SPU tax statement read in House

Strike convocations at 9 a.m. and 1 p.m.

by Nancie Stone

Convocations will take place at 9 a.m. and 1 p.m. in front of Thompson Hall today, as the main events of a "strike" planned by the Student Political Union.

The "strike" will protest recent UNH budget cuts by Governor Walter Peterson and the House Appropriations Committee.

Events are expected to include the distribution of literature on the state budget and tax issue and also dialogue on methods of dealing with the current University budget crisis.

Striking students are expected to request permission to speak in their classes about the budget and tax situations.

The strike follows up an SPU march on Concord yesterday and has met with considerable disapproval from other campus organizations and the administration.

SPU, realizing opposition would be forthcoming, stated in a release issued this week, that it was faced with the gamble of "having to sharply awaken students with the hope of effective action and alienating citizens by mobilizing students in any form."

In answer to the strike and confrontation in Concord, Brad Cook, student body president, and Bill McLaughlin, student Senate president, issued a joint statement condemning the action and calling it "the best possible way for students to kill any chance of favorable legislative action."

"We ask students not to support these actions but to support the actions of their leaders and other responsible student groups to present our needs to governmental leaders," they said.

Any irresponsible actions taken at this time will not help the University and students must not support them. Constructive means of opposition to the budget cuts are and will be available to students. The use of wrong means, as those the SPU now suggests, will destroy the chance for a good budget appropriation, hurting all students, faculty and the administration."

The Committee for Rational Action, a recently formed group working in conjunction with the Ad Hoc Budget Committee, offered alternatives to the action planned by the SPU. They plan to create a correspondence campaign and a full scale canvas of the state to talk with citizens.

In their statement describing these plans the Committee said, "While we realize that the objectives of these other movements are basically honorable and praiseworthy, we feel that demonstrating and striking are not the best means available to achieve the desired ends."

Phil Degnan, an Ad Hoc Committee co-chairman, expressed similar sentiments. "We sympathize with the students. We realize they feel three weeks is a long time to wait. But I hope this (the SPU strike) doesn't have any detrimental effects for the Tax Education Day."

Although there has been no official statement from the administration, President John McConnell commented, "I think it's unfortunate for one small group to go off and do things on its own."

Riviere elected new editor of paper

Pete Riviere

Editor-in-Chief

Peter R. Riviere has been elected Editor-in-Chief by THE NEW HAMPSHIRE Board of Governors for the coming year.

Riviere, a 23 year old political science major from Manchester, will publish his first edition May 2.

A Navy veteran, Riviere has been a Resident Assistant in Alexander Hall and co-director of Freshman Camp. He has worked as a staff reporter and co-edited a special edition on University Government for THE NEW HAMPSHIRE this year.

One of Riviere's goals for THE NEW HAMPSHIRE is to change the layout "to provide more space for in-depth coverage and news analysis," Riviere said. The paper has included provisions in the new budget to have 12 page editions every Friday.

"We have several superbly qualified people for researching touchy and over-looked issues," Riviere said.

Regarding the paper's editorial policy, Riviere intends to retain the present Viewpoint-Counterpoint editorial policy and letter page.

"I see militant actions and tactics as having a catalytic effect on apathetic people. Hopefully our editorials can become less moderate and more radical. However, I realize this is an issue-to-issue decision," he said.

"I hope I'm up to it," Riviere concluded.

Riviere has selected Ed Brodeur, an art major, as Managing Editor. George Owen and Patricia Broderick will work

Upham named Coach of Year

by Mike Painchaud, Sports Editor

Thomas F. Upham set two goals for his team when he was named Wildcat ski coach last fall. One was to regain Division I status, the other to qualify for the National Ski Championships. He not only reached those goals, but this week he was named Eastern Ski Coach of the Year.

Upham, named by the ski coaches of the Eastern Intercollegiate Ski Association, becomes the third rookie coach at UNH to win such an honor this year. Previously Jim Root won national recognition in football and Charlie Holt in hockey.

