Red Sox Pennant Fever Spreads North to Durham

UNH has opinions about the Red Sox, too.

Students and others voiced their opinions about the Red Sox winning the pennant to THE NEW HAMPSHIRE in an informal poll yesterday.

"It will be the first time I'll have watched the World Series," said a student from Massachusetts.

"They were lucky," said another student from Massachusetts.

"I was in Boston and I got caught in the traffic. Other than that it was great," said Tom Joslin, a junior, when asked about Sunday's pennant-clinching game.

"It was a minor miracle," mumbled one male sophomore.

"Mark my words, in six games the Birds will be defeathered," said John Freeman, a senior.

John Coyle, of the Durham Fire Department, said, "The consensus around here is that the Red Sox are going to take the series. If they get fired up enough they may even take it in the first four games.

Housewives had opinions, too. One housewife repeated what others had said. "I wish they had lost much sooner because I am sick of having my husband watch television," said Sarah Gable, assistant librarian.

An unidentified member of the university community claimed conspiracy was involved. He said, "The Red Sox won because it was a plot of the sports officials of America."

Others expressed delight. "Boston is the kind of town that likes this sort of thing. They're small enough to really enjoy it, not like New York. It will be the first World Series in a long time that I'll be interested in," said Harold Kollmeier, a senior.

"I think it's about time. I think everyone in Boston has a right to go crazy. I wish I could get a seat for the Series," said one grad student.

"I'm flabbergasted. With all the good young players they have, I think they could keep this up for a few years," said another.

Others were pessimistic. "They'll get killed in the Series. There's no team in the American League that could beat any of the top five teams in the National League," said Josh Schurman, a junior.

"I think it will be the Cards, but I am innately pessimistic," said junior Paul Gigas.

"I think they'll take it from St. Louis. It means a lot to them," said sophomore Bob Staples.

Girls had something to say, also. "I hate baseball," said senior Julie Lipp. "I was happy for the Red Sox though, since they have not won the pennant in 21 years."

"My boyfriend is one of their biggest fans, so I was brainwashed. He predicts they'll win," said Cathy Quinn, a senior.

Other students weren't as serious about the games.

"Did the Red Sox win the pennant?" said a grad student.

"I just bet $7,000 of the Student Senate's money on the Red Sox, because the odds were so good," said John Rodat, Student Senate president, jokingly.

Another Meeting Set For No-Curfew Sign-up

Another meeting for all senior women and those 21 years old to sign eligibility cards for no-curfews will be held next week, according to Roberta Coughlin, chairman of the Women's Rules committee.

"It's very important that students don't get bits and pieces of information...that they all be in this system with the same knowledge of it," she said.

A definite day for the meeting has not been set yet, according to Miss Coughlin. Girls who did not sign eligibility cards at the last open meeting may do so next week, she said.

Miss Coughlin will present the general background for the no-curfew system and the philosophy behind it.

"Last year the proposed 'self-imposed' curfew system went from committee to committee. It started out in the ACTION committee (October), then it went to Women's Rules where it was studied completely and a poll of students was conducted.

"Following this, it went to Student Senate (November), then to the Dean's office and from there to President McConnell. He created an Ad Hoc Committee to study it (January).

"After what seemed like endless meetings, the committee sent the President a majority report that stated no one should have curfews, and a minority report limiting it to upperclassmen and retaining curfews for freshmen.

"President McConnell directed that the reports go through Student Senate for another vote. Student Senate accepted the majority report of the President's Ad Hoc Committee. After this, University Senate voted to accept the minority report (curfews for freshmen).

"Finally, President McConnell, perhaps at a loss to find another campus committee, presented the reports to the trustees during the summer," she said.

"The mechanics have been established; they will be smoothed and ironed out in the next few months," said Miss Coughlin.

"Perhaps also in the next few months, it will become quite evident that the college coed is capable of living in a community without having the hours she may appear in public specifically established for her," she stated.

The no-curfew system will begin when the keys and locks are installed later this month.

