DURHAM, NH – New York Senator Hillary Clinton has begun to pull away from her Democratic rivals in the New Hampshire primary. Clinton is seen as the most experienced candidate and the candidate best able to defeat the Republicans in November 2008. However, more than half of the Democratic electorate say they are still trying to decide who they will vote for.

These findings are based on the latest CNN / WMUR New Hampshire Primary Poll^{*} conducted by the University of New Hampshire Survey Center. Three hundred seven (307) randomly selected likely New Hampshire Democratic primary voters were interviewed by telephone between September 17 and September 24, 2007. The margin of sampling error is +/- 5.6%.

Democratic Primary

Hillary Clinton, who has led the field of potential Democratic candidates among likely New Hampshire Democratic Primary voters for more than two years, has increased her lead over her primary rivals, Illinois Senator Barack Obama and former North Carolina Senator John Edwards. Clinton currently is favored by 43% of likely Democratic Primary voters followed by Obama (20%), Edwards (12%), New Mexico Governor Bill Richardson (6%), Delaware Senator Joe Biden (3%), Ohio Congressman Dennis Kucinich (3%), Connecticut Senator Chris Dodd (1%), some other candidate (1%), and 11% are undecided.

When former Vice President Al Gore is included, Clinton still leads (41%), followed by Obama (19%), Edwards (11%), Gore (7%), and Richardson (6%).

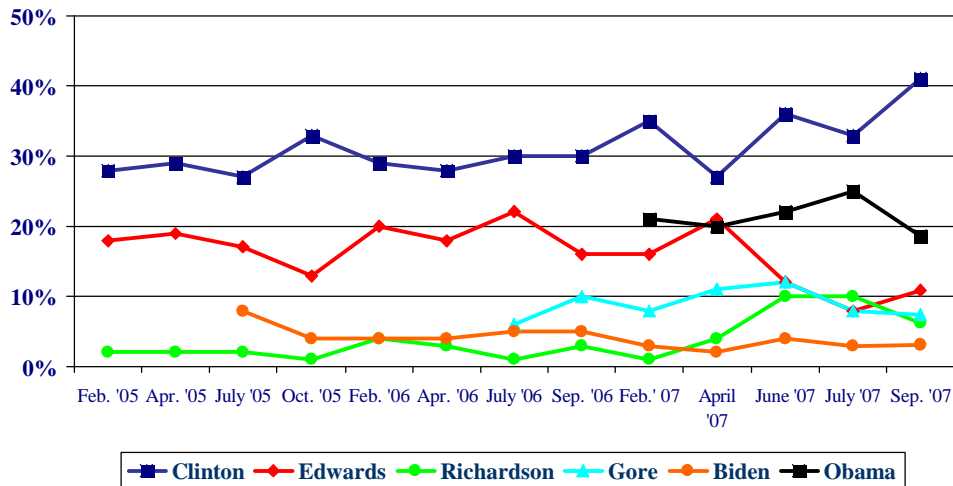

Clinton has increased her lead in recent months. She held a 8 percentage point lead over Obama in a Granite State Poll in July and has increased that margin to 22 percentage points in the latest poll, moving up from 33% in July to 41% in September while Obama dropped from 25% to 19% in the same period.

Edwards has stopped dropping in New Hampshire, but has not made up much of the ground he had lost. Support for Richardson has dropped somewhat from 10% July to 6%.

“Obama is now a lot closer to the pack than he is to Clinton,” said Dante Scala, associate professor of political science at the University of New Hampshire. “Clinton is now the frontrunner, beyond a reasonable doubt. Contrary to the conventional wisdom at the beginning of the year, Democratic voters have taken a liking to her. That means that in order to catch up, her opponents will have to ‘go negative’ -- a risky proposition in a multicandidate primary.”

NH Democratic Presidential Primary – Likely Democratic Primary Voters

Still Undecided

Even though most New Hampshire Democratic voters say they are currently supporting a candidate, this does not mean they have made up their minds to vote for that candidate. When asked if they have definitely decided on a candidate, if they are leaning toward a candidate, or if they are still trying to decide, only 17 percent say they have definitely decided who they will vote for, 28% say they are leaning toward a candidate, and 55% say they are still trying to decide. The percentage who say they have definitely decided increased from 10% in July and the percentage who are undecided dropped from 64 percent in July.