"How does one feel?" commented Upham when asked his reactions. "I'm

by Pat Broderick and George Owen

The Student Political Union submitted a 500 word statement to the House of Representatives in Concord yesterday afternoon calling for "tax justice." However, the House voted 182-142 not to print the statement in the House journal. The statement was read by House minority leader Robert Raiche of Manchester. Earlier in the day, thirty UNH students rallied at the State House in protest of the state tax structure.

"The purpose of this rally is not to ask for additional funds for UNH," the statement read. "The purpose of this rally is to demand a new tax structure.

"The only way to rectify this situation is to pass a graduated income tax," continued the paper. "Last year there were 24 families that grossed over a million dollars in income and paid no Federal income taxes. . . If we let them, the Legislature will cheat the workers with a graduated income tax too."

Prior to presenting the statement to the Legislature the students carried signs in front of the capital building urging tax reforms and chanted "tax the rich and not the poor."

Representative Ruth Hamilton of Claremont, a vocal advocate for students at the session yesterday, paused outside of the state house to talk with students. She smiled as she read one of the signs that read "tax justice" and remarked, "I'm all for you but you won't get it."

Later in the day, Representative Charles Gay, of Derry, stormed up to a group of students outside the state house and cursed them. Gay supports a broad base tax, according to student Axel Magnuson. Gay implied to Magnuson that the students were defeating his effort.

"You're all goddamn goons out here," he shouted. "You're no goddamn good and you never have been any goddamn good. I'm on the draftboard, and I can get every one of your goddamn radicals. If you want to go to Fort Dix, I can get you a haircut."

President John McConnell, who was at the state house for a budget meeting, said "I think it is unfortunate these students have to do something different rather than working with the rest of the students on plans to educate and influence the legislature." He added that as citizens the students have every right to talk to the legislators.

Remarks made after the session reflected the diverse opinions of the legislators during the meeting.

One representative, not in favor of the statement, maintained she would not be "bullied or pressured" into voting for the tax reform.

Mike Greene, a student at UNH, said "I was disappointed by it (the vote) but I think it was significant. We deserve a little more trust, credit and support from the school, not the disapproval we got earlier."

Senate asked to support 'Life Studies'

At the Student Senate meeting Monday night Associate Professor of Philosophy Paul Brockelman challenged students "to do something in support of experimental education."

Brockelman and William Gilsdorf, instructor in speech and drama, reported to the Senate on a proposed new curriculum called a "Program in Life Studies." Faculty and students began to work in October on the program, which stresses education must deal not only with facts but with ideas that touch the total person.

Brockelman commented that in an era of "big time research, teaching goes by the wayside" and the resulting student alienation must be taken care of by trying new methods.

He added, "New processes, disciplines, and attempts are needed and students have to help. . . you don't get change unless students demand it."

excited and pleased. Extremely pleased that the other coaches recognize and appreciate my efforts."

While at the University of Colorado, Upham was North American Nordic Combined Champion in 1963 and 1965.

This year Upham guided the Wildcats to the Eastern Division II championship. The team placed well against Division I competition to regain Division I status and qualify for the Division I championship meet.

Led by the cross-country team of Ev Dunklee, Paul Daley and Pete Dascoulias, the Cats finished a strong fourth and won an invitation to the NCAA championships at Steamboat Springs, Colorado.

Freshman curfews come up for vote

by Jean Olson

The Student Seante is expected to vote soon on a proposal by the Residence Hall Advisory Council to limit the freshman women's curfew to the first semester.

The RHAC proposal is for freshmen women to be given a period of adjustment for the first semester and self-imposed curfews the second semester.

In March, questionnaires were sent by RHAC to the 703 freshmen women in residence, asking their opinions on the freshman curfew. The results showed the majority (414 of the 514 forms returned) of present freshmen women are in favor of this proposal, although it will not affect them.

The returns indicated that 41 percent of the freshman women felt the present curfew policy creates an adequate atmosphere for social adjustment and 50 percent agreed that curfews for freshmen were beneficial. Very few freshmen felt upperclass women should have more privileges than freshmen but more than half were in favor of setting their own curfew hours.

