MERRY CHRISTMAS ALL. The editors of "The New Hampshire" send their best wishes to all their many friends a most successful Christmas. "Happy New Year!" You have never been more needed than now, and in the months to come, we are especially directed to your service. You will try to talk about those things which are of interest to you who are so closely connected with the calls of business demand that you are, for many good reasons, in close touch with the daily news.

"Happy New Year" is a May. The Y. W. C. A.'s seem to be very much interested in the news of New Hampshire colleges and finally for the interest of the State of New Hampshire without whose loyal support our college could not exist.

THE QUAKER WHO MADE CHEMISTRY A SCIENCE

CR A V E N D A H S had shown that there were two volumes of hydrogen and one of oxygen always in the act of, and to form water and nothing more. Prior, a Frenchman, proved that natural and artificial carbonates of copper are always the result of this process.

"There must be some law in this," reasoned Dalton (1766-1844), the Quaker who made chemistry a science. It was he who discovered the atomic weights of elements, the number of atoms in a molecule of water, and the general principles of chemical combination. His work was based on the law of definite proportions, which states that a combination can occur only in definite proportions. His discovery was a fundamental step in the development of modern chemistry.

Dalton's work was published in 1803, and in that same year, Napoleon made his brother Joseph, king of Spain. This was considered a political event of tremendous importance. However, no one knew then that Joseph would not last. In 1808, Infant of Basket, his child, was born. Four years later, Joseph died, leaving his brother in charge of the Spanish throne.

The event was a shock to Europe, as Joseph was widely regarded as a good and capable ruler. His death left the way open for Napoleon's rise to power.

In a world of fluctuating events, the quest of science and research remained constant. Modern scientists have gone beyond Dalton's work. They have discovered that the anion can be combined with both hydrogen and oxygen to form water, and nitric acid, with hydrogen and oxygen to form nitric acid. In the Research Laboratories of the General Electric Company, much has been done to make this theory practical. Scientists have found that chemists can actually predict the physical, chemical, and electrical properties of compounds by experimental discovery.

The A. O. five entered the game on the favoritism side. The Phi Mu Delta five, under the direction of H. E. Howard, a touch better than the A.
