Leitzel named as UNH president

By REBECCA MAHONEY
TNH Reporter

After a long and exhausting search, Joan R. Leitzel has received the nomination for the university presidential position.

Leitzel is currently the senior vice chancellor for academic affairs at the University of Nebraska at Lincoln (UNL). She is also a professor of mathematics and statistics at UNL.

The nomination was announced today by Search Committee Chair Stephen Taylor.

"There was unanimous support for [Leitzel] because of her outstanding set of attributes," Taylor said. "She has outstanding records as a scholar and a teacher, a distinguished career as an administrator, and has a broad understanding of the challenges facing public institutions."

Leitzel said she was "delighted" to be nominated.

"I'm really very excited," Leitzel said. "I feel very fortunate to be offered a position at an institution as fine as UNH."

Leitzel said she had a very positive impression of UNH from her on-campus interview during the search.

"I really believe in public higher education, especially one that combines research and education the way UNH does," Leitzel said. "UNH has a strong faculty with deep commitment to students and great potential as a university."

Parking problems probed

Forum calls for action; nothing solved

By ELAINA CONROY
For TNH

The President of UNH and the Board of Trustees need to focus on the parking problem in Durham and start making solutions instead of plans.

This was the central argument debated in the Rockingham Room of the MUB Wednesday in a Community Dialogue series attended by professors, students and commuters. The forum, focusing on "The Walking Campus: Parking Problems at UNH," was a part of Commuter Action Week. Adam Bragg, Chair of the Commuter Affairs Council led the discussion by explaining a "Master Plan" for UNH as a walking campus.

"A committee is being formed by the administration to look into the Master Plan for parking at UNH," Bragg said. "Readjustments need to be made for the future needs of the campus."

Some at the forum viewed the plan as inadequate and many expressed frustration about the proposed mega-lot, which would be located past Channel 11 and allow easy access to Route four.

"This situation is really intolerable for people who commute. What does this plan have to do with parking?" asked professor George Romoser, who Joseph Rodriguez took audience members into the lives of gang members, drug dealers, drug addicts and poverty-stricken children through his photographs and lecture Monday night in the Strafford Room.

Rodriguez is famous for photo projects he did in New York's Spanish Harlem and on the lives of gang members in Los Angeles.

Rodriguez said he chose Spanish Harlem because of a need to understand his Spanish heritage and because he grew up in a tenement himself. He began the project after graduating from the International Center of Photography in New York City.

Community gathers to discuss fate of Lumpy's

Suggests coffee, alcohol bars

By LISA DIXON
For TNH

The television sets placed in Lumpy's throughout the room play to an absent crowd, and there are no faces engaged in animated discussions.

The MUB Board of Governors, therefore, held a forum on Monday night at Lumpy's to try to generate ideas for what to do with the space which was once used as a sports bar, a dance club and a hang-out.

David Shaw, a commuter representative on the MUB Board of Governors attended the meeting to share his ideas.

"The central thing [the MUB administration] needs to do is to get that door open. . . get some coffee on. . . we want a place for [the students] to live — to be here," he said. "We're missing the boat by not having this place open."

Shaw's feelings were echoed by many others at the forum who said they believe the university needs a central location on campus where students can come to relax and feel at home.

According to Tom Lonquist, director of the MUB, Lumpy's was originally designed to be a social gathering place for students. The administration installed a sound system and DJ booth so dances could be held. They also designed the room as a sports bar and a food service establishment during the renovation of the MUB to provide a place for students to hang out.

Many students at the forum reflected on the versatility of the room. One person suggested the addition of a few couches and a acoustic guitar, so that Lumpy's becomes a "Central Perk" coffee house — "Friends" style.

Marianne Fortescue, project coordinator for the Funds for the Improvement of Post-Secondary Education (FIPSE) Grant, promoted the idea of the coffee house. Fortescue had researched a similar idea currently in practice at Syracuse University.

Syracuse houses a coffee bar on campus organized and run entirely by students. The coffee bar has different theme nights with events like poetry readings, folk music, and open microphone nights.

"By extending this coffee bar idea to the UNH campus, we could create the possibility of an after hours crowd away from the bars, away from the alcohol," Fortescue said. "We should really play on this community that has come about since the MUB opened."

At the forum the students and faculty extensively debated the issue of alcohol being served at Lumpy's. Michelle Valimont, chair of the MUB Board of Governors, gave three reasons alcohol was not served in the MUB.

First, the MUB is supposed to create an inclusive environment for all students, she said. By serving alcohol, the majority of the student population under 21 would be excluded from "feeling at home at Lumpy's."

Valimont said that secondly, the liability and insurance costs of serving alcohol is high, and the University would have to obtain a liquor license.

The last reason, she said, was that the government in New Hampshire is committed to a healthy campus and would look down upon alcohol being served to students.

"I don't think that we, as a society, have any healthy coping skills," she said. "A lot of illegal things that happen revolve around alcohol use and abuse; it goes way beyond [Lumpy's]."

Shaw also commented on the idea of the exclusiveness of serving alcohol in Lumpy's.

"It violates the spirit of how we behave," he said. "An element where we're sitting here having a beer and our younger friends will be out their with their faces pressed against the glass."

Shaw said he would not drink alcohol in the MUB until it was available to all students equally—but that was a different debate, he said.

Shaw said the issue went beyond whether or not Lumpy's should serve alcohol. The issue revolved around school spirit and pride.

Another student agreed with Shaw. "I think one thing that's really important is to get some pride and spirit back into the university."

Mark Laliberte, a junior, summed up his feelings about Lumpy's. "You see this room all the time being unoccupied," he said. "The fact that its not being used is such a shame. It's such a classy room. Why can't you use it for dancing or bring food in here?"

Laliberte does not think the function of the room is as important as having it open and available for student use.

"Utilize it in as many ways as possible," he said. "Bring people in here. Make people think 'my place' to boost spirit on campus."

Three women honored by pres. commission

By JONATHAN VAN FLEET
TNH Reporter

Three women were honored this week for the strength of the voices, and for their inspiring words of encouragement to other women on campus.

At their annual awards ceremony on Wednesday, the UNH

President's Commission on the Status of Women honored three outstanding women from the UNH community. Ann Venier, Amy Anderson and Dr. Jae Kang were recognized for their contributions to promoting equity and the advancement of women and for serving as role models to other women in the community.

In order to be considered for an award each person was nominated by a member of the UNH community. According to Jane Stapleton, coordinator of PCSW, this year's letters were heartfelt and moving.

Separate awards are given to a UNH student, a staff member and a faculty member. Williamson Hall resident assistant Anne Venier received the student award. She was described in her nomination letter as being "a scholar, educator, writer, speaker and leader" to all women on campus.

Venier spoke about being a survivor of sexual assault at the last three Take Back the Night rallies and marches.

"Sexual harassment and sexual assault are huge problems on campus," she said. "They are not just problems here; they are everywhere."

Venier uses her openness about her personal experiences to inspire others to come forward. "I may get one or two people who really hear what I have to say," Venier said. "I've had people say to me how much I've affected them. It makes me feel that what I'm doing is worthwhile."

Venier will speak again at the next Take Back the Night march on April 25.

Scott Hall Director Amy Anderson collected the staff award for the evening. Besides being a hall director for the last two years, Anderson is a SHARPP advocate and a member of the Women's Issues Resource Center.

In the nomination letter written by two students, Anderson was

Swett sets sights on Smith's Senate seat in '96

By RACHAEL O'NEIL
Staff Reporter

Former Rep. Dick Swett, D-N.H., assured a crowd of students in Lumpy's Tuesday evening that he had heard every joke ever made about his name. After the snickering subsided, he went on to discuss more serious issues.

Swett said the real issues of this campaign are jobs and economics.

College graduates are often waiting tables after they graduate rather than taking jobs they were trained for, he said. He said this was not the case when he graduated from Yale.

This country needs to "renew" the opportunities, he added.

Swett was elected to the House in 1990. He lost to the republican candidate this term over the issue of gun control when he voted for the assault weapons ban, he said. He is now running for a Senate seat.

Swett said his campaign is based on three Rs: "Renew," "Responsibility" and "Respect." It is "not aimed at the poor or the rich, just at the smack-dab middle."

An architect by trade, Swett was elected to Congress without holding prior political office. He was the first democrat from New Hampshire in 78 years.

During his term he authored and sponsored the Congressional Accountability Act that makes members of Congress follow the same rules they impose on the citizens they serve.

