New Student Group Carries on Series of Campus Surveys

Committee Investigates Diploma Size, Expenses, and Course Alterations

The newly-organized Student Committee on Educational Policy has held several meetings recently at which four student polls on controversial questions were launched and the results discussed. One survey aims to find the methods used by other colleges to provide funds to enable teams to visit other colleges and institutions. The college of agriculture wishes to send a team away for cattle judging, but the expenses of such a trip cannot be borne by the university, and a committee was appointed to write to other colleges on this matter, after the suggestion of Dean Eastman.

Diploma Size Considered

Another survey is being conducted, especially among the seniors, to ascertain student opinion on diploma size. The diplomas have been the small "pocket-size" ones for the last three commencements, and many students feel the administration should return to the larger type suitable for framing. This question has been the most hotly contested of the four among the students.

Proposed Course Changes

Two other surveys deal with courses and proposed changes in the chemistry and German courses. Many freshmen who have never had chemistry have complained that they have

Sattler Releases Debate Schedule

At least eight debates face University of New Hampshire speakers during the first two months of the second semester, according to a schedule released today.

Four of the debates are slated for February 15. Three teams will travel to Rhode Island cities to meet Rhode Island State college at Kingston and Brown university and Providence college at Providence. Meanwhile, at the Durham rostrum, New Hampshire will meet Western Reserve university of Cleveland.

Other debates listed so far are Massachusetts Institute of Technol-

Schedule of Carnival Given Super-speedy Examination

by Rachel Morrison

The carnival schedule is brimful of exciting events. Thursday night the girls' all-star basketball team will play a team of picked men from the football team. At 8:00 P.M. the torchlight parade will leave the swimming pool, go down Main Street, Garrison Avenue, Fraternity Row, and then back to the swimming pool. The Carnival queen will be chosen during this parade. The ice pageant at the swimming pool will feature the enactment of nursery rhymes and professional skating. Following the pageant the queen will be crowned, and her two attendants announced. At 10:30 the midnight show is scheduled in the Franklin theatre.

Library Exhibits Material on Film Production

Finals a few days off and the library is crammed! Study, study, study and no time to waste! However, your time would not be wasted if in a moment's relaxation you took a peek at the library exhibits.

You are right there, or should be, and all you have to do is to dash up to the second floor to get the whole story on the making of a contemporary film, based on Selznick International's technicolor, "The Adventures of Tom Sawyer." The original script, the wardrobe plot, the clothing which enabled Huck Finn to fit Mark Twain's description of him as a "perambulating rag bag," and even screen and stage make-up is on display. (The girls might be interested in observing other cosmetic arts as yet not mastered; such as shadowing the nose to make it smaller.)

The library exhibit on the first floor deserves attention also. The Society of Medalists have on display a complete showing of medals issued to date, together with the year they were issued, and the name of the sculptor. The Alumni Association awards such a medal to any graduate, eligible for membership to the Alumni Association, who renders such meritorious service to the University as to entitle him to this honor, at the Alumni banquet each June.

These exhibits are well worth looking at!

Frosh Basketeers Rout Exeter, 54-28

The New Hampshire freshman basketball team, by routing the highly touted Exeter quintet 53-28, have made their record four victories out of five games. The only setback they received was from the Tufts frosh, and that was by a score of 31-30.

Paced by Captain Zitrides, the Kittens got off to an early lead and were never headed. Captain "Zit" opened the scoring with three quick baskets for the frosh and before the Exeter boys had scored at all the score was N.H. 12, with ten of the points made by "Zit."

The Exeterites never really got started. At the end of the quarter the Kittens were leading 17-3. Zitrides, meanwhile, had garnered 12 points.

The second quarter was the same as the first with the New Hampshire ral ski races take place. In the afternoon the women's downhill ski races will be held at Guilford, while the varsity hockey team will play Northeastern here in Durham at 4 o'clock. Of course the Carnival Ball is the outstanding event of the week-end at 8:30 in the gym.

Saturday morning the women's slalom will take place at McNutt's. The men's downhill and slalom competition will be held at Guilford in the morning, also. At 1:30 the men's cross-country and jumping events will be held in Durham. A basketball game with Northeastern will be played off at 4 o'clock. There will be a hockey game with Boston College in the afternoon at 4 o'clock, also.

