Formal Banquet The local chapter of Alpha Chi Sigma, national honorary chemistry society, will initiate thirteen chemists when it holds its annual initiation on Saturday, March 9. After the initia-tion ceremonies, Dr. Walter S. Ritchie, head of the Chemistry Department of Massachusetts State College, and Grand Master of Ceremonies of the chemistry fraternity, will be the prin-cipal speaker at a formal banquet at the Exeter Inn. Membership in the chemistry fra-ternity is based in a large measure on scholarship; the thirteen students who are to be initiated tomorrow were pledged last December. They are: Donald William Avery '36, Robert Gains Barret '36, Arthur William Bryan '36, Herbert Bayley '36, Alen Winthrop Low '36, Robert James McNally '36, Wilbur Hobart Miller '36, James Miller Rob-inson '36, Denis Anthony Shea '36, Robert Edgar Weeks '37. Dr. Richie, speaker at the banquet, is a prominent agricultural chemist, After taking his B. S. degree at Ohio State University in 1916 he carned his Ph.D. at the University of Mis-souri in 1922. He is now stationed at the Mass. State College at Am-therst. His talk will concern the his-tory of the honorary chemists' frai-ternity: Other speakers will be Bradford Melative '25 Kondick French arcsi.

When honors courses were discontinued in the College of Liberal Arts, it was sought to justify the move largely on the basis that students qualified to pursue them did not care to do so.

There is every reason to believe that, under our present system of education, those students who consciously aim for high grades above all else become, perhaps, good students but

Beildom able scholars. Briefly, it is this latter group which should be permitted to enlarge and perfect their intelligence in an honors course. Such a course demands much more in the way of intellectual initiative and creative thinking than do the majority of courses in the average undergraduate curriculum. Honors courses should never here here here here here

Honors courses should never have been abolished, since there were, no doubt, enough students of adequate intelli-gence to pursue them. The difficulty was, very probably, not lack of interest, but lack of a system of proper selection. At the present time, there is an increasing group of stu-dents who sense the limitations of the ordinary courses. These students are not inclined to strugted solely for numeri

These students are not inclined to struggle solely for numeri-cal grades. Consequently, their interest in grades diminishes as their interest in intellectual development prospers. With this outlook, it is entirely natural that they should

They left their ivory towers to follow the path of knowledge which the age was pointing out. The classroom was too slow to recognize their need. Their only recourse was desertion. They, too, were intellectual rebels. History may not repeat itself, but it does at times draw close analogies. It would be well for all those who feel that honors courses are not only worthwhile but necessary, to em-bark on some active program for their re-establishment

New Coward Play Follows the Best Modern Tradition

G. Hennessy. Noel Coward is famous for the sparkling dialogue of his plays, and this play is one of his best. The plot is concerned with the complications that arise when an artistic family, headed by a husband who writes novels and a wife who is an actress, with an artist son and a temperamental daughter, invite separate guests for a week-end in their country home. Needless to say, the guests are very prosaic people, who do not respond to the continual theatrical nature of the family. The wife, who never stops acting, produces many anusing complications through her endeavors to make a scene on the least provocation. The characters of the family are obviously abnormal in the extent to which they carry their theatrical temperament, but there is sufficient universal human nature in them to make the audience squirm slightly as they see their own failings amusingly caricatured. We have seen many fine plays produced under the direction of Professor Hennessy, but we honestly think that this is one of his best. Performed without a hitch from beginning to end, it displays to the utmost his stage craft and art. Under his hands, a clever and varied cast make the utmost of a play that is filled with dramatic possibilities. If one is to give bouquets to the individual players for their performances, the largest one in our opinon should go to Miss Doris Fowler, for her interpretation of Judith Biss, the actress wife. A difficult part, one involving continual changes in mood at the least provocation, was filled admirably by Miss Fowler. Her fine stage presence, her ability to draw out of a part everything that is in it, are shown at their best in this play. Miss Fowler filled her part completely; there was never a lapse in her interpretation for a single moment.