"Don't aspire to public office, aspire to public service," Swett said to the crowd, who greeted his statement with applause.

One thing Swett said needs to be done in government is to bring the bureaucracy back to the point where it pleases the general public.

He said one step toward this would be a change in the way bids are contracted by the government. He said the government needs to avoid being so "convoluted" and model their system on the way the private sector operates.

He used as an example a computer purchased for his office. Because of the bureaucracy the purchase took longer and cost about $1,000 more than if he went out and bought one with the same warranties at a private retail store, he said.

The process was created for the bureaucracy to justify their own existence, he said.

"Faith in government is at a very low point. Trust in government is at a very low point. It is not corrected through legislation," he said.

He continued by saying the way to correct this is through how people do their jobs. He said constituents need to hold their congress person "responsible."

Education is one of Swett's primary concerns. He said it is the key to a brighter future. He said he was involved with education legislation while in office, although he was not on a committee. He said he was the only representative cited on the education bill.

In discussing this issue Swett made reference to his education in New Hampshire public schools. No other congress person from New Hampshire has gone all the way through grades K-12 in the state, he said. He added that he thought this was an important aspect in his ability to understand the residents of New Hampshire.

New Hampshire's selected leaders do not share his background, Swett said. He added that they were educated in private schools or moved to the state after their educations were complete.

UNH students workd to aid Chernobyl victims

Ten years later, clothes, food, medicine sent to homeless survivors

By KIM BOGLARSKI
For TNH

A decade later, the victims of the Chernobyl disaster are still suffering.

The Student Environmental Action Coalition (SEAC) and the Chernobyl +10 project and are joining a worldwide relief effort and educational campaign to help the survivors.

April 26 marks the 10-year anniversary of the nuclear power plant accident which spewed deadly radiation throughout Russia and the world.

According to the national Information and Resource Service for Chernobyl, (NIRS), at least nine million people were affected by the global catastrophe and many are still suffering today.

"We are seeing, ten years later, a huge increase in the number of cancers and childhood illnesses in the Chernobyl area," said Chris Schadler, a professor of natural resources at UNH.

A study conducted by NIRS indicated that thyroid cancer rates have been growing steadily since the incident and now are now the highest in history in children. Birth rates have also fallen by 50 percent from the normal yearly rate.

"The more insidious aspect of the radiation occurs in women and children because both women and children have cells that reproduce, women in their menstrual cycles and children in their bodies. When you have a contaminate like that, the contaminate can take off," Schadler said.

Not only have the rates of cancer increased, but the United Nations trust fund for Chernobyl victims is "virtually empty" according to NIRS, and the World Health organization estimates it needs $200 million over the next 20 years for adequate support and relief.

Environmental groups are coming together worldwide to aid the victims and educate the public about the dangers of nuclear power.

At UNH, the Chernobyl +10 project is working with local environmental organizations such as Clean Water Action, C-10 (Citizens Within a Ten-Mile Radius) and the Great Bay Greens.

Together their efforts are aiding the sick, homeless and impoverished victims of Chernobyl with food, clothing and medicine.

Chernobyl +10 will be holding a drive to collect canned goods, baby food, vitamins and non-prescription medicine like aspirin.

Boxes will be distributed throughout campus and the town of Durham in residence halls and through local merchants.

All goods will be collected and sent by NIRS to a national warehouse in New Jersey where they will be shipped to the Ukraine and Belarus in Russia.

Junior Julie Rosenbach, the organizer of the Chernobyl +10 project at UNH, said she predicts no problems with the aid getting to Russia because the organization will not be collecting money and the aid is purely volunteer.

As a Russian studies major and environmental conservation minor, Rosenbach began the project after becoming deeply alarmed over growing devastation from Chernobyl in Russia. She has formed a group which currently has 10 regular members who meet on a weekly basis.

With the slogan "No More Chernobyls", Rosenbach said her vision is to "make people aware" of the disaster in Russia and the potential dangers of nuclear power.

"We don't want to force [information] on students, we want to make it available to them," Rosenbach said.

Informational bulletin boards will be found in the MUB, in residence halls and on flyers throughout campus. They also plan to have an information table on Earth Day at UNH on April 22.

The group wants to provide students with information that will help them understand that Chernobyl is not an isolated incident.

"We need to remind people of what nuclear power has done and what it could still do," said sophomore Betsy Blaisdell, a SEAC member working on the project.

"For many people Chernobyl is really far away, but people need to realize that it is not an isolated incident; it could happen in the states," said Rosenbach. "Having another Chernobyl is not unheard of."

A map detailing the nuclear reactor sites which have potential for disaster similar to Chernobyl is part of the educational material she has passed out to students.

"On the East Coast you cannot go 100 miles without being in the radius of a nuclear power plant," Schadler said.

One of these plants is the Seabrook nuclear power plant in Seabrook, N.H. — less than a half an hour away from campus.

asset to the university.

"I can't imagine anyone having such an impact on the university as Joan has," Griesen said. "She's a person who's very sensitive to concerns. She's inclusive in her management style and goes out of her way to be involved with students. I believe that people trust Joan, that they enjoy her sense of humor and that she's an effective spokesperson."

"The campus has come to love Joan," he added. "It's difficult to let her go. She's an excellent find for New Hampshire."

Tiffany Houston, the only student representative on the search committee, said she was impressed by Leitzel.

"She's going to be a great leader for the 21st century," Houston said.

Taylor also said he has high hopes for Leitzel and what she will offer UNH.

"Leitzel will bring to campus a strong commitment to teaching and to scholarships," Taylor said. "She will be an inspiration to faculty, a strong advocate to students and [she] has a deep concern for providing high-quality administration."

Search committee member Ron Clark agreed with Taylor.

"She offered the overwhelmingly right responses to issues," Clark said. "She understands the problems facing higher education; her direct style exudes confidence both on and off campus."

Leitzel said she has mixed feelings about her UNL departure.

"We've been very happy [in Nebraska] here, but we're also very excited to be coming to New Hampshire," Leitzel said. Current UNH interim president Walter Peterson said he was "very pleased" with Leitzel's nomination.

"I liked her immensely," Peterson said enthusiastically. "She had a good sense of the university's problems. She has a strong academic background, and will relate to faculty, while her open manner and obvious sincerity and concern will reach students."

Cynthia Gannett, the UNH-Manchester representative, said Leitzel's personality came through in her interview.

"She had a particular kind of presence, dignified and engaged. She was thoughtful, reflective, candid and graceful, Gannett said. "She'll make a wonderful president."

Leitzel said she is expecting the administration will help her adjust to her new position.

"I am lucky that I will have the benefit of a strong administrative group at UNH. I'll depend on them," Leitzel said.

University System of New Hampshire Trustee and Search Committee Member Sherilyn B. Young said she was happy with the committee's choice.

"I'm thrilled that we offered [Leitzel] the position and she has accepted. There was very positive support and reaction to her nomination, and I'm delighted to see another woman in the university system," Young said.

Leitzel has been at the University of Nebraska at Lincoln since 1992. From 1990-1992, she worked as division director of materials development, research and informational science education at the National Science Foundation. From 1985-1990, she was associate provost at Ohio State University. She is also the author of several books and numerous articles and is listed in American Men and Women of Science.

Shantell Hurtgen, the student body president at UNL, said she feels personally honored to have worked with Leitzel.

"She is very sincere and a pleasure to work with. She's a go-getter with a positive attitude that shines through," Hurtgen said. "She's always made herself available to students and student concerns. She will truly be missed."

The long road to a nomination

By REBECCA MAHONEY
TNH Reporter

Dr. Joan Leitzel's nomination as UNH president comes after an extensive search process. According to Stephen Taylor, chair of the 16-member search committee, the original applicant pool was 110 candidates.

Each resume was carefully evaluated, and the committee then narrowed the pool to four candidates. These four candidates had personal interviews with committee members, then made a two-day campus visit where they met with students, faculty and staff.

Following the last of the candidate's visits, the committee met to unanimously nominate Leitzel to the chancellor.

According to Taylor, Leitzel was nominated to Chancellor William Farrell. Farrell has approved the nomination, and will recommend Leitzel's appointment to the board of trustees. The trustees are holding a special meeting April 9 to approve Leitzel for the presidential position.

"I don't anticipate any problems with the board accepting Leitzel," Taylor said. "Leitzel was a unanimous decision made by the search committee."

"I was very impressed with the way the search went," he added. "The four final candidates were outstanding."