Registration

All students now in college are expected to register for the second semester sometime between January 23 and February 3, inclusive. (College of Agriculture: Dean Eastman asks that registration activities be confined to Tuesday morning, January 23; Friday afternoon, January 26; Tuesday afternoon, January 30; Wednesday morning, January 31; and Friday morning, February 2.) Only those students should wait to register until February 5 who, for some good reason, are told to do so by their advisors. Students who find it difficult or impossible to secure the necessary funds for payment of fees during the two-week period of advance registration may make arrangements acceptable to the Treasurer for a series of payments during the semester. A student unable to make final payment or arrangement for payment before the final day of registration, Monday, February 5, should proceed with his registration during the two-week advance registration period, up to the point of paying his fees. When he has his registration forms completed and approved by his advisor and the class roll cards have been secured from the Registrar's Office, the cards should be deposited in the office of the dean of the student's college, where they will be held for him until he calls for them on February 5.

The only students excused from early registration are those whose advisors specifically instruct them to wait. Ordinarily the only reason for an advisor's giving this advice, will be uncertainty as to which courses a student will pass. (Students in the College of Liberal Arts who do not complete their registration early must secure written permission to delay registration from their advisors, this permission to be taken to the Dean's office. Liberal Arts students registering on Monday, February 5, without having previously secured permission to do so, will be fined two dollars.)

Registration procedure will be same as in the past, except that instead of filling out his own class roll cards, each student must secure the necessary cards from the Registrar's Office. The object of this change of procedure is to control the number of students registering for the various sections of a course. For uniformity, roll cards for all courses are being handled in this way even though in many cases there is no danger of overcrowding. Obviously, the earlier a student registers the more certain he is to get a place in the sections he desires.

The class roll cards, pre-printed with the course and section number, will be arranged in a specially constructed rack. When a section is three-fourths full, an amber warning card will show. When the section is filled, a red warning card will show. Sections reserved for certain groups of students will be marked with brown cards. It will therefore be possible to tell at any time just what the status of every section is. A class schedule with crowded, filled, and reserved sections marked, will be sent to the office of each college dean and to Morrill and Nesmith halls at least once each day for the guidance of advisors.

The list of freshmen required to reserve time for English 2 will be sent the dean of each college on or about January 23. If a student is taking English 1, 3 hours for it should be shown on his registration forms. If he is excused, and "X" should be put

Government Announces Dates for Examinations

The United States Department of Agriculture has recently announced the date of the consolidated civil service examination for junior professional assistants for work in several Federal agencies. Application for examination are due February 5 and the examinations will be given early in March.

Students are not eligible for appointment until they complete their course and have a bachelor's degree, but they may be examined this spring and can then complete their qualifications immediately on graduation.

The examination subjects cover twenty-eight fields of employment ranging from archaeologist to statistician and from chemist to olericulturist. The starting salaries in this grade begin at $2,000 a year.

Further information may be obtained from, and all applications should be addressed to, the Civil Service Commission, Washington, D. C.

Cafeteria Opening Date is Postponed

Tuesday night we promised it; tonight we can only promise again. Due to technical delays, the opening of the new cafeteria has tentatively been set for Monday evening, January 22.

When Monday comes, we promise you an opportunity to outshine the stars of Hollywood. Our opening will be fully as sensational as any night club's first night in New York or film-land. Miss Hudon, chief dietitian and juggler of our calories, has promised a steak supper with all the fixings.

In addition to this unexpected change in diet, Jack Mitchell's Swingcats will play dinner music, and will have a short swing session at the completion of the meal. Or should we say, repast?

The powers that be, mainly Miss Hudon, have promised not to arrange the new furniture in one of the two renovated dining rooms. This will leave a relatively large space for dancing. Said dancing will continue during the meal, and at least until 8:00 or 8:30. It might possibly be prolonged even longer if enough swing lovers wish to dance.

For light footed rhythm lovers, we will have the best in campus music; for lovers of the culinary art, one of Miss Hudon's praise-deserving steak dinners; and for Scotchmen like me, no increase in price, and no minimum or cover charge.

