace Clifford.

The whole number of pupils registered during the year is ninety-six. Fourteen are attending school out of town, for which we pay the tuition. On account of the larger number and an increase of tuition, the amount required for this purpose is larger than usual.

It has been the custom for several years for the Selectmen to pay this bill. For the present year a special appropriation of one hundred dollars was made for this purpose, the balance being paid as heretofore. In the future the amounts required for tuition and school supplies must, by law, be recommended by the school board and assessed without vote of the district.

We recommend that four hundred dollars be raised for tuition and one hundred dollars for supplies.

S. W. HUNTINGTON,
C. M. COLLINS,
FLORA M. TUCK,

Board of Education.

SUPERINTENDENT'S REPORT.

To the Honorable School Board of Danville:

There are several things to be considered in my first report to you. I am certain that all concerned in the Danville schools are desirous of bringing them up to a high state of efficiency. There has been several causes for the rather low standard that prevails. Principal amongst these has been the frequent change of teachers, and a consequent lack of any continued policy. The short school year has been another serious drawback. It seems to have been the prevailing belief that the children could accomplish a year's work in thirty weeks. Promotions have been made under this supposition with ill results to the children. In a school course of eight years there has been a loss of forty-eight weeks. Can any child be expected to do eight years' work in six and two-thirds years? The result has been that nothing has been finished, the work has not been thorough, abstract examples have been taught and not principles.

Another serious drawback has been the prevailing idea amongst teachers and parents that the Grammar school was a place in which to prepare the pupils to enter a High school, rather than a school proper in which to instruct children for the sake of education. Good practical schools can never result from this policy. The subjects taught in the Grammar school are of more practical use than everything that is taught thereafter, and it is the foundation of all education. A boy whose Grammar school education has been defective is handicapped for life. Visit any Secondary school in the state and you will find these pupils, writing poor English, misspelling common words, and in other ways incapable of doing decent work. If our Public schools are to be of any practical use, if they are to be worth the expenditure, then every child who attends them must be so instructed that he can read his own language understandingly and intelligibly, write a letter in language that can be read and understood, be able to work simple, practical arithmetic accurately and quickly, and have a general understanding of United States history, geography, and know the simple rules of personal hygiene. Such a child will be fitted to continue his education with profit.

The question of obtaining and retaining good teachers can be helped by employing teachers holding state certificates and by making the school year longer. I therefore recommend that in future no teachers be employed excepting those having this qualification, and that the school year be lengthened to thirty-six weeks.

If reading is to be taught a liberal supply of proper material must be supplied, half of the book money should be expended for books of this class. I recommend that the sum of thirty-five dollars be assessed for books, thirty for supplies, and two hundred and fifty for High school tuition.

In closing I wish to thank the Board, the parents, the teachers and pupils for their aid.

Respectfully submitted,

CLARENCE E. BAKER,

Supt.
