Those who debate the right of the commuter student to "educate" and question the wisdom of his decision are, in my opinion, blind if they cannot see that this phenomenon is gaining momentum and that the total student body is also being influenced by the growth of commuter education.

The number of commuter students studying at the University of New Hampshire has increased from 118 in the fall of 1924 to 136 this semester. This means that 51% of the commuter students are taking courses at the University, while 49% are taking courses at other institutions.

In the past, the University has been dominated by mass instincts and tendencies. As a result, the rules governing the conduct of students have been over-complicated and too strict. The matter was also called to the attention of the Rules Committee and has been properly observed. If the regulations were properly observed it would be taken up. But, in the meantime, there are those who are taking advantage of the situation for personal gain.

The New Hampshire student body is taking an active interest in the affairs of the University. The student body has presented its opinion on proposed changes. The New Hampshire student body wishes to have its say in the matter. The student body wishes to be heard.

WINNING THE WEST

Irrigation by electrically driven pumps has made hundreds of thousands of acres of desert land in the Intermountain West blossom like the rose.

For a few cents a month per acre, electricity—the giant wheel of the earth—can be sent from distant lakes and rivers to minutest valleys, producing rich harvests of fruits and vegetables, cereals and forage.

What electricity is doing for the farmer is only a prelude to the promised industrial triumph, portation, City and Country life or any of the professions. It is a food ready for your use and which, wisely used, will make the impossible of today an accomplished fact tomorrow.

How electricity does these things is important to the layman. How electricians do it is important to every college man or woman, no matter what their life's work may be.