So, all you people in Durham who have been known to eat three meals per day, or, as the case may be, two, we extend a hearty invitation to come to the premier showing of the new cafeteria. Of course, we've all seen the preview, but in the words of Uncle Zeke: "Yew hain't seen nuthin yit!"

That Bane of Our Existence, Exams, Creeping Up on Us

by Phyllis Devenau

EXAMS . . . that bane of our existence has slowly but surely crept up on us, and chillun, do you realize that in just four more days we'll be tearing our hair and wishing that we had studied for that French exam a little bit more instead of going to the movies the night before to take our mind off it all.

Already we have detected that haunted and worried look which regularly appears around exam time, on many otherwise beautiful faces. And my dear, have you noticed the increase in Library patrons? It's practically as bad as the Grand Central

by Richard Dent

The WPA symphony orchestra of Massachusetts presented a concert which fulfilled all the expectations of excellence before an enthusiastic capacity audience Wednesday evening in the gymnasium.

The overture to "Benvenuto Cellini" by Berlioz opened the program. It was a revelation as to the great ability of the orchestra. The string section showed up especially well in this piece.

The next two numbers were by the contemporary American composers, Robert Manton and Mario Balsamo.

Manton's Rhapsody Played

Manton's "New England Rhapsody" came first. It is definitely an impressionistic piece, calm and soothing all the way through. It was inspired by a section of verse from Amy Lowell's poem "Lilacs." Tender strings play an important part in the conveying of the impression. The composer, who was in the audience, was roundly applauded as he bowed at the insistence of the appreciative gathering.

"Two Island Sketches"

Under the title of "Two Island Sketches" Mario Balsamo's "Vision of Capri" and his "Sicilian Autumn" followed. The two are beautifully mel-

Newspaper Room Mural Completed

Another mural in color, depicting adventure and exploration, has just been completed in the newspaper room of the library. This panel tells the story of discovery, chiefly of primitive art.

The picture includes a Mayan temple, the recently discovered ruins of a Persian castle, the huge stone faces found on Easter Island in the Pacific, the moon, the sun, and primitive spears and brightly colored shields. A small Aztec god in gray stone is perhaps the most striking figure. There is a tall, thick tree with monkeys in its branches to represent the jungle.

This painting is the sixth and there is to be one more in the series of varying phases of our modern life which the newspaper interprets. Athletics, business and industry, communication and transportation, war and the fine arts are the topics of the other murals. All are in vivid color and well executed so that the central idea stands out clearly. Rolls of paper and pages of paper appear here and there to point the theme.

Among nine students questioned, the majority thoroughly approved this latest addition and two favored it above the rest. Three men liked the athletics mural best, while the art

DURHAM, N. H., JAN. 19, 1940

A CHALLENGE

With this issue, the current editorial board of The New Hampshire relinquishes their duties. Actually, the incumbent group will have charge of two more issues, but the new editor and staff will have been elected by that time! With that in mind it is altogether appropriate that a few words of advice be given to the incoming editor and the incoming editorial board.

It is very easy to give advice, especially when one will not be in a position to say "I told you so!", but after a year in the editor's chair we feel competent to voice a few platitudes at this time.

There are several duties which every newspaper must perform if it is to justify its existence as such. This applies to all journalism generally speaking, but it applies itself particularly to the college paper. The editor thereof, is naturally on the spot. He is the one person in the school, with the possible exception of the president who has an opportunity to express himself freely and at all times.

He can if he wishes, become a stooge for certain groups on the campus, using the paper as a medium of propounding certain philosophies which may not be in accord with the attitude of the majority of the students and faculty here in college. He may also be a stooge for the administration and faculty, agreeing with everything they say or do whether they be right or wrong, never questioning their judgment or the wisdom of decision. With him everything may be lovely, the campus a veritable Utopia, with milk and honey flowing freely. The topics of his editorials, the usual controversial ones such as attendance at dances, booing at games, walking on the lawn and other minor issues which are of no great consequence. (We also are aware that editorial subject matter comes hard at times and such topics are inevitably chosen to fill up the column, but this should be the exception and not the rule.)