Tiffany Houston, student representative to the search committee, also said the search was successful.

"We worked well together, and we all got along. I think everyone's pretty happy with the result."

Houston said her role was to keep students' interest in mind.

"Student opinion played a big part," Houston said. "I went to [student] senate meetings and received input from Jared [Sexton] and Gina [Dearani]. Some students sat in on the dinner when the candidates visited. As student representative, I had to go back to the committee and relate what students wanted."

USNH Trustee Sherilyn Young said she was delighted to participate in the search.

"The committee really had a good sense of the issues at hand," Young said. "It was rewarding to have such different constituents on the committee. It gave us different perspectives on what mattered in evaluating the candidates. We were able to have meaningful dialogue in a rewarding, respectful way."

Although two of the four final candidates resigned from the candidacy, Taylor insisted that it did not affect the committee's decision.

"The search never went from four [candidates] to two to one," Taylor said. "It went from four to one, with Leitzel being the committee's first choice."

Cynthia Gannett, UNH-Manchester representative to the search committee, said she was pleased with the way the search concluded.

"It was a fine search and we have a great candidate," Gannett said. "All four candidates were remarkably strong; the committee had a difficult choice to make, but Joan Leitzel will make a wonderful president."

Parents resume search for N.E. College student

HENNIKER—The parents of a missing New England College student have resumed their search in the woods of Henniker.

P.J. Steverman's parents have hired the use of trained search dogs to help locate their son, who disappeared in November. Steverman was last seen leaving a party in a remote part of the Henniker woods.

Authorities, friends and family members have searched extensively since Steverman's disappearance, but have found no trace of Steverman. Since the snow has melted, searchers believe they have a better chance of finding his remains.

Lawyers want to have porn charges dropped

DOVER—Lawyers defending former Massachusetts prep school teacher David Cobb on child pornography charges have filed additional motions to have the charges dropped.

They argue that hundreds of the photos Cobb was accused of having do not meet the criteria for child pornography because they are collages.

At a hearing last week, Farmington police officer Timothy Brown testified that Cobb had photos of adults with the faces of children superimposed on them.

County Attorney Lincoln Soldati said it should be up to jurors to decide whether the photos fit the definition of child pornography.

In August, Cobb was arrested in Farmington while walking downtown with a boy. He has been indicted on one count of attempted felonious sexual assault in connection with an incident involving another boy.

Cobb is free on $200,000 bail, and was fired in September from Phillips Academy in Andover, Mass.

N.H. unemployment rate is up in February

CONCORD—A report shows that New Hampshire's unemployment rate rose slightly in February.

Preliminary figures released by the Employment Security Office show the unemployment rate for the month was 3.5 percent, up two-tenths of a point from January. The figures take into account seasonal changes in employment, such as Christmas hiring by retailers.

Without seasonal adjustments, the rate for February was 4.1 percent.

Unemployment dropped nationwide in February, although New Hampshire's rate remains lower than the national average.

N.H. man sentenced for shooting girlfriend's cat

KEENE—A New Hampshire man will spend the next nine months in jail for pleading guilty to torturing a cat.

Jason Whiting was sentenced Tuesday to 12 months in jail, with credit given for 78 days spent in jail awaiting trial.

A judge placed Whiting on probation for two years after he gets out of jail.

Whiting must also perform 104 hours of community service, tour the state prison and pay restitution to the humane society that had to destroy the cat he abused.

Whiting admitted he shot one of his ex-girlfriend's cats several times with a BB gun last March. The woman said Whiting was angry because he had been bitten by another one of her cats.

Businesses lose money in currency confusion

KEENE—Police said at least three Keene businesses have been conned into trading American dollars for French francs.

At each business, a man who signed his name as George Whynot cashed American Express travelers checks made out for 200 francs for 200 American dollars.

Although a few businesses noticed that checks were made out for francs, not dollars, three didn't notice, and gave the man five times what the checks are worth.

Two hundred francs are worth about $40.

Police said similar incidents have been reported in Hillsboro.

Driver who didn't have license is sentenced to jail

EXETER—The father of a three-year-old boy injured in a car accident said he's somewhat satisfied that the Rye man who ran over his child will spend four months in jail.

Steve McMenimen said he feels "a morsel of satisfaction" that Donald DeFazio will go to jail for his role in a traffic accident that left McMenimen's three-year-old son seriously injured.

Defazio struck the boy last June in an accident that also injured the boy's younger brother and sister. His license was suspended more than a year before the accident for failing to complete a court-ordered alcohol abuse program.

Defazio was sentenced Wednesday on assault charges. Police said he was not drinking at the time he hit the children.

Rabin's assassin found guilty, sentenced to life

TEL AVIV, Israel — Yigal Amir was sentenced to life in prison Wednesday for the murder of former Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin.

An Israeli court convicted Amir, 25, of premeditated murder, rejecting Amir's claim that he had meant only to paralyze Rabin. The three-judge panel also convicted Amir of aggravated assault for wounding Rabin's bodyguard, Yoram Rubin, during the Nov. 4, 1995, attack.

Amir, a former law student and extremely religious Jew, showed little remorse throughout Wednesday's session. Dressed in a gray sweatshirt, Amir yawned occasionally, stared blankly at the courtroom audience or smiled to himself. When asked to make his final statement, Amir stood and said, "Everything I did, I did for God, for the Torah of Israel, the people of Israel and the land of Israel. He summed up the three-month court proceedings as a "show trial."

The court handed down the mandatory life sentence for the murder conviction and a six-year term for injuring the bodyguard. The judges said the sentences are to be served consecutively, unanimously rejecting a defense request that the sentences run concurrently. Such a sentence would have made Amir eligible for a potential presidential pardon.

Amir will have 45 days to appeal to Israel's Supreme Court, Levy said. Defense attorney Samuel Flishman said he would appeal. Flishman had sought a manslaughter conviction, arguing that Amir was so obsessed with removing Rabin from office that he was not in full control when he shot the prime minister. Manslaughter carries a 20-year sentence. Judge Levy rejected the claim. Citing a court-ordered psychiatric evaluation of the defendant, Levy said Amir was neither mentally ill nor emotionally disturbed.

Colombian president's aides being investigated

BOGOTA, Colombia — Colombian President Ernesto Samper's claims that he didn't know that drug cartel money helped finance his 1994 election campaign are now being overshadowed by charges that the commission investigating him lacks credibility.

Samper's lawyer Luis Guillermo Nieto suggested that the president's campaign aides are the real culprits and that it was they who solicited drug money, then pocketed it for their own benefit.

But the Accusations Commission, which took Samper's testimony behind closed doors Tuesday, is being as seriously questioned as the president himself.

Many believe that the whole process is a farce, because the only body empowered to investigate the president is peppered with Samper loyalists. Many of the 15-member panel belong to Samper's Liberal Party, and some are being investigated for corruption themselves.

Even one of the commission's own members has questioned the investigation's direction. Rep. Francisco Canosa submitted a list of 50 questions to Mogollan that he says Samper never addressed in his first round of testimony.

Samper, who has hinted that he may resign because of the political crisis, is also being judged by the Colombian people. According to polls, most Colombians are skeptical about the outcome of the investigation.

The details of the probe are supposed to be made public under a new law lifting the confidentiality of such proceedings. But political expert Hernando Gomez has his doubts that it will happen.

A statement by U.S. Ambassador Miles Frechette that the probe lacks credibility has helped bring Colombia's political cauldron to a boil. Frechette's remark prompted a furious response from the government that his meddling in Colombia's affairs is unacceptable.

Three of Samper's ministers, including the foreign minister, will be questioned this week before Colombia's supreme court amid charges that they too covered up the campaign drug money.

Britain's cow disease causes fear world wide

LONDON — British Airways has joined the list of organizations which says it will not serve British beef.

British Airways announced that it will not serve beef produced from the cows of Britain in fear that it will spread the "mad" cows' disease.

Thailand joined the list of more than 20 countries banning imports of British beef. One of them, France, announced it will start stamping "French Meat" on beef sold there.

In Britain, consumers rejected beef in growing numbers, confused about the risks. But Health Secretary Stephen Dorrell insisted Tuesday it remains "a safe product" and claimed Britain's critics have got it wrong.

Dorrell told Parliament on Monday that beef was as safe for children as it is for adults, that the risk was "extremely small" and that no new action was needed to root the disease out of British herds.

But the National Farmers Union urged the government to destroy older cows to prevent them entering the food chain.