Deans Make Request

Council Provisionally Okays MJB and WJB Appointments

The executive council of the Student Senate provisionally approved appointments for the Men's and Women's Judiciary Boards last week, reported Senate Vice-President Roberta Coughlin.

The appointments were tabled earlier last week by the Student Senate pending investigation by the executive council.

In a letter sent last week to Senate President John Rodat, Deans Elizabeth McQuade and Steven Richards said, "We feel that both Judiciary Boards should be permitted to function for cases coming up this week as well as in the weeks to follow."

Provisionally approved members of the Women's Judiciary Board are: Karen Mattern, Paula Leveille, Margaret Mehron, and Ellen Oppenheimer.

Temporary approvals for the Men's Judiciary Board include: Mark Shesky, Floyd Batchelder, George Branscombe, and Gregory Michael.

Miss Coughlin explained that the executive council has to act temporarily in the absence of Senate.

The Council made clear to the appointees and the Dean's Office that approval is pending final approval of Senate.

Rudolph's Runback

Bob Rudolph follows Billy Estey downfield for a 34-yard punt return in the second quarter of Saturday's 42-0 victory over Colby.

Exciting plays like this became almost commonplace for the Wildcats. Several fans became bored with the one-sided contest and left early, but it was nice to be bored with victory for a change.

Memorial Service For Steve Benoah Planned Oct. 12th

A memorial service for Steven Benoah will be held at the Durham Community Church, Thursday, October 12, at 1:15 p.m.

Benoah was a UNH senior mechanical engineering student from Ghana, Africa. He died early this summer at the Maine Medical Center, Portland, Maine, where he had been hospitalized with a kidney disease since last November.

Raymond Matheson, advisor to foreign students explained that the memorial service is being held because few students were able to attend Benoah's funeral this summer.

The service will be performed by Rev. Daniel Novotny, of Durham.

Library Addition Open to Bids

Bids for construction of a $3 million addition to the library will open on October 10.

According to Donald Vincent, head librarian, the 80,000 square foot expansion will take from 18 months to two years to complete. The addition will extend 50 feet behind the present building and will be a floor and a half higher.

The present structure can seat 715 students. The addition will enable 1400 students to study in the library.

The book collection will grow along with the floor space. Vincent explained that although 33,000 new books were added this year, a growing library should expand by 50,000 books each year.

"In the next ten years, we should be able to increase our collection by 400,000 volumes," he said.

The addition will have listening rooms for groups and individuals. The individual areas will be equipped with stereo earphone stations.

Other new features will include air conditioning, rooms for group discussion, and a large browsing room adjacent to the children's room.

The children's room will be doubled in size and redecorated. These large new rooms are necessary, according to Vincent, because the university library serves also as Durham's public library.

Reserve books, which are now obtained at the main desk, will be moved to floor B. There will be another loan desk and exit on floor C. Floor C, now used for storage, will have study areas similar to those on the other floors. It will also be equipped with an escalator.

Fraternity Rush Begins to Fill Quotas

Informal fraternity rush began with the start of classes this fall.

Sophomores, except sophomore transfers, juniors and seniors are eligible to rush if they have a 2.0 accumulative average or a 2.0 average in the preceding semester.

Each house has a quota for the year, from January to December. Informal rush fills whatever vacancies remain when school starts. Some houses have many openings, a few have none.

Most fraternities sponsor an open house at which those eligible may meet the brothers.

According to Paul Stevens, of TKE, men rushing informally have a definite advantage over freshmen. They are allowed in the house and may meet the brothers informally at almost any time.

The last stage of informal rush begins when a fraternity has its pledge class. The fraternity then submits cards from the Intrafraternity Council to Dean Richard F. Stevens, associate dean of students, for verification of eligibility.

After approval, active pledge cards are issued and the houses once again operate with full quotas.

The cost of operating the Coronastat Copier on the main floor of the library has been reduced from 10¢ to 5¢ a sheet.

According to Robert B. Stone, assistant reference librarian, this reduction will be on an experimental basis. "It is hoped that this economy move will cut down the amount of mutilation and theft of library materials."