On the other hand the editor can follow the opposite course. By the opposite course, we do not mean to discredit everything that is done on the campus; rather we mean to weigh in the balance and determine the validity of various moves. If the editor has certain convictions of his own he has a perfect right to express them and should do so. But it is only fair to give both sides an equal right to space in the paper. Neither do we advocate criticism of the faculty or administration in a hap-hazard manner. They are only human and as such are subject to making mistakes. If they didn't they wouldn't be here, they would be running Paradise. But, if the editor feels that some undertaking by the administration or faculty is not to the best interests of the university as a whole, he should confer with those in charge and publish the result of his findings, bringing the matter to light. We can assure the new editor that the administration and faculty are more than anxious to hear student opinion, and be it agreeable with them or otherwise, you may be confident of a courteous hearing and full consideration given to your opinions and feelings, provided they are within reason.

Be as impartial as possible in the presentation of the news and the campus activity. Weigh their value carefully and give the students who pay for the paper what they want, as nearly as possible.

Freedom of the press is one of our most cherished possessions. We must treat it as such. Don't abuse it, but don't pamper it. The paper is in a sound condition, financially and editorially. We leave it to you in this state; look well that you keep it so, and that you do not break the tacit pledge that you have made with your fellow students and fellow men.

And so the members of the class of 1940 retire from the direction of the board of directors of The New Hampshire. To the campus we wish to extend our thanks for the courteous manner in which our efforts have been received. We have tried to maintain an editorial policy which would echo the sentiments of the majority of you. True, we may have made some enemies, but we hasten to say that any differences we have had with any groups or individuals have been on a strictly impersonal basis. We hope we have made friends, and if so we hope they will remain friends of the paper.

To the other seniors who leave the board we wish to offer our thanks and best wishes. To those underclassmen we leave behind we also thank for the 100 per cent cooperation they have given us, and to convey to them our sincerest wishes for as enjoyable and successful tenure as it has been our privilege and pleasure to experience.

TO THE EDITOR

It will soon be your privilege to pass on to your successor the onus and the honor of the coveted position of editor of "The New Hampshire." In journalism, as in so many other vocations, "ex-officials" become forgotten men too quickly. Mr. Editor, you have borne the "honor" well, and, what is more important, you have carried the concomitant "onus" meritoriously. Please accept my humble praise.

During your tenure of office, campus news has been plentiful. "The New Hampshire" staff has manifested good sense in reporting that news. In national and world affairs there has been much to awaken interest of college students; much for college editors and columnists to write about. Your editorial policy has been worthy of commendation.

It is trite to say that thinking men cannot be expected to see eye-to-eye in every social, educational, economic and political theory or practice. Yet there are certain basic natural virtues earnestly desired in every American journalist. Among them there is one which this country needs more and more in this generation. It is loyalty to the principles which guided and guarded the founding fathers of this nation. Your editorials have been loyal in that way.

I sincerely hope that "The New Hampshire" will continue to be the fine type of college paper that it is today.

Very cordially yours,

Rev. J. Desmond O'Connor,

TO THE EDITOR

I wish to second the congratulations sent to Harry Hatchell in a recent issue of "The New Hampshire" with a word of warning. Mr. Hatchell attacked the emotionalism of the editorial staff of The Liberal with good reason. A large portion of the students are required to take two years of science. Science teaches them how to collect and examine data, how to arrive at a satisfactory conclusion after a careful analysis of the existing facts.

In the realm of political economy it is possible to bring all data relating to recent trends to the social scientist for examination and re-examination. All conclusions should be subject to modification in space and time. Those who believe that capitalism "is the best of all possible systems" are often moved by a spirit of patriotic emotionalism that grows side by side with war hysteria. Those who attack the present order and soothe us with false panaceas which alienate instead of alleviating the condition of the working classes, manifest a similar anti-war spirit. "A plague on both your houses," the majority cries out in disgust.

Every method, except that of logical argument, was employed to induce the citizenry to fight for "democracy" in the first World War. In 1920, similar methodology was exploited by the press to make the people see "red." Following a perusal of a recent Colliers, I am convinced that we have entered another such phase in world history. The hysterical rationalization of the Communist "New Masses" is countered by a similar situation in our more conservative standbys. Ranging in vindictiveness from the New York "Times" to Father Coughlin's "Social Justice," the press is literally, "throwing away its gloves." (sic!) As students of higher learning, we should learn to evaluate socio-politics through a careful study of the conflicting systems on hand.