New Hampshire Democrats, as a whole, are satisfied with the Democratic presidential field – 49% say they are very satisfied with the Democratic candidates, 43% are somewhat satisfied, 7% are not very satisfied, and only 1% are not satisfied at all. The percentage who say they are very satisfied with the field has increased from 32% in July.

Undeclared Voters

Undeclared voters, often referred to as Independents, can vote in either the Democratic or Republican primary. Among those undeclared voters who say they will vote in the Democratic primary election, Clinton has cut into what had been a source of support for Obama. Clinton currently leads among undeclared voters by a 37 to 20 percent margin followed by Edwards (10%) and Richardson (9%). In July, Obama held a narrow lead over Clinton – 32% to 30%.

Undeclared voters continue to overwhelmingly say they will vote in the Democratic primary. In the latest Granite State Poll, two-thirds of undeclared voters who plan on voting in the Primary say they will vote in the Democratic Primary.

Favorability Ratings

Clinton's strength is reflected in her favorability ratings where she is viewed favorably by 77% of likely Democratic primary voters, 15% have an unfavorable opinion of her, and 8% are neutral. Her net favorability rating – the percentage who have a favorable opinion minus the percentage who have an unfavorable opinion – is a very strong +62%. In the April Granite State Poll, her net favorability rating was only +40%

Obama is also viewed very favorably by New Hampshire Democrats – 78% have a favorable opinion of him, 11% have an unfavorable opinion, 8% are neutral, and 3% don't know enough to say. Obama's net favorability rating is +67%, up from +59% in April.

Edwards has high favorability rating as well – 76% have a favorable opinion of Edwards, 10% have an unfavorable opinion of him, 10% are neutral, and 4% don't know enough to say. Edwards' net favorability rating is +66%, down slightly from +72% in April.

Among the other Democratic challengers, Richardson has the highest net favorability rating (+39%), followed by Biden (+25%), Dodd (+17%), and Kucinich (+4%). Mike Gravel has a -16% net favorability rating. And while he is not a declared candidate, Gore is popular among Democrats in New Hampshire with a +54% net favorability rating.

Electability

Clinton has increased her lead in part because she is convincing Democrats that she has the best chance of defeating the Republican candidate in the general election. Currently, 54% of likely Democratic primary voters say she has the best chance of defeating the Republican candidate, only 13% say Obama has the best chance of defeating the Republican. The percentage of voters who think Clinton has the best chance of winning in November has increased steadily from 37% in June, to 47% in July, to 54% in the latest poll.

Other Candidate Qualities

The Clinton campaign has been emphasizing her experience in televisions ads, in mailings, and in debates. Clinton is seen as the candidate who has the right experience to be President by 47% of likely Democratic primary voters, 14% say Gore has the right experience, only 8% name Obama, and 8% name Edwards. “The Obama campaign faces a difficult challenge in convincing voters that he is ready to be President,” said Andrew Smith, Director of the UNH Survey Center. “Once voters get an impression about a candidate, it is difficult to change that image.”

When asked which candidate is most likely to bring needed change to the U.S., 37% name Clinton, 25% say Obama, and 8% name Edwards. “Obama has campaigned on the idea that he is able to change politics in America, but the Clinton campaign is working hard to take that mantle from him as well,” said Smith.

The one area where Obama still leads is in likeability – 39% think he is the most likeable Democratic candidate, 27% say Edwards is, and only 16% name Clinton. But in an election where Democrats are desperate to regain the White House, likeability is not as important as electability.

Debates

There have been several Democratic debates so far in the campaign and there will be another on September 26 at Dartmouth University and Democratic voters think these debates are important. Almost one quarter (24%) say that debates are very important to their vote, 56% say they are somewhat important, 13% say they are not very important and only 7% say they are not important at all.

CNN / WMUR NH Primary Poll Methodology

These findings are based on the latest CNN / WMUR NH Primary Poll, conducted by the University of New Hampshire Survey Center. Three hundred seven (307) likely 2008 Democratic Primary voters (margin of sampling error +/- 5.6%) were interviewed between September 17 and September 24, 2007. Results reported for other subgroups have potential for somewhat larger variation than those for the entire population.

The data have been weighted to adjust for numbers of voters and telephone lines within households, respondent sex, and region of the state. In addition to potential sampling error, all surveys have other potential sources of non-sampling error including question order effects, question wording effects, and non-response.
