New Hampshire to Get Twelve Unemployed Reforestation Camps
by James G. Hurrell

It is expected, in accordance with the Federal Government's program of employing 50,000 unemployed persons during the month of May, that New Hampshire will locate 24 New Hampshire, 35-acre camps for employment of 50 unemployed persons. The camps will be located in the state's forested areas, where the work will consist of cutting and shipping trees for reforestation. The camps will be operated by the state's conservation department, and the unemployed persons will be paid at the rate of $5 per week for their services.

Staff Writer Finds Government Big Winners in State Lotteries
by Alphonse J. Roy

Recently a prominent government official expressed the hope that the current fiscal crisis would result in a greater reliance on state lotteries. He stated that the government should consider the lottery as a means of raising revenue, and that it should be used to finance public works projects. The official also expressed the belief that the lottery would be a more efficient means of raising revenue than direct taxation, and that it would be a more equitable method of distributing the burden of taxation.

It is the opinion of many economists that the lottery is a bad method of raising revenue. They argue that it is a regressive tax, in that it places a greater burden on the lower-income groups. They also argue that it is a inefficient method of raising revenue, in that it is not able to collect a large amount of money.

The government official's views are supported by the fact that the lottery has been a popular means of raising revenue in many countries. In the United States, for example, the lottery has been used to finance a variety of public works projects, including schools, roads, and hospitals.

The government official also stated that the lottery would be a good means of raising revenue for the state. He argued that the lottery would be a more efficient method of raising revenue than direct taxation, and that it would be a more equitable method of distributing the burden of taxation.

NECESSITIES AND LUXURIES

The announcement of the proposed cut in the salaries of the faculty of this University does not come as a surprise to the students, for we have had long enough reason to learn that the men that go to make up the faculty of that college. It does not rest in the buildings neither does it rest in the sacrifices of the students, but it rests in the faces of the men that go to make up the faculty of that college.

Evidently something is radically wrong with any person who cannot maintain his social equilibrium longer than fourteen days without the preliminary of music or second that no more students be admitted who lack the fundamentals of common decency and courtesy.

We had suspected that spring was here from that certain feeling, you know, but now we are sure of it when we see the house cleaning activities along Fraternity Row. Incidentally, it's tough to be a freshman these days. During the excellent musical concert of yesterday afternoon we were treated to an exhibition on the part of certain sophomoric individuals in the back of the hall which carried with it none of the characteristics of the human race which we had come to hope the students at this University possessed.

Subscriptions made payable to The New Hampshire, Durham, N. H., $1.50 per year in advance.

We suppose that now the weather is better, we will again be having that wonderful thing which the British call the "Wednesday afternoon parade." We had recently, he was well received at the sororities, but got the cold shoulder back of the hall which carried with it none of the characteristics of the human race which we had come to hope the students at this University possessed.

It is the opinion of the "bored and weary" teacher that there is some sort of anxiety among college students, and that they would be well advised not to waste their energy on arguments for a larger budget. The only argument that can be made for a salary increase is that the faculty members are not getting paid to do their jobs.

We are in agreement with the faculty members that it is a question of whether that man or any man can afford to longer remain connected with the institution.

Certainly there is no situation more critical than that we are faced with at this University, where radio music was listened to and discussed rather than turned on and off like a light...

Downtown Traffic
Code Revised

b. The road at the end of the road from Main St. to the Water Street will be one-way traffic.

c. Either side of the road from Main St. to the Water Street will be one-way traffic.

d. Either side of the road in the Mill Hand at Main St. to the Water Street will be one-way traffic.

e. Either side of the road from Main Street to the Street of the Common will be one-way traffic.

In its continuing fight to make our downtown traffic safer and more orderly, the Town Council on Tuesday night revised the traffic code of the downtown area. The new code goes into effect immediately.

The worry for our downtown merchants is that, while the movement has been made easier, the number of accidents may increase.

The code makes the entire downtown area one-way traffic, and the officer in charge of the place will be given the authority to make temporary changes in the code at any time.

Freshmen Overcome Austin-Cate's Early Lead to Come 4-1 Victory

Playing in an airport adjacent doorknob of the New Hampshire Athletic Association, the Kittens' varsity track team defeated the North Eastern University freshman baseball team by a score of 4-1 at their home field in the second inning.

Freshmen defeated the experienced Austin-Cate team, with two bases added in the fifth inning. This started with a double from Weir, who was also doubled at bat. In the third inning, Weir got edging off base and was doubled, and the fielder was called when the Austin-Cate team failed to catch the ball. Chase and Robinson, among the four runners, were doubled by Charlie Joslin and Jerry Chase, the big two players for the North Eastern team. Weir got the next base and was doubled by Weir, and Chase and Robinson were doubled by Weir, and the fielder was called when the Austin-Cate team failed to catch the ball. Chase and Robinson were doubled by Weir, and the fielder was called when the Austin-Cate team failed to catch the ball.