I feel, that after an examination of political theory in the light of all available information on the subject, I could write a treatise in defense of Marxian Socialism as an economic system, and just as easily turn the microscope the other way to examine production control under a Fascist system of government. Every student, however, is not in a position to do this. On the other hand, he or she should learn that emotional hysteria is far less convincing than an attack based on a logical analysis of the existing facts. After all, people consider this an institution of higher learning — not a kindergarten.

TO THE EDITOR

(Editor's Note — The article referred to in the following letter was written as one of general interest to the readers of "The New Hampshire." It was based on facts found in the University library, and there was no intention whatsoever of reflecting publicity on the organization below. However, "The New Hampshire" see no point in retracting the story, nor in apologizing for a story which was printed as a routine story, pertinent to the issue in which it appeared.)

Mr. Creeley S. Buchanan
Editor of "The New Hampshire"
University of New Hampshire
Durham, N. H.

Dear Sir:

We call your attention to an article, appearing in the January 5th issue of "The New Hampshire," under the caption "Ancient Leap Year Tradition Dates Back to Saint Patrick."

This printed matter, offered as an old Irish legend in its entire construction is repulsive to the good taste and decency of the members of our organization. We resent the implications contained therein, insofar as it casts reflections on St. Patrick, St. Bridget, and the nunnery over which the latter saint presided. We consider the article malicious, misleading and contrary to Catholic practice. We the officers and members of the Ancient Order of Hibernians in Strafford County, desire to vigorously protest the publication and circulation of such printed matter, because of the evil effects we believe will result from its distribution.

As citizens and taxpayers of the State of New Hampshire, we respectfully request that you print a retraction of said article and offer an apology for the offense it has given; also give the retraction and apology the same circulation given the original publication of January 5th.

Respectfully yours,

Strafford County Ancient Order of Hibernians.

Please! Snow!

Anyone knowing the whereabouts of some snow, new or otherwise, please get in touch with either Uncle Zeke or ski-coach Ed Blood. With the carnival dates only two weeks away, the ski team could use a little of the darn stuff.

The freshman basketball team had a busy time this week. They met and defeated the St. Anselm frosh on Monday, then with but one day of rest they trounced the supposedly crack quintet from Phillips Exeter Academy.

In the St. Anselm game it was all Zitrides and Suslak. "Zit" hooped twenty points while Ben Suslak rang up eleven markers. The game was an interesting one to watch, as the "Saints" were always dangerous. It was not until the start of the last stanza that the Kittens began to pull away, but from then on the fate of the game was never in doubt. The encounter with Exeter was quite another matter. From the very start of the game, the outcome was never in question. Once again it was all Zitrides. Twenty-two points were rung up by this lad in the first half.

Coach Johnny DuRie has built his squad into a smooth-running piece of machinery. The boys seemed to have grasped the young coach's ideas quickly, as evidence by their record so far this season. Four wins and one loss seems to us like a very good percentage, especially with the season but half over. If the boys continue to improve as they have in the past few weeks, Coach DuRie will have reason to feel proud and varsity coach Swasey will begin to plan for the next few years.

The Kittens meet the hoopsters from Keene Teachers College on Saturday, and we hope they continue to win.

Flaherty Chosen Gridiron Captain

Star Varsity Tackle Wins Honor as New Election Policy Is Put Into Effect

The first captain to be elected under the new system was chosen last night when the lettermen of the 1939 football team honored Matt Flaherty as their choice for the 1940 season. Prior to this year, captains have been elected after the third game although the 1939 team didn't elect its captain until the end of the season, thus affording all seniors an opportunity to lead the team in at least one game.

Flaherty, a junior, hails from Portland where he attended Deering High school. He was active in athletics at the latter institution, particularly football, basketball and track. Here at the University he has continued his activity in the same sports. He has been a regular on the football team for two seasons and has been on the basketball team. Last spring he made his letter in track, specializing in the hammer throw, an event which has won him nation-wide acclaim, as well as mention for the now seemingly defunct Olympic team.

