

University of New Hampshire

University of New Hampshire Scholars' Repository

UNH International Educator Newsletter

Global Education Center

Fall 2013

Fall 2013, From the Director's Corner

Claire Malarte-Feldman

Center for International Education

Follow this and additional works at: https://scholars.unh.edu/international_news

Recommended Citation

Malarte-Feldman, Claire, "Fall 2013, From the Director's Corner" (2013). International Educator: the Newsletter of the UNH Global Engagement Editorial Board. 161.

https://scholars.unh.edu/international_news/161

This News Article is brought to you for free and open access by the Global Education Center at University of New Hampshire Scholars' Repository. It has been accepted for inclusion in UNH International Educator Newsletter by an authorized administrator of University of New Hampshire Scholars' Repository. For more information, please contact Scholarly.Communication@unh.edu.

International Educator

The Newsletter of UNH Global Engagement

Fall 2013

FROM THE DIRECTOR'S CORNER

Claire Malarte-Feldman in Istanbul

As I set up to write this piece, I cannot help thinking that it is quite likely the last one of this sort that I'll be writing, and I feel sad. The last six years that I spent at CIE have been some of the most gratifying in my whole professional life. The work at CIE is always interesting, often challenging, and occasionally crazy. But working with the CIE team is consistently rewarding. It was such a privilege to consider myself part of that team. I am proud of our accomplishments over those years. When I came on board we had 5.24 full-time positions; I'll leave the center with 7.41 full-time positions and a Hood House lecturer to teach a large part of the core courses in the International Affairs dual major program. CIE is now a well-staffed, well-functioning office, which can make UNH proud of the services it delivers. We recently hit a milestone of sending approximately 800 students abroad per year, which represents 26.77 % of UNH undergraduate students studying abroad (an increase of 6.77% since 2007). Since the first class graduated in 1985, the number of International Affairs alumni has reached 870. Our strategy to internationalize UNH worked: we now have a Confucius Institute on campus; Navitas brings more and more international students to diversify and enrich our campus; and in the summer of 2014, a new full-time senior administrator, with demonstrated expertise in international education, will take the lead of a larger structure which will house most things international at UNH. I can say without a doubt that CIE has grown into a truly respectable and respected center of expertise on international partnerships, study abroad programs development, international risk management and international affairs instruction. Thank you to all of my CIE team members who make our daily work in Hood House look like fun, to all my UNH colleagues who tirelessly give time and energy for the benefit of international education and to all the generous donors who help us at CIE make study abroad more affordable.

I feel sad, that is true. I'll miss CIE very much when I leave at the end of December 2013. But I leave the Center in the very capable hands of Beth Kılınç who has been approved to serve as CIE interim director for the remainder of the academic year. And I feel very glad that I was here to help create these changes and to set in motion the direction in which international education is heading at UNH. Also, I am looking forward to my long overdue sabbatical leave in my beloved Languedoc, to going back to my research, and next year, to rejoining my home department of Languages, Literatures and Cultures.

Claire Malarte-Feldman

Copyright © 2015, Center for International Education • The University of New Hampshire
223 Hood House • 89 Main Street • Durham, NH 03824
tel: 603-862-2398 • fax: 603-862-0169
study.abroad@unh.edu • international.affairs@unh.edu