DURHAM, N.H. – Students who live in Stoke Hall at the University of New Hampshire are partnering with the Oyster River Youth Association to present another of their successful “Youth Night Out” programs for middle-school students in the Oyster River school district, Friday, Nov. 19, 2004, from 6-8 p.m. at the Oyster River Middle School.

Youth Night Out is a community service project of Stoke Hall and features food, prizes, and games and crafts like dodgeball, karaoke, bracelet making, balloon animals, and basketball. There is a $2 admission fee for each student to cover the food and activity expenses; the students donate their time and skills.

“We had an overwhelming response from Stoke Hall residents who wanted to volunteer—more than 30 students and staff participated the last time and almost 200 middle-school kids,” says Brad Williams, Stoke Hall director.