Matt is a member of Theta Kappa Phi fraternity, is vice-president of the junior class, a member of the N. H. club, and a student representative to the athletic advisory board.

Girls' Basketball Team Plans Games

Interclass basketball games have ended with the Junior class being the victors with a record of three wins and no defeats. The Freshman class is runner-up with two wins and one defeat. The Sophomore class won one and lost two games and the Senior class lost three. At the conclusion of the games, an all-star team was chosen from the best players from the four classes. Nine players are on this team and were selected by the W.A.A. Board and managers of the respective teams.

All-Star Team

Players on the All-star team are: Seniors—Eleanor McNulty, star guard, who has been on All-star every year since her transfer to New Hampshire. Juniors—Jan Gagnon, Dot Minor, and Anne Carlisle, three outstanding forwards on the championship team, picked because of their excellent teamwork. Sophomores—Kathleen Ahern, stellar forward, who was on All-star last year, and guards Alice Whipple and Daphne Hurlbert. The two freshmen who have been given the honor of making All-star their first year out are: Freda Gardner, forward and Louise Griffin, guard.

Post-Season Games

This All-star team will play two post-season games; one of these on February 1, as part of the Carnival program, with the varsity football team, and the other some time later with Jackson college. Practices will be held on January 30 and 31.

Rec Manager

Jean Adams has been selected by the W.A.A. board to fill the position of "Rec" manager on the board, which was left vacant by Ruth LeClair. She will serve in this capacity until the expiration of the term. Miss Adams is a member of Alpha Xi Delta sorority, belongs to Blue Circle, and is very active in Mask and Dagger dramatic society, taking the leads in several plays.

Christian Work

There will be a meeting of Student Christian Movement Sunday evening, January 21 at 6:30 P.M. at the Community Church. Reverend Emerson G. Hangen will speak on "Impressions of the Orient." Reverend Hangen served as chaplain on several battle-ships and has spent several years in the Orient.

Kittens Overwhelm St. Anselm Quintet

A last period scoring spree led by Captain Zitrides enabled the New Hampshire frosh quintet to defeat a fancy-shooting St. Anselm freshman five by a score of 45-37 at the Field House Monday night.

Zitrides, selected as captain just before the game, started the ball rolling with three fast baskets. The game was eight minutes old before the Hawks scored. As the half neared a barrage of long shots pulled the Manchesterites up to a 14-14 tie. Two last second baskets by Davis and Zitrides sent the Kittens into the second half leading 18-14.

St. Anselm went into a short-lived 24-21 lead in the first part of the third quarter on two-pointers by Donovan and Mills, standouts for the visitors. New Hampshire got the lead back at the very end of the quarter on Suslak's basket.

In the last stanza Zitrides turned on the heat and personally ran the Kitten score from 26 to 34 and Suslak and Beaudin built the remainder of the 47 points. The freshmen succeeded in doubling the Hawk's scoring in the final quarter.

Zitrides high-scoring mark of twenty points was greatly aided by the passes and fast break of the Kitten team.

Wildcats Defeated at Lewiston, 47-37

Bates Quintet Increases Lead Over Swaseymen in 2nd Half; Adams Stars

The Wildcats opened their Maine invasion in an inauspicious manner Tuesday night when they dropped a hard-fought encounter to Bates by a score of 47 to 37 at Lewiston.

Bates, who generally finds it a difficult proposition to wade through the second half, turned the tables and pulled away from the Durham contingent after leading 19 to 17 at half-time.

New Hampshire stuck close to the Bobcats and at one time the Wildcats took command when Cryans, Adams and Plante started clicking. Bates' Artie Belliveau quickly scored two goals from the floor which erased the 11 to 10 deficit.

In the second half, Captain Howie Kenny and Red Raferty put on a demonstration of first class sharp-shooting but New Hampshire hung on by sinking foul shots.

Leading the offensive attack for the Bobcats were Artie Belliveau, Captain Howie Kenny, and Red Raferty. Sparky Adams and "Toote" Plante were the big guns in the Wildcat attack.

Matt Flaherty turned in his usual spectacular defensive game while Brud Witty and Howie Kenney held up the Bates defense.

