The article highlights the importance of conservation and the urgency of protecting these magnificent creatures. It also reminds the readers of the beauty of nature and the need to preserve it for future generations.

and the rubber balls shattered like electric light bulbs when dropped onto the floor.

Liquid air evaporates in ordinary temperatures, the gases given off creating a great deal of pressure. Using this principle, a stopped can containing some of the liquid was connected by a flexible tube to a miniature steam engine, and the resulting pressure ran the engine in the usual steam pressure manner.

To show the oxidizing properties of the liquid, a piece of wet amoungering cotton was immersed in it and immediately the cotton began to burn brilliantly.

Professor Iddles climaxd the demonstration by causing a reaction between liquid air and powdered aluminum to take place. A brilliant light was given off as the temperature changed from -180 to 3000 degrees in a fraction of a second.