The results also show that freshman women felt their parents' concern was relevant but that only half the parents would object to abolishing curfews.

Almost 100 percent of the freshman women would "physically or vocally support a RHAC proposal at any University Senate meeting where it is discussed." However 90 percent said they would not participate in a Women's Liberation Front demonstration on this issue.

Two years ago a proposal to abolish all women's curfews was sent to the University Senate by the Joint Committee to Study Women's Rules.

A minority report filed with the Committee's report indicated an "overwhelming vote by students to have freshman curfew." The University Senate voted to abolish curfews for upperclass women only on a step-by-step basis.

In June 1967 the Board of Trustees approved their action.

Curfew was abolished by senior women and women over 21 in the fall of 1967, for junior women in the spring of 1968, and for sophomore women in the fall of 1968.

Interfraternity Council awards six scholarships

by Elaine Skambis

The Interfraternity Council has awarded board scholarships for the 1969-70 year to six foreign students, according to IFC president Craig Abbott.

Raymond Matheson, international student advisor, said the board scholarship program has been in effect for seven or eight years, but very few students know about it.

The program assists a student in two ways, Matheson believes. First, it assists the student financially. Second, it encourages him to meet American students.

All male foreign students must fill out a financial statement when they fill out their admission form.

The scholarship recipients are chosen by a committee of Miss Jane Stearns, head of the Financial Aid Office; Director of Admissions Eugene Savage; and Mr. Raymond Matheson, who also works for the Financial Aid Office.

The committee decides which of the newly-admitted students have the most critical need and the probability of that individual coming to the University if he is given some help.

Usually the students chosen are attending the University for the first time. They are allowed to receive the scholarship only once in four years.

A rotating schedule is made up for the recipients who go in pairs of two to their assigned fraternity. They eat at each fraternity for three weeks.

This year there are six foreign students receiving the scholarships. They are Severo Avila, a senior from Ecuador, another senior, John Fanaras from Greece, two sophomores, John Hyde from England and Seiji Ono from Japan, Richard Kwor from Hong Kong and Guisepe Pinton from Italy, both freshmen.

Several of the foreign students had mixed feelings concerning the aspects of this program.

The first thing many students wanted to know was where the boys ate on weekends, since the fraternities don't serve meals then. Actually they felt that there was no problem there, because they could make something for themselves, go downtown, to a friend's, or to their host family.

The boys also felt that it was helpful socially to them as first-year students. They were able to meet quite a few people and make a number of friends. However, there were a few criticisms. One was that even though both the student and the fraternity were supplied with a schedule the student found that he was usually unexpected. They also mentioned that they feel slightly uncomfortable when they are not introduced to the brothers. These were their only criticisms of the program.

Seiji has joined Sigma Beta, Guisepe, Kappa Sigma, and Richard plans to join a fraternity next semester. The consensus was that the scholarship program was a good idea and that fraternities deserve recognition.

Those 'left wing, far out posters'

The Newmarket police and some area newspapers recently slandered two University students by implying that their political beliefs are linked with a possible drug possession charge.

The pursuit of "law and order" in this college community has become exceptionally vigorous. However, enforcers of the law seem to be ignoring a characteristic of American jurisprudence — justice.

The arrest of Salim Tamari and Michael Dombrowski for illegal possession of marijuana is a blatant example.

Last Friday night members of the Newmarket police department and the Rockingham County Sheriff's office entered Tamari and Dombrowski's apartment. Carrying warrants, the officers searched the apartment and found a few seeds, allegedly marijuana, and confiscated packets of unidentified pills. This was not unfair, considering the search warrant.

However, they also confiscated posters of Fidel Castro and Che Guevara. The police later described them as "left wing, far out posters". Police also took leftist books and pamphlets. There was no justification for confiscating any of the literature.

Both the "Portsmouth Herald" and "Foster's Daily Democrat" carried stories of the arrest and large pictures of the confiscated posters. The "Portsmouth Herald" story was objective; however, a subsequent story on proposed state drug laws was accompanied by a picture of the alleged drugs, posters and literature. The "Democrat" ran a similar picture with the story of the students arrest.