The Consumers' Association — one of Britain's most influential independent watchdogs — has advised consumers to stop eating beef altogether.

Government scientists were traveling to Brussels Tuesday to try to persuade the European Union to lift its ban on exports of British beef.

European Commission President Jacques Santer agreed Monday night to Prime Minister John Major's request for the issue to be reconsidered. The ban covers meat and live animals as well as medicinal and pharmaceutical products made from cattle, but excludes milk and dairy products.

In the Irish Republic, extra police were drafted Tuesday to patrol the border with Northern Ireland to prevent the province's farmers bringing their animals to southern markets.

Russia receives billions in international funds

WASHINGTON—The International Monetary Fund agreed Tuesday to offer Russia new loans worth $10.2 billion over the next three years, nearly doubling what Russia owes the organization.

The total is the second-highest the fund has offered in its 52-year history, exceeded only by a package of $17.8 billion in loans to Mexico last year.

Russia already owes the fund $10.8 billion. The World Bank calculated Russia's total debt last year at $115.9 billion. It estimates that this year Russia is due to pay $6.9 billion in principal and interest on what it owes.

The head of Russia's Central Bank Sergei Dubinin had said earlier in the day that the country met all the conditions required for the International Monetary Fund loan. Russia has abolished most export duties, taking steps to boost budget revenues and keeping fiscal and monetary policy within IMF — set limits in the first quarter. The new loan money will go to meet some of Russia's debt obligations and to pay for imports.

On Monday, Russia agreed to free trade by dropping plans to restrict imports of alcoholic drinks and to ban imports of American frozen chicken.

The loan money is paid out periodically and disbursements are often suspended if conditions are not met.

Approval came from the fund's 24-member board of executive directors, representing the 180-member governments including the United States — the fund's biggest contributor — and Russia itself.

Under the deal with the IMF, Russia pledges to continue tough anti-inflation policies, extending reforms in such areas as agriculture, foreign trade and privatization.

Bosnian citizens begin task of finding the lost

HADZICI, Bosnia-Herzegovina — Now that there is a fragile peace in Bosnia-Herzegovina, residents can turn their attention from the day-to-day struggle for survival to a difficult search for missing people.

It is a gruesome and overwhelming task in Hadzici, where shifting earth led investigators to an unmarked grave just outside the city. Bone fragments litter the area, including a skull with a bullet hole. Two people were believed to be buried in the grave, but their identities are as yet unknown. Personal items, such as shoes, may provide the only means of identification.

Investigators are depending largely on eyewitness testimony to figure out just what happened to the thousands missing in Bosnia. One such eyewitness is Hasnija Milosevic, a Muslim woman married to a Serb, who stayed in Hadzici. She claims the apartment next door to hers was used by Bosnian Serbs as a police station. Many were murdered there and then trucked away, she said.

Some of the dead are believed to have ended up in the neighboring village of Grivici. Bosnian Serbs completely destroyed the town, and the search for graves must wait until the area is cleared of land mines. Already, however, former residents are coming back to the destroyed town with stories of their own.

According to civilians coming back, about 185 people are missing from the Hadzici area alone. Across the country, the number climbs. In the end, international investigators estimate, the number of missing persons will total over 10,000.

Taiwan and China to begin negotiations soon

TAIPEI, Taiwan — Taiwan called for talks with China on trade and reunification Tuesday, but Beijing demanded the island give up its quest for a United Nations seat and political ties with other countries.

Adding to indications military tensions were easing after the end of Chinese war games. The United States Navy announced the withdrawal of one of two aircraft carriers sent to patrol near Taiwan. But China and Taiwan's rival Nationalist government showed no progress toward resolving their conflict over the island's attempt to raise its international profile.

The war games ended on schedule Monday after 18 days, and Taiwan made a qualified offer to grant Chinese demands for direct trade and phone links.

Premier Lien Chan said Taiwan is ready to restart talks on trade, economic cooperation and eventual reunification. But he didn't offer any compromise on Taiwanese President Lee Teng-hui's campaign for more diplomatic recognition of his isolated government.

The Nationalists banned direct contact with China in 1949, when they lost the mainland to the Communists.

China's government contends Lee has given up on their shared goal of reunification and says it will use force against Taiwan if it declares independence.

Chinese Foreign Ministry Spokesman Shen Guofang said China already has offered to speed up creation of direct trade, air and communications links. But he said Taiwan hasn't responded favorably. Although Shen was quoted over the weekend as saying the "door to negotiations is still open," on Tuesday he blamed Taiwan and its foreign weapons suppliers for closing it.

For the first time in nearly three weeks, shipping in the Taiwan Strait was normal Tuesday, and fishing boats and freighters returned to areas where the war games were held.

has been teaching in the political science department for 25 years. "Nobody has made this problem a priority. Unless plans include provisions and meet needs, they don't mean much to me, and I don't trust them."

Romoser also said there is no conflict of interest between students and the faculty in this problem. They are both in the same position and both anxious for a solution, he said.

Some commuter students said they travel over an hour to get to campus and then have to spend more time searching for a parking space. One commuting student expressed his frustration.

"I have no problem with a walking campus," said Larry Dobson, a full-time student at UNH, "just don't make it such a hassle for me to get on campus."

Many of the participants in the forum felt that building a parking garage on one of the lots on campus would be an effective solution to the growing problem.

"If a parking garage were to be constructed, it would most likely be in A-lot because of the proximity to the Whittemore Center," Bragg said.

One student expressed negative feelings about the parking garage solution.

"Building a parking garage could account for more pollution and congestion on campus," said Jon Royce, the Coordinator for Keep Coast on Campus.

Romoser, who has seen the parking situation deteriorate over the years, expressed the need for action from the executive powers.

"Who is the parking czar?" asked Romoser with frustration. "Parking is not just parking. It is also a kind of civility. It can create attitude problems. After 25 minutes of searching for a parking space, I know I get annoyed."

One commuting student said he was interested in joining the commuter committee.

"I've seen a bad parking situation at a bigger campus, but at least they placed focus on the commuters, and no one seems to here," said Kris Bellerose, a UNH commuter. "It's a major concern of mine, and I'm sure it's a major concern for other students."

"I felt that no one was really taking time to look at this place," he said, adding that the media only serves to report the crimes that take place in the area.

The first slide Rodriguez showed was of a wall of artfully crafted graffiti on an early Sunday morning.

"Spanish Harlem is not a place where you can just walk around with a camera all day," he said with a chuckle.

Rodriguez said he used to go to Spanish Harlem early Sunday mornings when he was first starting out. After he got more comfortable with the area, he began spending time with families. He saw drug deals and fathers shooting up in front of their children, but also got "a strong sense of family."

"If I am going to show the dark side of anything, I want to show the warmth," Rodriguez said. His pictures portrayed such things as weddings, funerals, and the births of children.

The Spanish Harlem book project took five years to produce and another five to get published, according to Rodriguez.

"Good things do take time," he said.

After Spanish Harlem, Rodriguez went to East and West Los Angeles to photograph and report on life after the 1990 riots. As research for the project, Rodriguez listened to the hip-hop music most of the 100,000 gang members of the city listen to.

As in the Spanish Harlem project, Rodriguez used his pictures to tell a story about the lives of the people in which he came in contact. Many of the photos acted as a sad reminder of Rodriguez's experience.

"This person has since passed on," Rodriguez said

Rachael O'Neil/Staff Photographer

throughout the slide show, though he also pointed out many gang members who have since straightened themselves out. He added most gang members who get "straightened out" either die, get a job or have children.

Rodriguez said many gang members who settle down move away from the gangs for the sake of their children.

"Children are the hope," Rodriguez said.

Although Los Angeles residents were more hesitant to let Rodriguez and his camera into their lives than those in Spanish Harlem, he got to know them over the course of the project. Rodriguez said he even began going out at night with the gang members.

Rodriguez said one member told him: "I love my barrio [neighborhood] more than I have been loved."

During the gang project Rodriguez took a break and went to Transylvania, Romania to photograph the people who were adjusting to a life after communism.

"I really started going a little crazy," he said about the gang project.

In Romania, Rodriguez found a much different atmosphere.

"It's a different kind of struggle," he said. "It's more about culture."

Sophomore Jamie Tosi went to the presentation because he hopes to transfer to the University of Southern California in the heart of South Central Los Angeles.

"I wanted to get a sense of what it is really all about on the streets," he said.

