MEDIA ADVISORY: UNH Catholic Scholar To Discuss Major New Research On Catholic Attitudes On Gay And Lesbian Issues

March 18, 2011

WASHINGTON, D.C. – Public Religion Research Institute will host a teleconference on Tuesday, March 22, 2011, to release a major new research report of Catholic attitudes on gay and lesbian issues. The new report offers the most comprehensive national portrait to date of Catholic attitudes on gay and lesbian issues, and includes previously unreleased data from PRRI’s monthly Religion and Politics Tracking polls.

Catholic scholar Michele Dillon, professor of sociology at the University of New Hampshire, is among the select group of national experts who will discuss the new research during the teleconference.

Among the report’s key findings:

- Catholics are more supportive of legal recognitions of same-sex relationships than members of any other Christian tradition and Americans overall.
- Defining same-sex marriage as a civil marriage dramatically increases support among Catholics.
- Beyond same-sex marriage, Catholic support for rights for gays and lesbian people is strong and slightly higher than the general public.
- Compared to the general church-going public, Catholics are significantly less likely to hear about the issue of homosexuality from their clergy, but those who do are much more likely to hear negative messages.
- Compared to other religious groups, Catholics are significantly more likely to give their church poor marks on how it is handling the issue of homosexuality.
