

Samantha Reynolds Joins Faculty as Lecturer of Chemistry

Friday, June 19, 2015

Samantha Reynolds will join the UNH Manchester faculty as a Lecturer of Chemistry this fall.

Reynolds developed UNH Manchester's two-semester Organic Chemistry course, which she has taught as an adjunct instructor since 2012. In her role as full-time lecturer at UNH Manchester, she will offer that course in addition to a section of General Chemistry lecture. Over the past three years Reynolds has also instructed organic chemistry laboratories at MCPHS University in Boston.

Reynolds received a B.S. in Chemistry and Biology along with a B.A. in Philosophy/Religious Studies at Winthrop University in South Carolina. She received her PhD from Dartmouth College, where she studied the chemistry of chiral compounds containing phosphorus.