Both papers were biased in their presentation of the arrest. Through their news stories and use of pictures, the papers were implying that radical political beliefs should be correlated with the use of drugs or vice-versa. Nothing could be more mistaken. The two activities are not related and if they are, the decision should be made in a court of law; not by front page news stories or the arresting police officers.

The "revolutionaries" which the Newmarket police fear are created when newspapers and police officials also assume the roles of judge and jury.

ROTC and the creative approach

One of the most creative solutions for dealing with ROTC went largely unrecognized at a meeting of the University Senate Monday.

In the midst of a debate between ardent pro- and anti-ROTC factions, Faculty Council Chairman Frank Pilar questioned the "either/or" nature of most of the arguments being presented.

Pilar said, in effect, that the Senate should begin to consider alternatives besides retaining or abolishing credit for ROTC. For example, he suggested the University consider establishing a permanent "civilian review board" to survey the entire ROTC into an acceptable mold", so that its courses might be made worthy of academic credit.

Whether or not a review board would work is insignificant. What is significant is that Pilar appears to recognize what many Senators did not: that a creative approach might solve the ROTC problem more effectively than the usual, unimaginative solutions.

We add our "Bravo"

The Saul O. Sidore Lectures Committee and the New Hampshire Commission on the Arts deserve a hearty "Bravo" for their two recent presentations. The Alwin Nikolais Dance Company and the "Films and Film Makers Program" are the most imaginative and impressive events sponsored this year.

The Nikolais Dancers received six curtain calls and a standing ovation from a sell-out crowd in Johnson Theater April 19. Their performance can only be described as a stunning revolution in modern dance.

The Film Makers program, which ends today, has been extremely stimulating. Students found Dusan Makaveyev so interesting, they questioned him for almost an hour on his filming technique.

Fredrick Wiseman showed his controversial film "Titicut Follies" and another documentary "High School" to standing-room-only audiences. "Titicut Follies", which was shown three times, is probably one of the most important documentary films in recent years.

For the Speech and Drama department, the Cultural Affairs Office, Sidore Lectures, and all the other organizations that worked so hard to bring these two fine presentations to Durham, we add our "Bravo."

V.P. FAIMAN EXPLAINS RESEARCH PROCUREMENT

Mr. Schneider in his article "Does ROTC Belong on the UNH Campus" also raised the broader question of "the military and its peripheral agencies" controlling the externally sponsored research and educational programs on campuses. I will not enter into the general debate on ROTC, but to one who has been closely related to the total Federal support effort in higher education over a considerable period of time both in Washington and at Durham, the picture painted by Mr. Schneider is not valid for either place.

The concept that there exists within the Federal structure some monolithic integrated entity with a common malicious objective and goal is to an administrator or faculty member who has attempted to secure support completely untrue. There are literally hundreds of programs administered by over one hundred agencies supporting various facets of research and education at colleges and universities. Each agency, and in many cases individual programs, has its own objectives, ambitions, aspirations, and ground rules. The one thing held in common, however, is that they expect individuals and institutions to take the initiative in approaching them with proposals which are in keeping with the institution's needs and policies and to demonstrate the existence of faculty and institutional competence to carry out what is proposed. Agencies such as the National Science Foundation, the Public Health Service (including the National Institutes of Health), and the Office of Education evaluate proposals and allocate almost entirely on the basis of the advice and recommendations of competent professionals, usually faculty from other institutions, in the particular specialty field. Even the Department of Defense through the Air Force Office of Scientific Research the Army Research Office, and the Office of Naval Research has a long standing reputation in the scientific community for supporting basic studies without strings or pressures.

The University of New Hampshire has received significant support from many Federal programs ranging all the way from undergraduate student loans and scholarships through graduate student support (graduate fellowships and traineeships), laboratory equipment for both instructional and research purposes, many varieties of special educational programs well as basic research. At the University of New Hampshire supported in any academic department is first initiated by a faculty or members in that department. The idea is reviewed by the department chairman, the college dean, the dean of research, and the dean of administration for appropriateness, quality of overall potential contribution to the development of the academic program of the University. If a program or activity does not satisfy academic criteria, it is not for submission.