'Odd Couple' Starts UNH Theatre Season

"Student apathy is our biggest problem," claims John C. Edwards, associate professor of speech and drama and director of the University Theatre.

Although drama students and faculty are quite excited about this season's play series, he explained, their spirit is not matched by the rest of the student body. Season-ticket sales, for example, are proceeding only "moderately well."

According to Edwards, the tickets are being bought at a rate slightly higher than last year's, but this is because of the increase in student enrollment rather than a greater interest in the University Theatre.

The season begins on Friday, October 27, with "The Odd Couple"--a popular modern comedy which will be staged by a professional troupe in Boston at the same time.

Edwards, who will personally direct several of the plays this year, is confident that "The Odd Couple" and the other plays in the series will be "excellent productions."

In addition to "The Odd Couple", the University Theatre will also sponsor "Antigone", "The Caretaker", "The Three-penny Opera", and "The Private Ear" and "The Public Eye".

Season tickets are on sale at the speech and drama office in the Paul Creative Arts Center. A season ticket costs five dollars.

Admission for single performances is $1.50.

Students Tell of Their Year Spent Abroad in France

by Janice Harayda
For the third consecutive year, a group of UNH students is studying at the University of Dijon in Burgundy, France, under the French department's "Junior Year Abroad" program.

"The most valuable aspect of a program like this," said Linda Clark, 21, of Salem, N.H., who went to Dijon last year, "is that all of your little groups and friends are taken away from you, and you're forced to live completely on your own."

The walls of her room in International House, where she is a resident assistant, are cluttered with postcards and snapshots of the city and surrounding countryside. They show houses with roofs of orange, yellow and green tile, the famed Burgundian vineyards, Gothic cathedrals, and the University of Dijon itself. The university has the first modern American-style campus in France.

Better Than Tourist's Insight
"By going to Dijon to study," said Sue Anne LaPierre, 21, "you get an insight into the French way of life, especially its educational system, that you could never get as a tourist."

Linda and Sue Anne were among ten applicants selected to go to France by Dr. Louis Hudon, director of the Junior Year at Dijon program, and members of the department.

Unlike the other eight, they are not French majors. However, like all students who go, they had followed a series of prescribed courses in their freshmen and sophomore years.

Each of them rented a room from a local family, as did all but three of the others, who lived in dormitories.

All of the Dijonnais, as they are called by the UNH French department, took six courses at the university while living there, three of which were for foreign students and three for regular French students.

Language Not Big Problem
The language difference was not as great a problem as the students anticipated.

"We arrived a month before classes started," said Linda Nelson, 21, "so we had plenty of time to get used to listening to Frenchmen before classes started. People were always willing to help us with their language."

Other differences between the French and American ways of life, however, did pose problems. "Unlike American universities, French schools have no social life whatsoever," said Vicki Gates, 21, of Dover.

"I think the one thing I missed more than anything while I was in France was school spirit on the part of the students. There, the university is purely academic, with no clubs or extra-curricular activities, or that sort of thing," she said.

Meal Schedule

According to Sue Anne LaPierre, one of the most difficult things to adjust to was the French meal schedule.

"Classes end at five, and the dining hall doesn't open until about seven," she explained, "so you can get really hungry. Also, everything closes down from noon to 2 p.m., so you can't just run downtown and shop on your lunch hour."

One thing she especially liked was the custom among students of going everywhere in groups rather than with dates. "I'm engaged," she said, "and if it hadn't been for that, I would have had to stay home a lot more than I did."

All the Dijonnais interviewed expressed surprise at the little dating French students actually do. Even for formal dances, the men and women of the university go stag--with the latter even buying their own flowers.

Most of the Dijonnais were similarly taken aback by the formality between professors and students in the French educational system.

Pedestaled Professors

"Students there believe that the professor is the be-all and the end-all," said Linda Nelson. "No one even raises his hand in class or talks to a professor after class, except foreign students like ourselves."

Miss Nelson added that when American students went to them with problems or for advice, they were highly cordial and appeared to be pleased that the students had come.

Each student at Dijon had to write six 20-page papers during his stay in France, to be mailed back to UNH and graded by professors here.