Tosi said he is having second thoughts about attending USC after seeing Rodriguez's photos, though he said he was impressed by Rodriguez.

"I liked the documentary style of it," he said.

Rodriguez was the first speaker in MUSO's Arts and Lecture Series this semester. The presentation was co-sponsored by ADELA, the campus Latino group.

THE WEEK IN GREEK

A weekly column of fraternity and sorority events

The New Hampshire news staff covers Greek events which involve the entire Greek community or which are open to the UNH community. All submissions to the Week in Greek are written by individual Greek system members. Submissions are due Tuesday at 5 p.m. Submissions without the author's name and house will not be published.

Sigma Nu helps A Friend's Place

The candidates for brotherhood of Sigma Nu volunteered their time and energy in an attempt to assist those less fortunate of the Dover area. A Friend's Place is a shelter in Dover which gives free meals, assists in job placement and offers storage of personal possessions while providing a place to sleep for the homeless. The barn which A Friend's Place stores their resident's possessions and donated goods had fallen into severe disarray, and so the Sigma Nu volunteers cleansed and reorganized the building. Upon completion of the task, the manager remarked that the barn never looked so good.

hailed for her spirited participation in Take Back the Night. According to the letter, as other women's voices were being drowned out and silenced by the jeers and shouts coming from some of the fraternity houses on Madbury Road, Anderson's voice grew louder and stronger.

"I was willing to use my voice to help [women students] find theirs," she said. "I feel it's all about finding the courage to use their voice. My role is to turn up the volume."

Anderson said she feels strongly about women finding their voices at UNH. "College is a period of developing one's voice," she said. Venier agrees.

"It's important for women to speak out not just in academics but in groups and in politics," Venier said. "A woman finding her voice has the confidence to assert herself in all areas of her life."

Assertive is definitely one word that can be used to describe Dr. Kang, the recipient of the faculty award. Dr. Kang has been at the university for five years and she was the first women faculty member in the department of Medical Laboratory Science. For this reason she has been an inspiration and role model to many of her students.

Despite her achievements, Dr. Kang is very humble about her contribution advancement of women at UNH.

"I'm very overwhelmed right now," she said. "There's no way that I can ever do enough to meet the expectations that come with this award."

The awards ceremony held in the MUB's Entertainment Center concluded the events scheduled for Women's Herstory month. This year's theme for the month was "Value the Vote," the celebration of 75 years of women voting.

According to Stapleton, in 1920 when the 19th Amendment to the Constitution was passed allowing women to vote, 23 percent of the UNH student body and 11 percent of the faculty were women. Today, the statistics have improved, but they still haven't reached a balanced level. Currently 56.5 percent of the student body and 38 percent of the faculty are women.

The three women agreed that there is more to be done for women.

"I always feel that I never have enough time to do more," Dr. Kang said. "I'm a little bit more established now. I've always wanted to do more."

"I would like to see more women in positions of power on this campus," Anderson said. "It makes me happy to see a woman running for student body president with a man as her vice president."

Venier stressed the need for people to speak out on campus and be able to feel that what they have to say is worth while. "It's easy to get lost, especially if you're not encouraged to say what you think," she said.

Venier, Anderson and Kang are willing to accept the position of role model for other women.

Venier feels she has the potential to be a role model as well. "If someone could have heard me speak and know that they can do the same or if I could help someone find their voice in any way," she said, "then I would feel like a role model."

Dr. Kang said she tries to be a role model for her students.

"I always tell my students to do their very best. Do not be afraid of challenge or hard work. Very often people get discouraged, but if you try your best, then you can be proud. If you always try your best," she said, "the awards come later."

SWETT continued from page 3

"To me that is a pretty severe judgment on what we are considering — the places where leaders are coming from," Swett said.

Many members of the audience showed support for Swett's past actions, even calling him "brave." However, they did not shy away from asking him some tough questions about issues they feel will be relevant to them as they graduate from college.

The question-and-answer session allowed audience members to design the speech according to their priorities.

Topics included the environment, immigration, national defense, taxes, welfare and education.

The College Democrats brought Swett to the MUB to inform student about the options they have, senior Sara Appleyard said.

Appleyard said they hoped to bring the other Democratic candidate to campus and hoped other groups on campus will bring the other candidates.

The audience was a mix of supporters and interested listeners.

Graduate student Neal Barrett said he came to show his support for Swett. He said he had been involved in Swett's campaign for the 2nd Congressional District when he was in office. It was a natural extension to come tonight and to continue supporting him, he said.

Freshman Brendan Sevin said he has known of Dick Swett for awhile. Sevin, a graduate of Laconia High School, Swett's alma mater, said he has heard Swett speak many times including his eighth-grade graduation and Boys' State. Although he said he wasn't a committed supporter, he wanted to see what Swett had to say.

Junior Ed Prisby said he is going to support Swett throughout the election year.

"He took a stand on some very progressive issues and paid the price politically," Prisby said. "I'm thrilled he's coming back."

Jennifer Mitchell, senior, said she supports Swett as well for his bravery.

"He is one of the most courageous politicians we've seen in a long time. He's willing to take a stand even if it's controversial and that's refreshing," Mitchell said.

Where does all my money go?

A brief explanation of your Student Activity Fee

Each undergraduate student pays a mandatory $65 Student Activity Fee just like they would pay a Health Services or Campus Recreation Fee. The money collected from the Student Activity Fee goes to fund organizations such as the Student Senate which provides the legal services of John Murphy, to organizations like SCOPE which bring big name entertainers like Alanis Morissette and Dave Matthews and to the Diversity Support Coalition which promotes understanding and awareness of marginalized groups on campus. The major difference between all the other mandatory fees and the SAF is that the Student Activity Fee is run completely by undergraduate students.

Back in November, any organization that wanted to get SAF funding for the next fiscal year had to submit a concept, or a mission statement to the Student Activity Fee Council (SAFC). This mission statement was debated, amended and discussed by the council and the organization to insure that the students were getting the best investment of their $65. Those organizations whose concept passed were then invited to submit a budget in the beginning of January. Since the middle of February, SAFC has held special budget hearing meetings in which organizations defended their requests to the council. At the beginning of the process, it looked as if the fee was going to be raised by close to $20 but through numerous cuts and revamping of budgets, we were able to keep the fee at $65 for the fourth straight year.

This is a brief overview and explanation of a very complex operation. If you have any questions, comments or concerns, feel free to contact me at any time and I'd be more than happy to discuss them with you.

New pres. has work cut out for her

The era of the interim is drawing to a close.

With the nomination of Joan Leitzel as the new UNH president, people will actually no longer sit around waiting for somebody to tell them what to do. Provided the trustees ratify her nomination, we will finally have a top official who doesn't have one foot constantly out the door.

It's about time.

Leitzel has a daunting task ahead of her — a budget that's a mess, faculty who want more money with little around to give, an apathetic and disenfranchised student body and a whole bunch of nice new buildings.

The search committee deserves congratulations for its choice. Leitzel has a realistic view of where the university is and has the talent and knowledge to find some direction for this long-drifting ship. To her credit, she didn't use the ambiguous language of presidents past, and she wasn't egotistical.

Leitzel, who has worked at Ohio State University, Oberlin, and Univer. of Nebraska at Lincoln, said yesterday she is excited to start work at UNH, and that, yes, she has done quite a bit of research into the problems that plague our campus.

Leitzel listened to student concerns and offered specific examples from her experience at other universities to relate her views, not hot air about feeling empowered, warm and fuzzy. Instead of treating us like we're on Mister Rogers' Neighborhood, Leitzel treated students like real-life adults who have experiences and opinions that should draw respect.

Hopefully, she will follow through and make real change, not pacify students and smile as the administration ignores us.

Putting UNH back into gear won't be easy, though. Hopelessness permeates all levels — from the second floor of Stoke to the second floor of Thompson Hall. People have just given up on making this place better, instead everybody has copped out for a cheap round of the blame-game.

However, just because everybody has been willing to sit down and talk about the problems, it doesn't necessarily mean things are better. Talk in Durham is like a bottle of Boone's wine, it's cheap and tastes good at first, but you wind up feeling pretty bad after you drink it.

There must be more than cheap talk in resolving issues, Leitzel must be quick to take a stand and follow through on a course of action. Sitting around talking about things just won't cut it.

Forming committees and having constructive dialogue to facilitate change is doing nothing. Get the facts, put them on the table and do something. Yes, sometimes this requires thought, but we shouldn't be spending years creating half-assed "solutions" to problems (the megalot, for example).