Full and complete control of academic activities including sponsored research and educational programs is vested in the Faculty Research Council consisting of faculty and administrators chaired by the Dean of Research and the Dean of the Graduate School. Policies which are reviewed and approved by the Deans and faculty

In summary, at the University of New Hampshire there is no separate educational program in any department which did not stem from the interests of a faculty member. The vast majority of programs involve students as faculty and must be of genuine interest to the academic area. Finally, it is a firm policy of the University that the results of all research must be fully publishable, i.e., unclassified.

CATALA QUESTIONS NEWMARKET POLICE TACTICS

Reading Mr. Tamari's report on how the Newmarket police handled their search of his apartment was both saddening and infuriating.

I had heard many rumors about the Newmarket police but that really does it. Apparently Officer Gahan feels that he is above the Supreme Court decisions or he wouldn't have confiscated literature when, only a few weeks ago, the Supreme Court decided that what a man read in his home is no one else's business.

Furthermore Officer Gahan presumably also thinks that he is the director of the Immigration Office (or is he thinking more of the CIA). Otherwise I can't understand how he allows himself to confiscate a foreign passport and tell people that Mr. Tamari will "probably be deported."

Does a search warrant for drugs entitle Officer Gahan to collect books instead? Should we remind this officer that to have different political opinions than he does is not a crime in this country? Maybe Officer Gahan doesn't believe in freedom of thought either? In this case I would like to ask one more question of him:

Before he accuses anyone of being a communist maybe he should wonder about his own tactics, such as deciding what kind of reading one should do and, even more, having the nerve to open private correspondence (Isn't this a Federal offense?) To me these tactics are not so remote from the actions of the police of certain governments that Officer Gahan abhors. Officer Gahan, you live in the United States of America which is a country of freedom. If you want to establish your own rules you will also have to start a movement for independence for Newmarket.

My sympathy goes to Mr. Tamari, who, at this point, probably wouldn't be better off in Newmarket after all.

RADICALS DENY FREEDOM

Some students at UNH are arguing that the State of New Hampshire is "inciting" the State of New Hampshire to acceding to their demand for better education, i.e. more freedom. What is needed, they explain, is an aroused citizenry who will demand that the welfare of the state is jeopardized unless their demand is met. And they are prepared to use the pressure tactics to force that this arousal will occur.

Not content with a speaker's bureau ("it preaches to the converted") or Brad Cook's four committee contact alumni, parents, legislators and other interested parties, pseudo-radicals have advocated a campus-wide strike or an "optional" shut-down of the University to force the state what it would be like if UNH ceased to exist.

It is ironic that these few who have no qualms about dictating what is best for the majority (state) are the same students who defend individual freedom of choice as applied to themselves, e.g. when confronted with a draft, in Loco Parentis, etc. Finally, as to deciding what the "public good" will be, they are outstanding proponents of democracy in determining their own "thing" is to be.

Perhaps that's what it means to be educated.

Kathleen Hor

"I really don't know what good it will do, but they tell me I'll be cool if I hop on."

ROTC ISSUE "TAWDRY EXCUSE TO RADICALIZE" STUDENTS

ROTC is one of many compromises that beset higher education in America. To have a forum to air our feelings on its relevance here is a blessing for which we dare not become complacent.

I wish the motion had not been made to drop academic credit for Military Science courses. Such a motion produces a confrontation and charges the atmosphere with anticipation of the inevitable yea or nay.

A petition for an open hearing before committee would produce opportunity for development of a broader consensus. Hopefully a resolution could evolve from a positive sense of the University Community realizing its particular identity, and becoming through this realization that which is relevant.

Imagine the difficulty in the face of considered rebuttal arguing that because there are parallels to the ROTC irrelevancy on campus we should tolerate it indefinitely.

Consider the vulnerability of an attack which overlooks constitutional differences as if we had no civilian control over the military. Subject this to scrutiny in full view of not just our community and you have done much for a troubled nation.

