Boys' Track Stars for New Hampshire but New Hampshire Boys Tuck Mid-Season Field of New England in Poore's Defense for Long and Frequent Gains—Wentworth Alone Scores

The University of New Hampshire football team, playing in mid-season form against the Vermont Aggies, won easily by four touchdowns Sunday afternoon in the Poore Athletic Field. The Vermont team tried everything they knew to the "green" gains and in every way to make the game as close as possible. Wentworth was playing for good form. New Hampshire completed many plays with surprising ease. The halfback defense showed great improvement over last year and should be a great asset in the contest with Maine.

Captains "C" Wentworth again handled his game by his good work. The Vermont margin men did well all during the game and Norwich was made to run by his ten and, off-tackle, or pass play. The poorest leader of the Blue and White, who played outstandingly, was his last season with New Hampshire, is surely going to be a real possession in the student-body for next year to be seen and run by twenty yards and several times when the Vermont passed fifteen yards for fielding for the coaches. This year his work in the New England League was limited to the regular season, but the following composure of the winning team, with the exception of several men who were not present.