There may have to be major changes made. Perhaps some "restructuring" of current administration is in order.

Do whatever it takes, Dr. Leitzel. UNH needs you. Good luck!

Jumping into the ring

By Stephen Williams

It's election time again and everyone is flocking under their perspective banner as they support their candidate. If you haven't made up your mind whom you should vote for, I can assure you that others will want to do it for you.

There are several platforms that certain candidates have taken, from the funding of COAST to increased diversity awareness. It's not hard to see this election reflect many of the country's concerns as Election '96 approaches.

Several major topics that I hope will be discussed with more clarity are the subjects of alcohol use and increased diversity on campus.

Discussing alcohol is a complex subject to talk about because there are so many perspectives on the topic. I was reading a certain candidate's idea of how to deal with the problem of alcohol abuse.

This candidate felt that the key is to stop casting alcohol in a negative perception or words to that effect. I can think of few times when drinking can be cast in a positive light. Sure, it helps you to relax and sometimes it's just appropriate for the occasion.

However, what concerns me is that alcohol is consumed more than it ought to be. For example, the "trend drinking" in most colleges in the United States has gone up. What's even more disturbing is that students at the University of New Hampshire consume more than twice the national average.

The solution is not in making alcohol seem more attractive to incoming freshman or students in general. When I here some of my friends brag about binge drinking, I can't help to feel sorry for them.

That they feel the need to drink to have a good time tells me that there is something missing in their lives that somehow alcohol temporarily makes them forget. The solution is teaching to drink responsibly.

In other words, drinking to relax — not to forget, that is if you feel you must drink at all. Know when to say when.

I feel that there has been a conscious effort by the university and students to increase diversity awareness and I applaud this. While I realize that this is always going to be a predominantly white community I would still like to one day see the number of minority students increase to at least 12 percent.

I say this because it's important for students to be aware of other types.

Stephen Williams is a reporter for The New Hampshire.

Beer in MUB a must

To the Editor:

I am writing to respond to your editorial on "What to do with Lumpy's..." Well, I think it should definitely have beers on tap all day! I'm serious. There is so much potential for that spot. Drinking and playing pool, pingpong, etc. is so fun. We can walk to our rooms (some of us anyway). They can have a Durham cop there, too, if the fear of losing control or selling to minors is a problem. They can have live music, comedy, karaoke, dancing, games. Please, Lumpy's — serve alcohol! There really is no other solution.

Buses needs UNH funding

To the Editor:

As a poor UNH student I am extremely grieved by the university's decision to not fund the COAST bus in the coming school year. The COAST bus is one of the best public transit systems in the Northeast and for many years has been a great asset to those students living on and off campus. I realize that the university's decision not to fund the COAST bus does not mean that it will not exist anymore. Instead it will mean that there will be many changes in routes and fewer buses running because of the large amount of money that will no longer be available to COAST. These consequences will cause great grief to the UNH student body as well as people who live in the region.

Although UNH is a rather large school, it is located in a very small town with very little to entertain students in their free time. Even with the new addition of the MUB and the two movie theaters there, this is insufficient for the large student body that lives in Durham. The COAST bus allows these students free rides to nearby towns where there are actually things to do. Having to pay for a monthly bus pass or fare, which will be necessary if UNH does not fund the COAST bus, is an extra amount of money, in addition to the climbing tuition fees that many students cannot afford.

A change in COAST

schedules and bus numbers will also cause commuters great problems, especially in prime hours. Already the buses are packed in the morning with hardly any room to stand. A decrease in the number of buses will cause times when people will be unable to get on the bus. Paying for public transit will also make it so that it is no longer a monetary advantage to students to take the bus to Durham. Driving to campus, especially if you are not sure to make it on the bus, will be much easier on students. This will cause the already gargantuan parking problem to be drastically increased. It would cost less to fund the COAST bus than to build a new parking garage.

Due to these reasons and many others, I hope the university will rethink its decision of not funding the COAST bus. If not, something that the majority of students take for granted what will no longer be available to us.

Campus environs need attention

To the Editor:

"Love that dirty water... College Brook, you're my home." This is what I would sing if I were an aquatic invertebrate who could survive in the gray water of College Brook. I am embarrassed by the continued poor quality of this brook and the immediate upland areas which drain into the brook. In particular, the recently paved path behind Hood House is eroding away along with the path's sand shoulder. Perhaps a silt fence could have been installed to keep the sand from further deteriorating the water quality here, but alas, this was not to be. One thing, however is certain, the sand continues to erode into College Brook and affects the health of one of New Hampshire's precious estuaries down stream. Maybe I should not mind that these "hidden paths" are deteriorating as long as the main thoroughfare is kept pretty, but I do. I guess I should not be surprised as I return here as a graduate student... some things never change. I can only hope that the Grounds and Roads folks can fix this problem with their limited budget before it gets worse.

Cast a 'real' vote for Harris/ Jarry

To the Editor:

Have you ever been upset with the policies at this university? Have you ever wondered who is making the decisions and why they are so often not in favor of students and students' rights? Do you feel that these problems are inherently part of the system, and a result of poor student leadership? If you answered "yes" to any of these questions then there is hope for change — the upcoming SBP/VP elections. Who do you want to see representing you at this university next year, the same students who perpetuate a system that misrepresents students? Wouldn't you prefer leaders who will advocate changes for improvement? The tickets of Pace/Turner and Kendall/Prisby are composed of Senate insiders who work in and for a system that is getting very little accomplished. They may have some good ideas but they can't be objective on the issues. That is why I urge all students who want to see real change occur at this university to vote for a ticket of leaders who can be objective and truly representative of the students at this university. On election day, don't be persuaded by Senate insiders with unrealistic goals; vote for Harris and Jarry. Real students, for real change.

Pace/Turner: simply the best

To the Editor:

I'd like to take this opportunity to express my support for candidates Joe Pace and Becky Turner. I have known Joe for my entire college career and Becky for most of my life and I can truly say that they are the strongest, most qualified people running for student body president and vice president. Their choice of issues expresses to me a deep commitment to the overall welfare of the UNH student population, the faculty and the university as a whole. They take on tough issues in innovative ways, not simply giving lip service or recycled solutions. Their energy is unparalleled and their positive attitudes rub off on all of those who come in contact with them. Stop to talk to Joe or Becky and you will see that they are simply the best candidates for student body president and vice president.

TNH skips over worthy sports

To the Editor:

When is TNH going to realize that there are other winter sports on this campus besides hockey and basketball? As captain of the men's track team, I am accustomed to the lack of coverage for other sports teams on campus. But now I feel compelled to comment about it. On March 9, a member of the UNH ski team earned All-American honors. Emily Cartwright capped off an outstanding career at UNH by finishing eighth at the NCAA championships in Bozeman, Mont. But if you read TNH on March 22 or even March 26, you would never know it. What you did see was who the captains for next year's hockey team are (March 26), or seven and a half pages dedicated to women's ice hockey (March 22). I don't mean to take anything away from either of these teams, especially the women, as I was one of the few hundred students on this campus who actually watched their games, but this seems like a little bit extreme considering the accomplishments not only of Emily, but of the entire ski team. They finished in the top ten in the country again, and how many of UNH's teams can boast that? Not very many. So come on, TNH, try and give a little recognition to the other teams on campus.

Prisby/Kendall end the stagnation

To the Editor:

When I first arrived here at the University of New Hampshire, I was surprised at the apathetic uncaring attitude that many students have. How could these people not care about their school and the decisions made concerning their school? As time went on I saw that there were people who cared. Now I see that there is a future for this school. That future rests in the hands of Heidi Kendall and Ed Prisby. Heidi and Ed have the dedication and the vision to carry this institution through the tumultuous times that we are experiencing right now. I have noticed the work both of them have put into making the school that we attend a better place.

Through her work as a Resident Assistant, I have seen how Heidi Kendall can have a positive effect on people around her. She truly cares about the people here at the University of New Hampshire. The Homecoming that Heidi planned this year was a great celebration of the support for the school that can be found in the hearts of all the students here. As Academic Affairs Chair in the Student Senate, Heidi has fought for the right of the students to have some voice in the dictation of academic policy. Ed Prisby has excellent perspective on the views and desires of students. Ed's work for the rights of students has been inspiring, and he can motivate people to make a difference. Both Heidi and Ed will bring an enthusiasm and a new life to the University.

