

12-7-2001

MEDIA ADVISORY Is the Taliban a Cult

Erika Mantz

Follow this and additional works at: <https://scholars.unh.edu/news>

Recommended Citation

Mantz, Erika, "MEDIA ADVISORY Is the Taliban a Cult" (2001). UNH Today. 2663.
<https://scholars.unh.edu/news/2663>

This News Article is brought to you for free and open access by the Administrative Offices at University of New Hampshire Scholars' Repository. It has been accepted for inclusion in Media Relations by an authorized administrator of University of New Hampshire Scholars' Repository. For more information, please contact nicole.hentz@unh.edu.

MEDIA ADVISORY Is the Taliban a Cult

MEDIA ADVISORY: Is the Taliban a Cult? UNH professor provides insight on American found fighting for bin Laden

By Erika Mantz

603-862-1567

UNH News Bureau

December 7, 2001

David Frankfurter, associate professor of history and religious studies at the University of New Hampshire, is available to talk with the media about the recent discovery of an American fighting for the Taliban. Professor Frankfurter is an expert on religious sects and charismatic leaders.

Frankfurter says that while he was not surprised John Walker was attracted to Islam, he believes he is an anomaly in fighting for the Taliban.

"Many disgruntled, dissatisfied youth spend years searching for spiritual clarity," he says. "We're more used to people gravitating to Buddhism or Hinduism or into the wilderness, but maybe Islam is bigger than we thought. It is a religion that attracts many African Americans because it is fundamentally antiracist."

Frankfurter compares the Taliban to right-wing antiabortionists. "Like a lot of Christians, many Muslims don't understand how their religion, and its peacefulness, can be used to legitimize violence," he says, "but you can find legitimation for violence in pretty much any religion."

Professor Frankfurter is available for further comment at (603) 862-3015.

Back to UNH News Bureau