AUDIT SHOWS SHORTAGE IN STATE FUNDS

Benj. Thompson Moneys Used for State Purposes

EMOTION REMOVED—recently, the University president George W. Hoarfrost, to the public accounts at the request of the joint Senate and House committee

The audit shows that over period of six years, or more, the state passed a fixed fund of income each quarter, and that the committee will recommend the state to the state treasury at an amount of $650,000

It appears to be an assured fact that the state's income will be as large as is desired

The committee has been handed detailed and little information has come from the members. However, such information as has been given suggests that the state is now in a much better position than the one it was last year

While the latter process seems to be the more usual one, it is always in any consideration, there are those who look upon the out of state enrollment as being a profit to the state

It appears to be a fact that the state is now in a much better position than the one it was last year

THE CYNNIQUE

One who signs himself "A Strange Man" has in a recent complaint concerning Connective Endowment, not only put the question, but has gone a step further and focused the issue with such telling force that it will be difficult for the Financial Committee to escape the issue. The issue he raises is: "What is the nature of our Endowment?" It will be difficult for the Committee to escape the issue, for the "Strange Man" has stated it so clearly that it is impossible to misunderstand it.

Dear Sir or Madam,

In your recent letter you have asked what the nature of our Endowment is. I would like to point out that the Endowment is the most important asset of any college, and that it is the duty of the Trustees to see that it is properly used. The Endowment is the foundation of our college, and it is the duty of the Trustees to see that it is used for the benefit of the students.

Very truly yours,

A Strange Man.

THE TURQUOISE

The main point brought out by Mr. J. C. Page, '25, in his address to The New Hampshire Staff in the past few weeks has been the necessity of making the college attractive to the outside world. Mr. Page has pointed out that we need to do more to advertise the college and to make it more known to the outside world.

The New Hampshire Staff has decided to eliminate the last minute panic of March 3, 1879.

Walter P. Thurber, '26, pus ideas, the local groups are pretending to be interested in college life. There is an inevitable atmosphere of utility and intramural friendship. There is a desire to be practical. Piously an interment ceremony is planned for the quiet spot. It is a spirit of a more formal kind. We are all aiming at something important and being realistic.

We are not intellectual. We are deplorably lacking in the essential qualities of the intellectual, that is to say, in the quality of intellectual integrity. Our college does not require much from us, but it is asking too much of us. It is asking for a more intimate friendship with the intellectual world.

The greatest need is for a grander type of intellectualism. We are all aiming at something important and being realistic. We are not intellectual. "The Play's the Thing"

John Barrymore himself would have "got the book" if he did not know his cues, for read his lines as called for by the action of the play.

Engineers get cues, too— from the industrial drama of which they are a part. Like actors, their performance must fit their role in an economic play.

Thus the reason that the journals, the societies, the schools, colleges, teachers, and well-known public men are urging engineers to study economics— to learn the nature and effect of economic laws.

To build the largest generator or the smallest meter, for example, is not always in itself a great engineering feat. The feat consists in having it ready at a time, and with such features as the prevailing economic situation calls for.

In this sense engineers— and particularly Westinghouse engineers— must be "practicing engineers." They must follow closely the "action of the play"— analyzing fundamental conditions in every field, and calculating their causes and probable effects.

All this, so that when a cue is spoken in factory or home, on farm or railroad, on the sea or in the air, they may be ready.
