Comments

Timothy Riley, Redressing the Silent Interim: Precautionary Action & Short Term Tests in Toxicological Risk Assessment

The author recommends that a stronger emphasis be placed on creating and implementing short-term tests that use iterative, conservative-based, tiered procedures in conjunction with a precautionary attitude during the interim phase of toxicological risk assessments.

281

Bernadette West, Jane Lewis & Michael Greenberg, Journalists' Views of the Environment: Issues and Challenges

In advocating the use of an environmental handbook for journalists, the authors report on a survey of reporters and editors regarding salient environmental issues in different regions of the United States and the emphasis placed on environmental reporting in newsrooms.

..... 299

Kristin Shrader-Frechette, Workplace Pollution: Nuclear Safety, Ethics, and the Exploitation-Avoidance Argument

The author reviews evidence of poor worker health and safety practices in United States Department of Energy nuclear facilities in contending that less protective standards for workplace hazards constitute an environmental injustice not rectified by a hazard pay premium.
