When Xerxes went

The great Persian ruler gazed from a hilltop upon his vast army of a million men. It was the largest army that had ever existed. And he turned away with tears in his eyes because in a hundred years at the most it would be gone. That army was a symbol of power, destructive and transient.

Today, in one machine, now being built in the General Electric shops, there is combined the muscular energy of two million men, a great machine, a steam turbine, is also a symbol of power—a new power that is constructive and permanent.

Its unprecedented size, a record in construction of such machines, is a pledge to the people that the electrical industry is on the march, ever on the alert to supply electricity at a low cost to all.
