MANCHESTER, N.H. – The Institute on Disability at the University of New Hampshire will hold a two-day conference in September to highlight real choices for older adults and individuals with disabilities living in communities.

The conference, “Real Choices for Older Adults and Individuals with Disabilities Living in Your Community,” scheduled for Sept. 23 and 24, 2003, at the Center of N.H., Holiday Inn in Manchester, is sponsored by The Real Choice Systems Change project at the Institute on Disability and associated partners. It will present innovative models that represent best practices in community programs promoting equal opportunities, full participation, independent living, and economic self-sufficiency.

Keynote speakers include advocate and storyteller Norman Kunc; national transportation expert Jon Burkhardt; economic counseling and social work expert Kevin J. Mahoney from Boston College; and Director of the Disabled and Elderly Health Programs Group at the Center for Medicaid and State Operations, Tom Hamilton.

Conference sessions will explore topics such as community transportation; accessibility; nursing home transition; housing opportunities; community healthcare; person-centered planning; mentorship; assistive technology solutions to maximize employment opportunities; misuse of medications and alcohol among elders in senior housing; finance solutions, and more.

The Real Choice Systems Change project is designed to create and implement improvements in community-based care systems in order to improve health and long-term care services an supports that assist older adults and individuals with disabilities to live in the community. Additional sponsors include N.H. Department of Health and Human Services, N.H. Developmental Disabilities Council, Granite State Independent Living, the National Alliance for the Mentally Ill-N.H., Community Support Network Inc., Granite Supports Projects, Common Ground, and individuals and families.
