According to a recent survey, approximately forty per cent of the students of American universities are working to finance their education. When this number perhaps one-third reside outside help, all of which brings up the question of how students can make the most of their time in college. It is an everyday occurrence to hear of some student making the mistake of sacrificing too many hours of study and thereby losing valuable material.

However, the really sad part of the whole situation is the reason why so many of these students do not use the time available to them more efficiently. The machinery for improvement along this line has already been set up but has not been given the attention it deserves.

Fortunately, the machinery for improvement along this line has already been set up but has not been given the attention it deserves. There was a time when a woman's only place was in the home, and the position of working student was considered a derogation of her character. But today, the majority of us are convinced that there is great room for improvement in this field. Women are not the only ones who contribute to the support of the University in the colleges. The working students have been found to be higher than the students who are supported by other means.