On the other hand, use of this issue to radicalize the student body is a tawdry excuse, as lame as protest which produces nothing but negation and withdrawal.

We are here to beget understanding. Have faith in this process and pursue your ends through it. We may "do our own thing" here - if we can grasp what that is.

Let us undo the "culturally suburban to Cambridge" myth and show ourselves and anyone else who would like to learn by one resolution at a time defining and disposing of this as one of many problems.

Psychology's 'Subject Procurement'

by Frederick Schneider

Recently the Psychology Department issued a leaflet entitled "Subject Procurement" to all students enrolled in Psychology 401 and 502.

Within their statement there are three immediate issues which have far-reaching ramifications

The Psychology Department has failed to obtain the high number of subjects required for their experiments through normal voluntary procedures. Therefore, they have resorted to coercion by means of militant tactics outlined in the statement.

The Psychology Department has failed to see that the only legitimate use for grades is to indicate academic achievement. Grades were certainly not designed as payment for services rendered by students. The methods used in subject procurement have extremely important effects with regard to realistic and reliable scientific results.

First, this is a democratic community. The essence of Democracy is this: all people in a democracy are to be regarded as ends only and never as a means unless a person voluntarily assumes that position for his own betterment. The sole end of the statement is "subject procurement." The methods to acquire this end are clearly to use the student as a means. The tactics instituted to bring this end about are forceful coercion using the manipulation of course credits and grades as the 'grand instrument' of execution.

The sole purpose of grades should be to indicate academic achievement. In a realistic academic community this principle should be self-evident.

The science of Psychology has shown that the methods used in subject procurement have important effects upon results obtained. It is obvious that students forced to serve as guinea pigs will be strongly influenced, consciously or subconsciously, toward reporting, in a subtle way, erroneous results in an effort to express their concern toward injustice.

Is it in harmony with the University code of academic ethics for the Psychology Department or any department to require students to work for them in projects which are not part of their course work?

Is it either fair or ethical for a department within the academic community to pay students for their non-academic work by means of a five per cent increase in grade?

Is the University community in favor of sponsoring research projects which may be invalid at the onset, because of the methods used in procuring subjects?

The Psychology Department should read to all students whose rights have been violated by the above statement a letter of apology expressing a renewed consciousness of the individual's rights in a democratic community and a real and new concern for the academic well-being of the community as a whole.

A committee should be appointed to review, as a whole, the Psychology Department's moral and ethical conscience as reflected by their policies and activities.

Sample questions which could be asked: Are any of the experiments conducted upon human subjects detrimental to either their mental or physical health: Are certain course pre-requisites established by virtue of academic necessity or rather are they instituted as a built-in means to discriminate against psychology minors and non-majors? Are the instructors leading the numerous introductory courses qualified for their posts?

Maris Jordan, a 'special student' with special plans

by Barbara Yaeger

"I have hopes of becoming an astronaut, among my other aspirations. This specific desire initiated my interest in the Air Force."

The speaker, Maris Jordan, is a senior from New Haven, Conn., and the only female ever admitted to the Air Force ROTC program at UNH. She is a "special student," a term which means she is not considered a cadet.

"I sought a basic, practical knowledge and rudimentary familiarity with the spacial environment so it remained essential that I enter an Air Force ROTC course... The knowledge gained could not be achieved by reading even the most current newscasts related to aerospace," she continued.

Maris feels the tremendous variety of subject matter which is incorporated in the AFROTC program adds to the appeal of this program while it also broadens students' educations. She added, "This is important because it emphasizes the factor that those enrolled in ROTC are first considered students and then cadets."

ROTC 636

"After experiencing eight semesters of courses in the three colleges, liberal arts, technology, and agriculture," Miss Jordan maintains, "ROTC 636 is the first course that was not so narrow as to be unable to embrace the convictions, achievement and knowledge from other branches of education."

The green-eyed senior was very determined as she discussed her feelings toward the recent

criticism of the ROTC program here. "These statements (in the Mar. 14 issue of THE NEW HAMPSHIRE) are seemingly voiced by someone thoroughly unfamiliar with the ROTC program at UNH."