"My one criticism of the program," said Miss LaPierre, "is that since we didn't get our paper subjects until December, we had about 12 weeks to do six term papers, and that was too much, especially with the impossible French library system."

Besides Sue Anne LaPierre, Linda Nelson, Vicki Gates, and Linda Clark, six others went to Dijon. They are Charles Allaire, Marsha Barden, Yvette Gagnon, Deborah Lord, Becky Talley, and Nancy Williams, all French majors.

Students repeatedly stressed, however, that one does not have to be a French major to appreciate the year abroad.

Those sophomores who hope to attend the University of Dijon next year are advised to apply in January.

Commuter's Club Seeks Members

"The Commuter's Club lets commuters function as a part of the school," asserted club president Donald VanDuyne, "and gives them a sense of association with the campus."

VanDuyne indicated that a membership drive is currently on to recruit some of the 2000 commuters. Club membership now totals twenty.

Plans for this year's Commut-er's Club include sponsoring a Homecoming dance at the Union, participating in intramural sports, and making a Winter Carnival snow sculpture.

The Commuter's Club constitution was accepted by Student Senate late last year. Officers include, besides VanDuyne; Vice-President, William Schafner; Secretary, Marion Phipps; and Treasurer, Betsy Sanborne.

Talk About Bookstore Lines

Nothing can be done about bookstore lines, according to Robert Stevenson, manager of the bookstore.

"I have never seen a more considerate bunch of students than I saw at book rush time. They stood in line for everything and all their gripes are understandable," he said.

Stevenson said the lines were handled to the "best of our ability" and at peak hours the longest wait was one and a half hours.

Peter Bartlett, assistant manager of the bookstore, is sympathetic with the students' expenses. "They are all justifiable complaints. The students do not set the prices."

The bookstore lines served another purpose this year. It was a place to meet people for the first time, and a place of reunion.

"I saw kids I hadn't seen since last year's book line," said one junior female.

A Challenging Invitation

Dean of Women Elizabeth McQuade has invited all residence halls to adopt the honor system.

The honor system requires students to report themselves for violating residence hall rules. Under the system, resident assistants are only obligated to report students for major rule violations.

Residents in each University housing unit decide whether the honor system will be used in their hall.

Lord and Smith are the only halls on campus now operating under the honor system.

The presidents of these two halls sent a letter to all freshmen women this summer explaining that students created the honor system in the belief that the best discipline is self-discipline.

The basis of the honor system, according to Dean McQuade, is personal honesty and a mutual trust on the part of all involved.

The system seems to work. Dean McQuade, housemothers and residents report fewer disciplinary problems in Smith and Lord than in halls not using the honor system.

The voluntary pledge to the honor system apparently builds a mutual trust among hall residents. Coeds in Lord never lock their rooms and yet nothing has been reported stolen.

Success of the system depends on the responsibility and integrity of the participants, according to girls in Lord and Smith.

The honor system challenges the students' maturity. And Dean McQuade's invitation to participate in the honor system offers that challenge to every student living in University residence halls.

Letters To The Editor Impatient Reader Says He's Sick Of Long Waits in Hood House

To the Editor:

Why is it impossible to get prompt medical treatment at the Hood House?

I recently spent an hour and a half waiting for a doctor, along with a crowd that eventually grew to more than fifteen people.

During that time, nobody received treatment, even though Doctors Crandall, Howarth, and Cilley were all in the building.

Admittedly, I was not seriously ill, but after three years of UNH, I have concluded that it makes little difference whether one is very sick or just coming down with a cold -- the wait at Hood House is never short.

It is time that someone began paying more attention to students seeking treatment at Hood House--unless, of course, he has something else to do.

Graduate Merton Generalizes About American Politics

To the Editor:

Maybe the French have the right idea. Or the Germans, or even the Italians. Maybe two major political parties are not enough.

There has to be something wrong with a system which presents the voter with the unenviable task of choosing between Lyndon Johnson and Richard Nixon. Or Ronald Reagan. Or even Barry Goldwater. That didn't turn out to be much of a choice at all, did it?

