On the U. S. Navy Airplane Carriers "Lexington" and "Saratoga" the situation is met with a new weapon of the war. The radio equipment on these ships is designed to send on different wave lengths. Each plane's receiving set has its own wave length. A wave length is selected by the operator which corresponds to the plane to be reached with a message.

Radio equipment on the carrier ships of the Navy is designed to be of the greatest value in future wars. The development of radio equipment is making war a very different game than it was in the past. Historical events will be made by radio rather than by the written word. The use of radio equipment will enable the fleet to communicate with the fleet in the shortest possible time.
