

Weigh In: Intercampus Conversation Begins November 3

Tuesday, October 27, 2015

Here's a chance to weigh in on what's important to you. Earlier this year, a task force comprising students, faculty and administrators from all three UNH campuses began work on an aspirational project to find out how we — the UNH community — feel about community and how we can build a campus environment where all can thrive. Starting next week, the Task Force on Community will host a series of intercampus dialogues (schedule) that will ask us to consider the question: What can we do together to sustain a robust learning community that is safe, inclusive and equitable for all? The conversations will inform the task force's recommendations, to be published in a report early next year.

What does community mean to you? To prime the pump for the upcoming intercampus conversation, UNH Today asked a handful of campus citizens to weigh in.