"No one is more suited to teach a profession, or conduct a class than a professional himself," Miss Jordan remarked,

"Captain Crane, my instructor, is graced with a background and education that lends itself most instrumentally to the training of the entire cadet."

"Offering no credit to a student planning to continue his education in the military as he serves his country," she asserted, "would be as irrational as denying academic credit to any other student enrolled in a course that pertains to his future and career."

South Seas exploration

Her aspirations of becoming an astronaut are definitely not her only unusual plans. In the summer of 1970 a Hong Kong ship-building agency will begin construction of a Brigantine Yankee Clipper. This pirate-styled vessel will be personally designed and custom-built for her.

Miss Jordan plans to cruise the South Sea Islands, the Solomon and Galapagos Islands, and areas that cannot be commonly explored by chartering a ship. She hopes to study the habits and habitat of the head-hunters of the Solomons. She and her crew will familiarize themselves with the exotic creatures and bizarre species populating the Galapagos.

She will use the "windjammer" as a home base from which she will set out on safaris with Ivan Tors, who captures wild African game and casts them in film roles for Twentieth Century Fox and Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer productions.

Smoke-jumper

Before her trip she will be employed by her relatives, the family of the late Senator Robert

F. Kennedy, acting as a family companion for her cousins. She then will go to Montana University to train as a professional smoke-jumper in the Northwest Forest Belt.

After her season of smoke-jumping, the ship will have been completed and she will begin her cruise.

Miss Jordan is pictured in a photograph on this page on her Arabian Palomino. In addition to her own horse she cares for a thoroughbred, the grand-son of "Citation."

Lacrosse team defeats UConn

by Mike Painchaud,
Sports Editor

Coach Junie Carbonneau's Wildcat lacrosse team scored in all periods Wednesday to defeat the Huskies of Connecticut, 7-2.

About sixty lacrosse fans braved the cold wind and wet seats at Cowell Stadium to see the Cats post their third win in seven starts.

UNH opened the scoring at 3:39 of the first period, when Greg Kolinsky took a pass from teammate Jim Kearney in front of the Huskie goal.

The Cats took a 2-0 lead about four minutes later on a goal by Dick Sprague. Connecticut's Pete Lipwin ended the first period scoring at 9:21 with a goal assisted by Dave Yager.

Kearney got things going again for UNH at 2:27 of the second stanza. Kearney took a pass from Steve Freeman in close and rifled a shot past UConn's John Santucci in the goal.

Norm Powers gave New Hampshire a 4-1 lead with three minutes into the second period with an unassisted goal.

Randy McCue got the Huskies on the scoreboard when he picked up an assist from Pete Petrillo and bounced a shot through the legs of Wildcat goalie Bill Hungerford.

New Hampshire pulled away in the final fifteen minute period as UConn began to tire.

John Prible tallied the first of his two goals with an assist from Kearney at 1:50 of the period. Powers got his second goal of the day when he beat Goalie Santucci.

Prible set the final score at 7-2 with two minutes remaining in the game. Prible took a pass over the middle from Powers and put a shot into the right side of the net.

Bill Hungerford had 7 saves in the New Hampshire nets, while Santucci stopped 11 shots for UConn.

Freshmen beat MIT

In freshman action Wednesday, Bill Haubrich's Wildkitten lacrosse squad won its opener with a 9-3 victory over MIT.

Gary Smith tallied four goals to set the pace, but was followed closely by Doug McLeod who scored three. Ron McDonald rounded out the scoring with two goals.

UPHAM

The Wildcats showed well against the national competition despite their inexperience. Joining Dunklee, Daley, and Das-coulias in Colorado were John Kendall and Mark Kingsbury.

When asked what goals he had saved for next year, Upham responded, "We want to get to the Nationals, full fledged, and do a job. We have good skiers coming back and in a couple of years, we hope to be right on top."

In Upham's evaluation of his first season he wrote, "The UNH skiers had a successful season. They reached their goal and just missed their dream. This year's dream becomes next year's goal--To challenge for the National Championship."