Mr. Bernard Snierson handled his part of the son, Simon Bliss, with great skill, showing that his experience on the stage has borne fruition. He was peculiarly fitted to the part of the temperamental son, youthful and exuberant as the part necessitated. Year's Rules Working in conjunction with the Student Council, Casque and Casket is taking steps toward reorganization in the enforcement of rushing rules. At a meeting last Monday night, a committee was appointed by Glen Stewart, president of Casque and Casket, which will meet a committee representing the Student Council, and research will be made as to how other inter-fraternity governing bodies en-force their rushing rules. The com-mittee is composed of the following men: John Giffin, chairman, Ken White, Frank Sargent, Paul Travers, Richard Loring, and Willam Wier. A definite report will be drawn up by the joint committees and will be submitted to Casque and Casket for consideration, and will then be pre-sented to the Student Council for approval. The plan is being formulated with to fine past rushing season and of impressing the incoming members of Casque and Casket with the import-ance and necessity of striet and im-partial enforcement of the rules. "No woch radical change as abol-ishing Casque and Casket is neces-sary," said Fred Walker, President of the Student Council. "I feel that there is no reason why this group of men should not be the strongest law enforcing body on campus, and it is with this thought in mind that the joint committee will provide 'teeth' for Casque and Casket so that our inter-fratenity governing body will make itself felt." Further Contributions to State from Millage Inadvisable

In the annual Report of the Pres-ident made available to the press last Monday, a detailed account of the ben-efits accruing to the University and the financial condition at the present time plays a prominent part. Pre-vious news accounts have followed the projects supported wholly or in part by Federal funds, but this is the first statement from an official source which deals with the finances of the University. University.

University. President Lewis points first in his report to the complete set of plans developed at the request of Federal authorities to show a complete picture of the building needs of the college. While none of these plans could be de-veloped under the P.W.A. setup in New Hampshire, the President points out that their existence has made it possible to take advantage of an op-portunity to date to begin construction of new playing fields and to meet an emergency situation brought about by a very noticeable depletion in the water supply of the University. On the subject of the millage the

On the subject of the University. On the subject of the millage the President has issued a definite state-ment that no further refunds to the state from this fund will be possible, if the University is to continue in good financial standing. He says of future refunds: Unless and until an equally grave

Unless and until an equally grave Interstand until an equally grave financial crisis faces the taxpayers of New Hampshire, it will be agreed by anyone who is at all acquainted with the actual conditions at Durham, that it will be most unfortunate if a simi-lar sacrifice will have to be made

In so far as the University is to

In so far as the University is to be compared with other colleges, the President points out that we must be content to limit services to the "strength of our time and personnel, and to the possibilities of financing them adequately, and certainly not at the expense of affecting the quality . . . "Continuing in the same vein, it is pointed out that both those connected with the institution and those taxpayers who contribute to its support should understand that "the University cannot hope to dupli-cate the work of larger universities in states where there is great wealth and large population." President Lewis also stresses the need for cooperation of the Univer-sity with the fraternities in solving their financial problems because "in 1924, when the housing situation pre-sented a serious problem, President Hetzel encouraged the construction of new and larger chapter houses as a means of relieving the pressure which was occasioned by the rapidly increasing influx of students." Thus "we have felt probably more than or-dinary concern in the matter of chap-ter-house financing in view of the fact that several of the new playing fields provided for by the assignment of C.W.A. workers to the work, the President expresses the hope that such facilities will be the start of increased intramural activities on the campus. Along with this development of in-tramural sports, he also stresses the need for increasing limitation of inter-collegiate competition to such colleges as offer satisfactory and effective competition. "By such a policy on-ly," he says, "it seems to me, shall we obviate the disappointment and chagrin which so easily besets the overambitious athletic mind so com-mon among undergraduates and alumni everywhere."

DURHAM, N. H., MARCH 8, 1935.

THE PRESIDENT'S REPORT

There are many important state ments included in the President's report for the year 1934, but three in particular stand out as concerning the students of the University and answer, in part at least, many of the questions prevalent in the minds of those connected with the University. One is a definite statement concerning the millage fund, a second concerns the possible expansion of services rendered to the students, while a third provides official recognition of our intra-scholastic and inter-collegiate athletic problems.