And there has to be something wrong with a system that places Nelson Rockefeller, Jacob Javits, and Mark Hatfield under the same general banner as Goldwater, Reagan, and John Tower while William Fulbright, the Kennedys, and Mike Mansfield share a segment of donkey with James Eastland, Lester Maddox, Allen Ellender, and Louise Day Hicks.

And there has to be something wrong with a system that virtually counts a candidate out of the race before he has announced his candidacy. (Not that I'm a great fan of George Romney's. Romney has been called the Casey Stengel of politics, but this unfortunate comparison is grossly unfair to Ol' Case. Maybe no one else knew what Stengel was talking about. But at least he did.)

(Stengel should probably be our next ambassador to Saigon. His being there would be no more illogical than, say, George Murphy's enlightened visit last month. And who knows? He might rack up an upset write-in victory in the New Hampshire primary next March.)

But, before I start thinking about a Yastrzemski-for-President, Cousy-for-Attorney-General ticket, I'll digress.

What is really needed in this country is a system more compatible with the wide spectrum of opinions and philosophies presently jammed uncomfortably under two roofs. I think five parties would probably do the trick. (Five parties! Think of the ball Harris and Gallup would have. And those charts the President carries around in his pocket would have to be micro-filmed.)

The five parties I have in mind are not aligned from left to right on the ideological scale, Americans see themselves as much too pragmatic for something as abstract as that. Rather, the parties would be oriented around the two most important issues of the day: domestic spending, and the war in Vietnam.

The first party favors both. This is the party of L.B.J., Rusk, and it's getting harder and harder to think of more.

The second party favors the war, but not domestic spending. Here we find Goldwater, Tower, Reagan, Ellender, and Everett Dirksen.

Third, we have those who oppose the war and favor domestic spending. People like Bob Kennedy, Hatfield, and Wayne Morse.

Fourth, those who oppose both the war in Vietnam and large-scale domestic spending. It's hard to think of many who fit this category at the moment--perhaps Thurston Morton for a starter. And maybe George Aiken, whose suggestion on Vietnam (let's declare a victory and get out) has been about the best yet.

The fifth party is composed of people who just plain cannot make up their minds - Romney, for instance.

But, American politics being what they are, a logical system such as the one outlined above has a very poor chance of ever emerging.

Yogi Berra for President, anyone?

Milnes Write Book On Durham's Swans

Alice, the swan, has been at the University for two years. Dr. Lorus J. Milne was one of the first to see her.

Dr. Milne, of the UNH zoology department, had been called by one of the townspeople.

Mr. Brad McIntyre, whose land overlooked the estuary where the young swan had landed, also saw her. He, in fact, donated the first dollar toward her upkeep when he gave his wife the money to buy her some bread.

Since then the swan has been one of the points of interest in Durham. People have bought her bread to supplement her diet of water weeds. High School, elementary classes and university classes have studied her.

In the winter, Assistant Professor David P. Olson of the forestry department caught her in order that she might have a sheltered place in which to last out the cold.

At the same time she was examined and found to be a female, and the town named her Alice.

In the spring of 1966 she was again set free on the Millpond and promptly went to hide near the end of Oyster River, a place that can be reached only by foot. Few people knew where she was.

Howard E. Forrest knew. As a member of the maintenance crew for the department of buildings and grounds, Forrest had fed her all winter and she knew and trusted him. Dr. and Mrs. Milne also knew where she was hiding.

What Alice needed was another swan to keep her company. Dr. Milne had already taken steps to procure a mate for her, but that swan was weak, and had died before he could be taken to the Millpond.

Then came Hamilton, from Rhode Island. He was skinny, with dirty feathers and very weak when Alice first met him, but he soon filled out on the rich diet of greens found in the locality, and on the bread and lettuce fed to him.

Alice and Hamilton were compatible and, one might say, lived happily ever after.

Actually, everything wasn't right from the start. First there was the problem of ownership. An out-of-state couple heard of the bird shortly after she arrived and came to claim her. Fortunately for Durham, they could not.

