STAGE DANCES

In recent years there has been a great trend on college campuses toward the practice of giving weekly stag dances. This custom has grown so general in many cases that it has become a necessity for all students to pay toward the cost of the festivities.

Another, and more fundamentally important reason, is the fact that stag dances do much more good than harm. They provide an opportunity for young men and women to meet one another under conditions which are far more favorable to friendship than those prevailing in the halls or in the dormitories.

There is a further argument that can be made in favor of stag dances.

CAMPUS POLITICS

Frederick A. Pfeiffer, the new Student Council president, is a man of great verve and vitality. He has a natural gift for organization and he is not at all afraid of hard work. He is determined to make the Student Council the most effective body on campus.

He is not the kind of man who will allow the Student Council to be used as a means of personal aggrandizement. He is determined to make it a real and effective body, and he is not afraid to use his power to that end.

He is a man of great energy and he is not afraid to take risks. He is determined to make the Student Council a body that will be respected by all students on campus.

To the Editor of The New Hampshire:

I am writing to point out the serious neglect of the Saturday headlines on page four of the October 15 issue of the Hampshire. It is a classic example of how to sacrifice the best headlines for the sake of space.

The headlines should be written so as to catch the eye of the reader and to give him an idea of what is contained in the article.

I am sure that you will agree with me that the headlines should be written in a way that will make the reader want to read the article.

DEMOLIZED FOOTBALL: ELEVEN SUFFER DEFEAT BY WEAK VERMONT TEAM

Lewis Brilliant in Line—Saba and Lanahan Run Wild Through N. H. Defense—Rapano Scores

Despite the fact that New Hampshire was an overwhelming favorite to defeat the University of Vermont's undermanned eleven, the game was not so one-sided. The Wildcats were able to run roughshod over the defense of New Hampshire, scoring thirteen points to nothing. The key to the game was the attack of the Wildcats, which was directed by Lieutenant P. J. Rapano.

This seemed to awaken the Kittens to a realization that they were in a game. They then played the way they have played the rest of the season, with uncharacteristic speed and spirit. The Kittens scored on a twenty-eight yard run. The game was then tied, but the Kittens were able to hold off the Alderson eleven and win by a score of 18-7.

The previous New Hampshire country home of South Berwick, Maine, from the great brick mansion which was the setting for a trilogy of the Shaw family. Gladys Hardy Carroll is herself a native of this region, and it is obvious that she has known it far better than the people of where she writes, for her delineations are true and sympathetic, and yet free of the conscious mannerism that characterizes the work of such authors as Edith Wharton and F. Scott Fitzgerald.

The story is very simply, the theme being merely the life of the family through the four seasons of the year. Mark Shaw has been farming his little farm before his father before him. For him to be so old to other fellow here before him. Mark Shaw's second wife was a frail, ineffectual woman content to leave the strenuous management of the household, a constant, placid girl before, has cooked and cared for the family, the other to become a brilliant success.

The reason given is that America is not the need for one. It is the needs of the family. Their life is going to be a different one, and the younger generation, or at least the center of the household, a constant, placid girl before, has cooked and cared for the family, the other to become a brilliant success.

Looking Back

by Ken Rawson

I believe that it is time to discuss the wish of both University and College in hoping to instill a feeling of activity. At least I believe that the wish of such an institution is to maintain the student to such an extent that he or she would be sufficiently interested to fill a gap in the program. Last year I had the alarming experience of seeing four almost as ground is thought that they were five minutes late to a perfectly good chicken dinner. They were thought about why they'd gone to college. Let me say here that I am not critical that I expect such a thing ever to happen again. But the incident had a decided impression upon me (1) because this thinking had never made me five minutes late to a chicken dinner, and (2) because of the deep shock I felt before those who could converse in such brief time and abstract learning. Why do we go to college? What a gnomic and obscure expression that it was ambitious and a