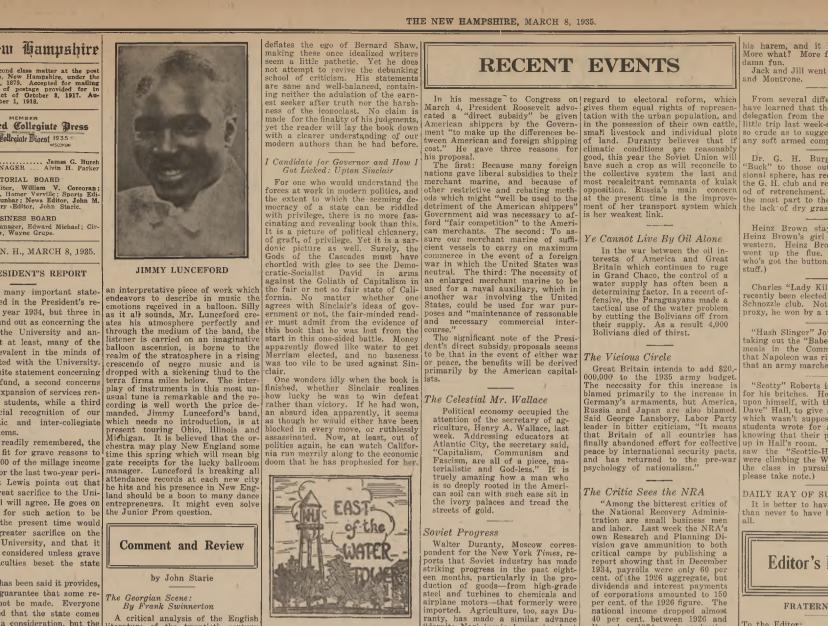

As will be readily remembered, the trustees saw fit for grave reasons to return $266,000 of the millage income to the state for the last two-year period. President Lewis points out that this was a great sacrifice to the University, as all will agree. He goes on to say that for such action to be repeated at the present time would entail still greater sacrifice on the part of the University, and that it could not be considered unless grave financial difficulties beset the state government.

While this has been said it provides however, no guarantee that some return might not be made. Everyone can be agreed that the state comes however, no guarantee that some return might not be made. Everyome is trained as consideration, but the prise of the three the consideration, but the university of New Hampshire should be proceeded three three descreeded to be the university of New Hampshire so the source to show by their students now here to show by their actions that they deserve, above all other things, primary consideration on the university and that seed. Who can say, for instance, the allowed with such arts they deserve, above all wears of been sorted out by sperify that any analysis becaused by the great damage would be caused by the great damage would be the transmitter of opinions and less of a state that the state of a state the state that be the great damage would be caused by the great damage would be there the great damage would be the gr bilities of financing them adequately, and certainly not at the expense of affecting the quality." Obviously this is the only answer to those who would have too much addition of new and questionable matter to the services now offered either in curricula or otherwise, by the University.

In a like manner he suggests that increasing limitation of athletic competition to such colleges as offer satisfactory and effective competition is the only way to "obviate the disappoint-ment and chagrin which so easily besets the overambitious athletic mind so common among undergraduates and alumni everywhere." In other words, "it is much better to be a big frog in a little puddle" etc. . . Both of these suggestions made by the President are sound and offer possibilities of immediate steps not only of remedy but also prevention of present and possible evils in the University. Thus, it would seem reasonable that concrete effort should

by Jimmy Dunbar

By nosing out the strong Springfield College five 41-38 last Saturday night, the University of New Hampshire's var-sity basketball team closed one of its most successful seasons in recent years, and one of the best seasons any New Hampshire team has had.

It also marks Coach Henry Swasey's most successful seasons to date, and leaves the court mentor with a record of 61 victories against 47 defeats since he took over the job of head coach eight seasons back. That year Swasey coached head coach eight seasons back. That year Swasey coached the team during the last half of the season, and he split even in six games. From that time on basketball has been on the upgrade at the University of New Hampshire, although the past two years have not been particularly successful. How-ever, the record turned in this year, 11 wins against 3 defeats, all of the latter away from home is a just reward for Swasall of the latter away from home, is a just reward for Swa-sey's patience with recent losing teams.