The swan had no identification marks on her, and so was technically a wild swan. Alice disappeared a few times, but always returned.

The story of the Durham swans was published this summer. "Gift From the Sky," a story for children, written by Dr. and Mrs. Lorus J. Milne, tells the story of Alice as well as giving background information of swans in general and mute swans in particular.

The book offers a few suggestions concerning the origin of Alice, but leaves the reader to choose the answer.

UNH Gets $91,621 Research Grant For Satellite Work

The university has been awarded a $91,621 grant from the National Aeronautics and Space Administration (NASA) to conduct sounding and rocket investigations of auroral displays, Sen. Norris Cotton announced Monday in Washington.

Dr. Laurence Cahill Jr., director of the UNH Space Science Center, said that the grant will finance the firing of five Nike-Tomahawk Rockets through visible auroral displays in the ionosphere.

The apparatus that will record the central information and relay it back to the earth by radio signal will be built in the UNH physics department, he said. Work has already begun on this equipment so that the first rocket should be ready for firing by December.

"UNH has been receiving grants from NASA since 1960," Cahill said.

Approximately 10 to 15 NASA contracts are held by UNH, he added. Individual professors who hold grants from the agency are John Lockwood, Edward Chupp, Richard Kaufmann, and Robert Houston, all of whom are affiliated with the Space Science Center here.

Student Wives Meet on Mon.

The University Student Wives Club will hold their first meeting of the year at Dallas Hall, St. Georges Episcopal Church, Durham, on October 9, at 8 p.m.

"The club is primarily a social organization just to help the wives get to know each other," said Gloria Sayer, chairman of publicity.

The members of the club carry on various charity projects throughout the year. Last year, food baskets were collected, and were distributed in Durham. Also, the group donated money to the Office of Economic Opportunity for the home training program.

Money is raised by a Reindeer Sale where club members make various items such as clothing, cakes and pies and auction them off to other members of the club.

Meetings are held on the first Monday of every month. A different speaker appears at every meeting. This Monday, Mr. Van Allen will speak on the University and Durham. On November 13, there will be a demonstration on the application of make-up.

Among other things to be featured this year are a fashion show by the Yankee Drummer, and a lecture on Australia.

The club invites all student wives to attend the first meeting.

A new snack bar opened at the Catholic Student Center on Madbury Road, Sunday.

The snack bar offers hot dogs, hamburgers, cheeseburgers, soft drinks and coffee. Deliveries will be made for a purchase of $2 or more.

The snack bar is open from 7 p.m. to 11 p.m., Sunday through Thursday.

Pete Decata and Ray Martin, two university business majors and brothers of ATO are managing the snack bar.

Housemothers and Students Dine Together

Housemothers are eating in dining halls this year.

"It has long been our desire to have the head residents integrated with the students," said Francis Gordon, University housing director.

"They are not put there as a type of police action, only to create an opportunity for head residents to talk with students, and vice versa," he said.

Through a new plan initiated by University housing, the head residents may receive twelve meals per week at the dining halls.

Gordon pointed out that this is not a mandatory action taken by University housing. It is an attempt to "make eating in the dining halls a pleasant experience, and at the same time to create more flow between faculty, administration and students," he said.

Nineteen out of twenty-five housemothers are taking advantage of the opportunity to eat with students.

"The boys seem to particularly enjoy it," said Mrs. Foulkrod, a substitute housemother at Hubbard Hall.

She recalled that after having dinner with a "table full of boys"

she later sat with a group of girls and jokingly commented, "See, I can do it, so can you."

Mrs. Emery, a new head resident at Hitchcock this year, said, "I feel a little hesitant at first; I'm not sure that they like us being there, but after a while it works out well. We talk about school and summer experiences, and the boys generally complain 'It's not like Ma's cooking'."

The students also enjoy this chance to have relaxed informal chats with head residents over a cup of coffee or an evening meal.

One freshman coed chuckled as she remarked, "It's so much fun; they get such a kick out of our conversations. It really livens up the whole mealtime."