From Lewiston, the Wildcats went to Orono where they tangled with the Bears on Wednesday night.

Kitten Pucksters Beat Lawrence, 6-0

Putting up an impenetrable defense, the New Hampshire freshman hockey team shut out a plucky Lawrence academy sextet on the local rink Wednesday afternoon, 6-0. The home team scored in the first, second and third periods to pile up the impressive total of six points while holding their opponents scoreless.

The first Kitten came late in the first period when O'Kane took a pass from one of his teammates and netted the puck in 11 minutes and fifteen seconds. One goal was scored in the second period and in the fourth the yearlings rang up four.

Sakoian and Perkins, the two starting frosh defensemen played a great defensive game and were a large factor in holding the Lawrence team scoreless.

This was the second win in three starts for Coach Johnny Fabello's yearlings, having previously defeated the Boston University frosh and tied the Northeastern first year men.

SYMPHONY CONCERT

odic and rhythmic tone poems. The "Sicilian Autumn" makes use of unusual harmonic effects which add to the rhythmic quality rather than to the melodic. The composer of this piece was also in the audience and was handsomely applauded.

In having the composers of two of the selections played in the audience, the evening was certainly a memorable one for the audience and the musicians.

Brahms' First Symphony

After the intermission came the major work of the concert, Brahms' First Symphony in C Minor. This was without doubt the best executed part of the program. It showed the result of long practice and diligent conducting. The strings were inclined to be rather slow in the third movement in coming in on time but the difficulty was soon eliminated and the work concluded with gusto.

The program note, given relative to the First Symphony is rather deceptive. The statement of John S. Dwight in 1878 that this work will never take a place beside the symphonies of other great masters is now certainly false. This is evinced by its frequent inclusion on concert programs and its wide popularity. It is placed in first class now with Schubert and Beethoven.

Conductor Capable

The conductor, Alexander Thiede, did a very capable job. The audience appreciated his conducting and gave him ample applause each time he appeared. He exerted a singular control over the orchestra except for the brief time when the strings got out of hand.

panel appealed most to one girl. Three people preferred the painting about transportation and communication and one of these wavered between it and the fine arts mural.

These students liked the new panel because its detail was so clear, it figures stood out well, and its colors blended nicely. Some thought that it was not as closely related to the central motif as the other murals and that it was not as American as the others.

been put into sections with students having a year's credit in the subject or even chemistry majors. Next year, it is proposed to have three freshman chemistry courses — one for the technology students, one for liberal arts students, and a new one for the "home ecs."

The fourth survey deals with the demand for a service course in German. The present system calls for a year of elementary German before the scientific course may be taken up, and many students feel that there is need for a course that will enable them to read technical German fairly well in a year, a course which will contain the minimum of grammar and all the scientific literature possible. Of course, it is not expected that the course will teach the student to read technical papers readily with only a year's training; but it is hoped that enough of the language may be picked up in the year to enable him to get the gist of the article with the aid of a German dictionary. Such a course is claimed to be of inestimable value to those who cannot give two years to German, and would be a boon to graduate students especially.

see bitten finger nails, twisted handkerchiefs, lights burning 'til dawn, a rush business in the Bookstore (don't forget them, as we so often do. They are really rather important), and a hundred and one other little things which denote that that fatal period of one's college life is here . . . finals.

It's really not quite as bad as it sounds and if you all start right in tonight a-plugging maybe you'll be able to get in bed before 3:30 that day you have that first exam.

frosh continuing to pile up an assuring lead. The Exeterites paced by Captain Weller brought their total to 13 points as against 31 for the frosh.

Coach DuRie replaced most of his first team with substitutes and still New Hampshire forged ahead, piling up 18 more points to Exeter's 7. At the beginning of the last period, the Kitten team was manned by second, third, and fourth stringers. This was the only period that the Exeters outscored the New Hampshire frosh 8 to 3.

The Kittens have shaped up very well this season and still have four games to play.

Besides Captain Zitrides, a fine game was played by Bennie Suslak and "Red" Davis.

The Exeter team was not quite up to its expected caliber. They had previously beaten a good Harvard club, and were expected to give the Kittens a hard tussle.