Started in '28

Coach Henry Swasey first came to Durham in 1921, and at that time he was varsity baseball coach. During his first year he organized soccer, and before the sport was abandoned in 1927, it had attained a high rank in New England circles. The last year of this sport found New Hampshire losing only to the New England champions, Northeastern, and to Dart-worth mouth

In 1927, when Coach Bill Cowell had New Hampshire's greatest basketball season, winning 14 games and losing only one, Swasey became coach of freshman basketball. He turned out one of the few undefeated teams in Kitten history, although there is a vague rumor that one of his star players was not enrolled in the school. The next year a vacancy occurred in the staff at midseason, and Coach Swasey took over the varsity basketball team, managing to break even with a weak outfit.

This Year His Best

Although none of his teams have been as successful as this one, in all but two of his years as varsity coach, his aver-age was better than five hundred, and each year it improved. Two years ago the record suffered somewhat, and ineligibility ruined last year's club. This year Swasey went to work with a vengeance, and as a result one of New Hampshire's finest teams went through a season which saw them win nine games on the home court.

Blessed with the appearance of three men who had had Blessed with the appearance of three men who had had plenty of experience, and several more men with plenty of height and potential ability, Swasey moulded together a strong outfit, which grew into a great one before the season was far advanced. The development of three sophomores from six-foot prospects into steady, reliable reserve men was probably the principal reason for success, and it is for this development that Coach Swasey deserves the utmost credit. For this year was the first in the last four or five in which the reserve strength was able to put up as good a battle as the starting five had done. These substitutes ranked high as scorers, and their height, when used to the best advantage, was a decisive fractor in more them one has the starting fame. was a decisive factor in more than one basketball game.

Shifted Funston to Guard

Coach Swasey's greatest stroke of genius this year was his shifting of Curt Funston, always a potential star, to a guard berth, where the blond senior came through even more guard berth, where the blond senior came through even more effectively than Swasey had dared to hope. Freddie Walker, brilliant at times both as a guard and as a forward, seemed to fit in best at center. Frequent substitutions, wearing down opposing players, proved effective, and when the speedy aggressive Joslin and hard-working Captain McKiniry had been replaced by the lanky Webb and Bishop, the opposition began to have its troubles.

Appleton Academy Drubs Peterboro in Class B by 41-29 Score by 41-29 Score Crashing through with three sensa-tional victories, the Portsmouth High School team won the Class A cham-pionship in one of the most interest-ing tournaments ever held at the Uni-versity of New Hampshire, while in Class B, another dark horse team, Appleton Academy of New Ipswich took the honors by upsetting the fav-ored Peterboro High School quintet, 41-29, in the final game. In Class A, Portsmouth won over Claremont in a fine exhibition of basketball before a crowded house, by the score of 38-31. The Port City team got off to a great start when its all-state forward combination, Plump-ton and Hersey, completely baffed the Claremont defense and scored 12 points before Claremont really got started. The Stevens High team be-gan to click in the second quarter, however, and the score at half-time was Portsmouth 17, Stevens 16. The Portsmouth five was far superior in the last half, and piled up a 12-point lead just prior to the end of the game. A Stevens rally in the last seconds brought them to win seven points of a tie, but the game ended, and Ports-mouth took the state championship after a great performance. Tom Plumpton scored 14 points in the vic-tory, while his running mate, Hersey, scored eight, and led the passing at-tack which brought his team to vic-tory. Appleton Cops Class B

We agree with him. The record proves the winning part The "secret" is another matter. But we sincerely hope that Mr. Swasey can carry that secret over to the diamond. Of course, his club will once more be the "Boys of the Road," but we'd like to see them duplicate the hoop team's record. At any rate, we wish the coach and his boys good luck,

He and Bronstein and later Ro-gean kept the varsity in the running in the first half, although the visitors led at the first whistle by two baskets. The Wildcats started slowly in the second half, and only the accurate foul shooting of Funston kept them in the race. About half way through the period, however, a shot by Captain McKiniry and a pair of two-pointers by Bronstein tightened up the game, and Funston put his team in the lead with a marvelous shot from the right hand corner of the floor. Springfield tied it up but a beautiful set shot by Bronstein with only a few minutes to play gave New Hampshire the lead noin. Springfield sent five men down under the basket in an effort to tie the score, and as a result Funston broke clear and took a pas from Bronstein to add two more points and tie up the score. Nuttall added a foul shot just before the end of the period but Timer Robinson's gun fired before the visitors could again score.