Gordon commented, "You know, it would not be unheard of to invite a faculty member to sit at your table. It's not apple polishing. We simply want them to give of their presence, and the student to give of his."

More Use Counseling Center

"At the center, we try to help students learn their strengths and their weaknesses," explained Dr. Robert Congdon, director of the University's counseling and testing center.

The counseling center is a University service which provides professionally qualified assistance without charge to students who have personal or emotional problems.

Congdon stressed that the services of the center are not limited to those with "serious" problems.

"The majority of students who come to the center," he said, "have average problems that confront the college student today.

"The largest percentage who come to see us," he added, "are generally confused about themselves."

Congdon cited common student problems such as establishing goals, selecting majors, and social and academic adjustment.

Over ten percent of the student body used the counseling service last year, Congdon explained. "That's a 100 per cent increase over previous years."

He attributes this increase to a growing acceptance of psychological and psychiatric methods.

"These matters are more out in the open now," he said, "people are less afraid of the subject."

The staff at the center includes four full-time clinical psychologists and a superintendent of testing. The center is open from 8 a.m. to 4:30 p.m., Monday through Friday.

Appointments may be made in person or by phone. The counseling service is located on the bottom floor of T-Hall.

"We try to see the student within 48 hours after he makes his appointment," said Congdon. "No student is kept waiting long."

Parking Problem

Available parking space on-or near-campus is so far away from many classroom buildings that students have to switch from cars to bicycles in order to get to class on time.

WILDCAT SPORTS

UNH Harriers Second; Olympian Places First

by Mike Painchaud

The UNH cross-country team defeated Colby but lost to Northeastern in the Wildcats' first meet of the season, Saturday, at the Cowell Stadium course.

A good team effort by the Huskies decided the contest by a score of 31 to UNH's 42 and Colby's 57.

Sebsibe Mamo, a Colby sophomore, led the field in a time of 23:00.7, a new course record. Mamo, a native of Ethiopia, represented his homeland in the 1964 Olympics at Tokyo.

Leonard Sheenan of N.U. was second with a time of 23:26 and Captain Ev Dunklee of the Wildcats was third, four seconds behind Sheenan.

Coach Paul Sweet said that there was a great improvement by his runners over last year. He notes that the times of his top runners in this first meet were as good as their times in their last meets of last season.

Sweet said further that his team's performance was definitely handicapped by the loss of eight runners who were unable to compete because of injuries. Among those out was Larry Martin, top runner on last year's frosh squad. He has been hampered by a knee ailment.

Saturday, the Wildcat harriers travel to Kingston, Rhode Island, for a meet with URI. The UNH Wildkittens will be making their first start of the year, also, on Saturday.

Outrush Colby, 233 - 50

Wildcats Humble Mules

by Jon Kellogg

	UNH	COLBY
First downs	17	3
Rushing Ydage	233	50
Passing Ydage	89	44
Passes	8-4-1	22-7-1
Punts (number-Av)	2-42.5	9-25.5
Fumbles lost	4	0
Yds. penalized	65	50

The Colby Mules were anything but stubborn last Saturday, as the varsity football team stunned the visitors 42-0 before 9,000 fans at Cowell Stadium.

In a game filled with outstanding individual performances, offensive halfback Bill Phillips and linebacker Dick Gordon were among the top performers.

Phillips lugged the ball 15 times in the first half for 96 yds. and a 6.4 yd. rushing average. The hard running junior from Exeter, N.H. carried the ball for five first downs and one touchdown.

Dick Gordon, a sophomore linebacker from Portsmouth, N.H., played hard-nosed defense all afternoon. His consistency was typical of the entire Wildcat defense which kept Colby under wraps all afternoon; they held the White Mules to a mere 50 yds. rushing and 44 yds. passing.

Intercepts Pass

Gordon's reward for his hard work came early in the third quarter when he intercepted a Colby pass and raced 40 yds. down the sideline for New Hampshire's fifth touchdown.

The defense also welcomed back defensive tackle Vince Martino. Despite injuries Martino batted down two attempted Colby passes and was a frequent intruder in the Colby backfield.