Heidi Kendall and Ed Prisby are prepared to better the university for us all. Not only are the rights and needs of the on-campus students addressed, but the commuter's concerns are heeded through their support of a parking garage, and the elimination of parking meters in C-Lot. Heidi and Ed have a vision for the future of the university.

Please make your vote count for the future and for a change, not for stagnation and the furtherance of decay. Vote for Kendall/Prisby in the upcoming student body president and student body vice president elections.

TNH upholds free speech

To the Editor:

Though I am not a student at the University of New Hampshire, I do have the opportunity to read your paper regularly, and I must say you do an amazing job pulling it together. I am a reporter for a local community paper, and after seeing The New Hampshire, they could take a few pointers from your product. I have noticed that you understandably publish letters from UNH students only, though I hope you will make an exception in this case, as I am writing to thank you personally.

My wife, Sarah Luiz Chandler, spoke last week in the Entertainment Center at the MUB. For those of you who didn't hear Sarah speak, you probably saw the article written by staff reporter Holly Bedard. As Sarah's husband for just over one year, I have been a firsthand witness to how the media can operate. Sarah has been the victim of everything from misquoting to outright lies in the press. Whether an individual likes Sarah or agrees with what she has done, her heart and integrity can not be challenged. Sarah travels the country sharing her story in hopes of inspiring, helping others cope, and trying to make lemonade out of the lemons she has accumulated in her life. With nothing but the best intentions, she does not deserve the smear media she often receives. That is why I felt it was so important to thank Holly and The New Hampshire for the professional, accurate, and fair coverage of the lecture. You are a true credit to journalism, and as I said before, many of these so-called newspapers could learn a few things from your work.

As you noted in your story, certain people at the university attempted to censor and actually cancel Sarah's lecture. As a person with an associate's degree looking to continue my education, I would have a hard time choosing a school where some openly work to crush free speech, and do little to promote true diversity on its campus. If only one person found a morsel of insight or information beneficial to their life, Sarah served her purpose with the lecture. There is no doubt from the turnout Tuesday, and the feedback she has received, that she did just that. Thank you, and best of luck to The New Hampshire and its staff. Keep up the good work!

send thanks

To the Editor:

During the week of March 18 to 21, the Muslim Students' Association at the UNH held an Islamic Awareness Week. Thanks to God, our events were successful. Most importantly, we distributed about 40 Qurans as well as many books and brochures on Islam.

During the afternoons, there were videos shown in the MUB such as "Book of Signs," "Bosnia, the untold story" and "Choosing Islam." During these times, students stopped in, often out of curiosity saying that they didn't know anything about the religion and were interested in learning more.

The first of our lecture series was a forum co-sponsored by the Catholic Students' Organization (CSO) called "Islam: Is it a new religion?" Other lectures were given concerning "The Quran and Science," "Islam: The Answer to Women's Liberation" and "Islam: The Answer to Social Problems."

MSA would like to thank all the brothers and sisters in the community who attended and supported the events. It is our hope that our program and distribution of materials will help improve the UNH community's understanding of Islam as a global recognition as well as Muslim cultures. We pray for the same success for such events in the future. As always, our office is in the basement of the MUB (#5) and our phone number is 862-2MSA!

Harris/Jarry: clear up confusion

To the Editor:

This letter is directed toward Harris and Jarry.

We strongly urge you to clarify your platform's stance on the roles of RAs and Hall Directors in the lives of UNH students. It seems that through your comments about the issues you wish to tackle, you have managed to contradict yourselves and offend some people. One of them says that we are only being trained to "do our duty" and act more like "enforcers of rules" than friends. Your platform, though, clearly states that you want RAs and Hall Directors to "become more in touch with students instead of blindly following rules." This is a complete contradiction in terms! You may ask, "Why is anyone offended by wanting RAs and Hall Directors to be more in touch with students?" By assuming that our only focus is "baby-sitting" and "blindly following rules," you have shown your ignorance for the roles we each assume when we take on these positions. None of us took our jobs solely to enforce rules. We couldn't survive if we did. We care about the students with whom we work and give a great deal of our time and energy to making their experience at UNH a positive one. This seems to be your focus, as well, which doesn't explain your concern with our work and priorities. Yes, we are required to follow rules, but your ignorant assumption that this is all we do is extremely insulting to the hard work of many people. Although we may "not [be] mentors" to all students, we work very hard to set positive examples for those in our community.

You may not be aware of Residential Life's new program in the residence halls. The focus has changed dramatically in the past year to put the emphasis back on the students. This is accomplished by targeting four aspects of student life: developing a personal support system, academic success, involvement in and around campus, and emotional/behavioral well being. The majority of our time is spent talking with and getting to know the students in our building. You can ask most RAs or Hall Directors on campus if they've ever been up until all hours of the night talking with or helping students and you would hear a positive response. If you then asked them would they do it again, the response would undoubtedly be "yes."

We live with and care for all of the people in our building. How can this approach be "detrimental to students"? Before making your unsupported statements, did you speak to anyone in Residential Life or even live in a residence hall longer than one year? If the answer to either of these is yes, then it seems your experience has been unique. In the 1995 Community Development Surveys, 85 percent of students living in the residence halls stated they were satisfied with the relationship they have with their RAs.

You state your slogan as "STUDENTS UNITE!" and claim that you want to the "dormant student body to become the powerful and influential union it could be." This should be the goal of the entire university. If university programs can collaborate in defeating student apathy, it will surely be a victory for everyone. Rather than throwing out blind criticism towards a particular office, with whose mission you appear unfamiliar, we would like to issue this challenge to our candidates. Can the most worthy candidates propose a means for offices to work together rather than create rifts between us?

Recognize teacher excellence

To the Editor:

Last month, faculty were asked to nominate their choice for WSBE Teaching Excellence Award — an honor that contributes to promotion and tenure decision-making. The nominations are reviewed by three previous recipients of the award, and the Dean then considers these recommendations before deciding the winner(s).

In the three semesters I have attended classes at WSBE (I am a graduate student in the MBA program), I have never witnessed another teacher or administrator sit through even one of the 450 two-hour classes I have attended. And yet, nowhere in this selection process are students actively allowed to be involved in this critical nomination.

Nowhere in this process has anyone asked me, or any of the WSBE students, whom I (we) think most deserves the Teaching Excellence Award. Perhaps that is why the most deserving, prepared, enthusiastic, capable and committed professors at WSBE did not win last year — and will not win again this year.

The way in which the award recipients are currently chosen invites political manipulation and cronyism into the process. Specific criteria and methods to measure teaching excellence are not delineated or promulgated. And the people who are most knowledgeable about classroom activities, the students, are not allowed into the process.

So, while no one asked for my expert opinion, here are my nominations for deserving recipients of this year's award: Professors Roger Grinde, Craig Wood and Gene Boccaletti — three of the 15 professors I have had in my first three semesters at UNH. They set high expectations for each and every class, and they spend countless hours outside of class to extend the learning process for their students.

Will any of these three professors win the Teaching Excellence Award? Probably not. No letters of congratulations, no "life history" and "teaching philosophy" illustrations in the library forum, and no articles canonizing them for winning the award in the local paper. Only the continued respect and admiration of the learners who actually spend time in the classrooms and thereby legitimize the faculty's contributions — or lack thereof.

For fast relief from the nagging ache of taxes, we recommend TIAA-CREF SRAs. SRAs are tax-deferred annuities designed to help build additional assets—money that can help make the difference between living and living well after your working years are over.

Contributions to your SRAs are deducted from your salary on a pretax basis. That lowers your current taxable income, so you start saving on federal and, in most cases, state and local income taxes right away. What's more, any earnings on your SRAs are also tax-deferred until you receive them as income. That can make a big difference in how painful your tax bill is every year.

The world I know

by Ed Prisby

The year is almost over. Hard to believe, huh? I've been at the university three years now, and believe me, after spring break it all flies right by. Blink and you'll miss it. This year I find myself looking back a little more fondly on what I've done during the past year than the two prior years. I've come to the realization that I've learned a lot during my time in college, and the bottom line is, I'm simply learning from my mistakes. Which makes my time over the past seven months a little more enjoyable and hassle-free. I no longer find myself in trouble with an RA, a Hall Director or the Conduct Code office because I've learned by doing. All of you should avoid these mistakes by educating yourselves and your friends about what is expected of students at the university.

