For some students, it's a part of college as important as living in a dorm or studying a certain subject: taking a term or even a year to study abroad. Each year, some 700 Wildcats travel, taking advantage of the more than 500 programs UNH partners with in 39 different countries, on every continent except Antarctica.

A record number of UNH students and alumni were named 2018 Fulbright Scholars (<https://www.cies.org/>) in one of the nation's most competitive programs of its kind. "This exceeds our most successful year, 2016, when we had seven students accept Fulbrights," notes Jeanne Sokolowski, director of the Office of National Fellowships.

This past spring, seven UNH students with interests as varied as agricultural science and neurology were honored by the Benjamin A. Gilman International Scholarship Program

(<https://www.iie.org/Programs/Gilman-Scholarship-Program>), a U.S. Department of State program that helps students study abroad, “gaining skills critical to our national security and economic competitiveness.”