Bill Estey served notice on upcoming opponents as he caught his first official punt of 1967 and dashed 35 yds. for a touchdown with only 2:20 gone in the first quarter.

Perhaps the most pleasing thought for Wildcat fans, who have not seen such an offensive outburst since 1963 when UNH dumped Colby 49-0, were the four sustained touchdown drives.

Quarterback Ed Walsh engineered three drives of 48, 46 and 20 yds. Walsh, an unheralded passer, threw two touchdown strikes: a 40-yd. toss to halfback Tom Kasprzak, who made a brilliant catch, and a 19-yd. strike to fullback Sonny Wilson.

In the fourth quarter, sophomore quarterback Terry Peluso sprinted his way to the 2-yard line where fullback Brian Boucher burst in for UNH's sixth and final touchdown.

Kurt Vollherbst booted six extra points to bring his intercollegiate total to 18 consecutive point-after-touchdown scores.

Half-time highlights included the return of former UNH football greats from 1937, 1942, and the Glass Bowl team of 1947. The program also included New Hampshire's outstanding high school band, the Portsmouth Clippers.

Saturday's victory marks the end of the New Hampshire-Colby rivalry which dates back to 1896. Dartmouth will replace Colby on UNH's schedule next year.

The Wildcats will travel to Kingston next week to meet the up and coming Rhode Island Rams. This should prove to be an exciting Yankee Conference thriller.

Yukica Speaks At Luncheon

The Quarterback Luncheon Club met in the Strafford Room of the Memorial Union Building Tuesday at noon to show films of the Colby football game.

Head football coach Joe Yukica and his staff made comments on the game.

Coach Junie Carbonneau evaluated the Rams of Rhode Island, who will play UNH this Saturday, as a "young team, like ours" that could win a lot of games. He cited the Rams' split end Frank Geiselman as the player to watch.

Yukica announced that starting center Jim Psaledas broke his hand in the game against Colby and will be out for the rest of the season. Dan Drewniak, a sophomore, will replace Psaledas.

Yukica said he hoped the luncheon, which was sparsely attended, would become more popular in weeks to come.

Getting Ready

Members of the UNH Soccer team are shown practicing this week for today's opener at Bowdoin College.

Soccermen at Bowdoin Today

By Dave Dominie

The booters of UNH will open their 1967 season today against Bowdoin College.

Bowdoin is rated one of the best small college teams in the New England area, and last year were the collegiate champions of Maine.

The wildcats were defeated last year by Bowdoin by a score of 2-1, the loss being the result of some fatal defensive lapses by UNH.

The Polar bears of Bowdoin lost almost their entire defensive lineup of last year, but Coach Charlie Butt has 11 lettermen returning, among them Co-captain and all-Maine forward Jeff Richards, and fullbacks Sandy Ervin and Dave Forsberg. Butt has almost his complete forward line returning and expects additional help from members of last year's highly successful frosh team.

Coach Weiland is very optimistic about this year's team, saying that the enthusiasm and esprit de corps of the team is most encouraging. The coach was dissatisfied with last week's scrimmages, but said that the team has played well this week, and is confident of a victory. Weiland said the problem with last year's team was lack of a consistent defense, "The scoring punch was there, but the defense was weak."

This year Coach Weiland sees an even more potent offense, and a solid defense combining in a highly successful season.

Weightlifting Meeting

UNH is going to have a weightlifting club.

Bob Turcotte, a student coordinator of the club, announced yesterday membership is open to anyone interested in joining.

He said that interested persons should report to room 19 of the Field House anytime today or tomorrow.

Hess Calls For Grapplers

Wildcat wrestling coach, Irving Hess, announced Monday that a meeting will be held for interested freshmen next Tuesday at 4 p.m. in the wrestling room at the Field House.

Hess requested that the frosh pick up their equipment before 3 p.m. on Monday.

The varsity wrestling team will also have a meeting on Tuesday at 4 p.m. in the wrestling room.

Hess indicated that anyone interested should report for the meeting, particularly lightweights.

The team will have seven weeks of practice before opening their season against Hartford University in Hartford.
