WILDCATS UPSET BEAR

Blue and White Defeats Brown for First Time in History of Relationships

As the excitement of the New Hampshire victory over Brown gradually subsides, students are already looking forward to the next games, prayer that prizes should be given to the New Hampshire athletes who comprised the Brown football team. Among the colleges represented in the game were the University of New Hampshire, Colby College, University of Vermont, and the New Hampshire collegiate athletic association. It is expected that the University of New Hampshire will win the next game.

Two McLaughlin started his success by leaving a few points in the Brown game, but he was not the only one to score in the game. He scored two points in the Vermont game, and one point in the New Hampshire game. The Vermont and New Hampshire teams are scheduled to play in the New Hampshire state championships.

Now that the twenty-first game is in the air and the first signs of snow are apparent, the New Hampshire athletic association is beginning to plan for the next winter season. The association is planning to return to the old schedule of six games per season, with the addition of two new games, one against Dartmouth and one against the Colby athletic association. The association is also planning to organize a new division for the junior class, which will include a number of schools with strong athletic programs.

VICTORY IS SWEET

After being turned back nine times by the diving Brown Bear, the Wildcats came through as the least expected winner in the white heat of Brown Stadium on Saturday afternoon. It is not yet known whether any official challenge will be filed against the result. But if any such challenge is made, the decision will stand.

New Hampshire has the first two All-Americans in the history of the game, and they did magnificent work in leading the Wildcats to victory. There were several other brilliant performances as well, but that was the day of the All-Americans.

The victory was a surprise to many people, but it was not a surprise to those who have followed the season. The Wildcats have been playing well all year, and they have had several close calls.

New Hampshire has the best defense in the nation, and they were able to hold Brown to just 0 points. They also had the best offense, and they were able to score 7 points.

The victory is a great boost for the Wildcats, and it is a great boost for New Hampshire. It is a victory that will be remembered for a long time to come.

The Wildcats' next game is against the New York Yankees, and it is a game that will be eagerly anticipated.

THE THESIS DATA QUEST LEADS TO M. I. T.

Four seniors accompanied by Harry R. Bemberg, Consulting Editor, and Get Information Concerning Some of the Theses Published Last Year.

Four seniors, Leonard R. Boshotsky, Piers E. Engel, Oscar A. Hall, and Theodore E. Riddle, visited Massachusetts Institute of Technology Friday afternoon in quest of a thesis on which the seniors, who work in the Theses Department of the library, were interested. All except Engel were working on their theses, but he has not decided on one yet. The other seniors are: Riddle, who is working on a thesis in psychology concerning the character of the performed drama in which he is the star; Riddle, who has written on the problem of the character of the various problems at Orlodes. They found that Professor Taylor, head of the department of psychology, has developed a designed program of the thesis, and that he had thus far given only the seniors an opportunity to work on such a program.

KINDS OF LUBRICANTS NEEDED

Years of Research Fail to Yield the Know-How. Mankind, in general, regards a soap sud or a drop of oil as worthless. Aside from the use of soap in household cleansing and of oil in motor and machinery lubrication, the use of such materials is minimal. But it is true that the soap sud is not always the least valuable by-product of a chemical reaction since it is a valuable source of the anionic surfactant used in the detergent industry.
