The Syrian Civil War and refugee crisis was the focus of this year's Robbins Memorial Symposium, held at Phillips Exeter Academy.

Melinda Negrón-Gonzales, assistant professor and program coordinator of Politics & Society at UNH Manchester, sat on a panel discussion on February 23.

Negrón-Gonzales centered her talk on the Syrian refugee situation's effects on Turkey, which has become home to more refugees than any country in the world — despite its lack of proper infrastructure and resources to support them.
