UNH Selected to Host Argentine Fulbrighters

Friday, December 1, 2017

UNH will welcome 20 Argentinian undergraduate Friends of Fulbright students for a six-week immersion program in January 2018. CIEGE staff collaborated with university academic and residential life colleagues to develop a comprehensive academic and cultural program. The program is designed to strengthen the Argentinian students' knowledge of U.S. higher education and build deep connections with U.S. students through shared classes, intercultural dormitory housing, a language and culture buddy program, extracurricular activities and small group cross-cultural academic collaboration.

The Fulbrighters coming to UNH have diverse majors and academic interests. They will participate in two classes related to their studies and an English as a Second Language Institute course focusing on advanced academic and presentation skills. In addition, they will partner with students in Professor Lori Hopkins' Latin American Culture and Civilization class to complete a joint research project.

UNH looks forward to hosting the students in what we envision will be a mutually beneficial student to student experience. Students (UNH and Fulbrighters) will benefit from increased international engagement, the sharing of cultures, and the addition of native Spanish speakers to our campus that has few Latin American students.