First there is a really dull and boring book that you all got at the beginning of the year and probably threw in your sock drawer once you got it. It's called "Rights, Rules and Responsibilities," and every student at the university is affected in some way by it. It contains university policy about alcohol, drugs, noise, candles, plagiarism, etc. Most students at this university are decent people, and in general students don't have any problems with the majority of what's written here. Sure, the alcohol policy isn't exactly conducive to wild and crazy times, but let's face it, until they lower the drinking age to 18 or someone makes some real changes around here, we're out of luck. But what happens when you break these rules? Well, I have, in the past, been known to fracture the occasional rule. So let me tell you what happens.

First, you get written up. Then you go see you Hall Director about whatever it was you did/didn't do. This is just an informal conference to straighten out the situation. Sometimes, if you are accused of seriously breaking the rules, you're sent to the Judicial Programs/Conduct Office for a hearing on your case. This is where things get tricky. When you go into your hearing, you'll have at least one Judicial Officer hearing your case. Your HD will be there, someone from the University to prosecute you, and some student lawyers. And the whole thing of it is, the university doesn't have to prove beyond a reasonable doubt that you are guilty. They work on a "preponderance of evidence." Meaning, in their eyes, the student is probably guilty as soon as they are brought up on charges. Is this fair? No, not really. Is it constitutional? The Supreme Court says it is. So until they change their minds up there, until the administration grows a heart or until someone makes a stand against the system, students are going to have to continue to jump through hoops to prove they are innocent of what they have been accused of at the university. But wait, it gets better.

There are changes being proposed by the Judicial Coordinator's office that would make it possible for the Conduct Office to bring students who live off-campus up on certain charges if they violate university policy. So, let's say over spring break, someone insults your boy/girlfriend, you punch them and promptly get yourself arrested by the Bewitch PD. You come back to UNH to find that the university has found out about the incident and is going to bring you up on charges of assault under B3 and/or B17 (disorderly conduct). Now let's say you went to trial in Dayton and the judge found you innocent for one reason or another, you can still be brought up on charges by the Conduct Office and be found guilty even though the State of Florida found you innocent. Ouch.

Remember though, these changes to the Code are only proposed. Proposed. Proposed. Proposed. I can't seem to say it enough. Please don't write to the paper thinking this is already done. Although it's perfectly okay to be alarmed by this. I moved off campus to get away from regulations, not to find out that there is no escape as long as I'm a student here.

As Judicial Affairs Council Chairperson of the Student Senate, I felt the need to write to you all about the conduct rules at UNH. Over the past few weeks of talking to other people here at UNH, I've heard horror story after horror story about kids being kicked out of halls for suspicion of having alcohol or other illegal substances. I've heard about illegal searches and seizures by hall staff. Oh yes, I've heard it all. Over all, the residence staff here at UNH is very good, but here is what you should be responsible for when approached by an RA or RHD. Answer their questions. Show them an ID. Acknowledge them. Those are your responsibilities. On the other hand, if someone knocks on your door and wants to come in, all you have to do is acknowledge them out in the hall or something. They can't come in without a good reason. They can't check your fridge, your closet, under your bed, or whatever, without your express permission. Period. Those are your rights under the Fourth Amendment of the Constitution of the United States of America. But you must acknowledge them when approached.

Yes, these are all things I've learned over the past three years here. Having sat in on the committee that proposes code changes, I've learned a lot over the past two months. I've learned that while I don't agree with a lot of the code, the best way to change it is to work with the resources I have to protect the rights of all students attending this university. Remember, nowhere in the Constitution does it say you have to be fat, bald and 40 to be treated like a citizen of this country. Well, not in the world I know anyway. So, be safe, be smart, know the code. For your own good. And if you don't like the proposed changes, keep the lookout for the Senate meeting in April where they all come before the students' most representative voice on this campus, the Student Senate. And come on down then and exercise your ability to speak out for your rights! See ya then.

Why Pancakes?

By Joseph Poulin
UNH Registrar's Office

In 1973, a few UNH students tried to form a new student organization. Most UNH undergraduates probably have no memory of what life was like in the Dark Ages, that period of earth's history before compact discs and MTV, that time in our species' evolution when people had a much more broadly agreed upon definition of what constituted normality. The potential consequences to anyone who deviated from the norm, in the way they behaved, how they dressed and particularly who they happened to fall in love with, were much more severe.

These students' efforts were resisted by the university administration. The governor and the trustees fought, both in state and federal court, against their recognition as an official student organization. Meldrim Thomson, the outspokenly conservative governor at the time, threatened to cut off all state funding to the university if it gave any kind of sanction to the student group. When the students won their initial round of legal battles for recognition, the governor and the trustees then tried to have the local courts declare the students mentally ill. What was their illness? What was it about this small group that so enraged a conservative governor and sparked a legal battle that lasted nearly a year? They were gay and lesbian students. That's right; the students in question had created something called the Gay Student Organization.

The GSO ultimately won its fight for recognition but only at a great cost. Over time, interest waned among younger undergraduates and the GSO disappeared. Eventually, they would be replaced by the CGLBA and the Campus Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Alliance. But before they disappeared, the GSO made an awful lot of noise in these parts.

One episode in their history is particularly memorable. In May of 1974, Channel 11 held its first ever on-air public auction to raise revenues for the station. One of the items auctioned was a pancake breakfast for eight with Governor Thomson and his wife at their Orford home. Seizing the chance at last to have a face-to-face meeting with the governor (who'd refused to meet with any representatives of the group), the GSO decided to bid on the auction.

Having spent the week before in a frenzied effort to raise money, the GSO was prepared to bid as high as $2,000 for the honor of breakfasting with the governor. Their efforts energized the campus and attracted a lot of attention from the press in the days leading up to the auction. As a result, the governor's supporters and Channel 11 were well-prepared. The station cut off bidding at $1,075, right after a Thomson supporter made the final bid. Prepared to go higher, the GSO was denied their chance to have breakfast with the governor and show him that, just maybe, they weren't such a threat to the status quo after all. Would it have made any difference? Would he have listened to them? We'll never know.

Today we take for granted the existence of the Alliance. They are a fact of life on this campus: they have an office in the MUB, a phone number, meet regularly and openly, sponsor a great many events, and absolutely nobody in the university administration or the state's government would question their right to exist (at least not openly).

These days, UNH has a liaison between the president of the university and the campus community as well as something called the President's Task Force on Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual and Transgendered Issues. And there's Queer Campus, The Transgendered Coalition, and the Safe Zones program.

Clearly times have changed at UNH. There's still an awful lot of work to do to make UNH a better place for all, regardless of sexual orientation, but we should never forget how much we've gained in the past 20 years. Since 1993, there's been a pancake breakfast every spring at UNH, both to commemorate the efforts of the GSO and to celebrate the ongoing vitality of this community. This year's breakfast will be held Wednesday, April 3, at 8 a.m. in the Entertainment Center of the MUB.

Everyone interested in celebrating over 20 years of progress is invited. You don't have to be gay, lesbian, bisexual or transgendered to attend—you don't even have to know anyone who is. You just need to believe that there are causes worth fighting for and that progress, though sometimes measured in millimeters, is always worth celebrating.

Commuter Students

For years, commuters at UNH have been an under-represented and neglected majority. Student services, classes and special events at the university have not exactly been responsive to the needs and unique circumstances that commuters face each day. But the Commuter Convenience Plan will be the starting point in a giant effort that will make our campus more accessible and supportive of commuting students.

First is parking reform. Sure, a parking garage seems to be maybe the best and certainly the most obvious solution to our current parking problem. But a parking garage will cost money and take time to build. We must look at the resources we have and utilize them as best we can while looking at the long term benefits of using those resources. So instead, we need to focus on solutions that can be implemented today, while still continuing to search for a broad, all encompassing answer to our current parking shortfall.

The Commuter Convenience Lot. C-Lot, located adjacent to Alexander Hall and the Memorial Union Building, will become the Commuter Carpool Convenience Lot (CCC). Within the first 10 days of being elected, Joe and Becky will move toward turning C-Lot into a carpooling lot. By January 1997, the meters will be removed from C-Lot and the spaces that the meters occupied will become numbered. Three or more people with cars will be allowed to purchase one of those numbered spaces, which will become their guaranteed parking spot. These 35 spaces will become a pilot program for the CCC. Pending the success of the program, C-Lot would become completely numbered by the fall of 1997, and many of these spaces would be sold as needed. Under this plan, parking in A-Lot and B-Lot would remain unchanged.

Next is transit reform. Pace/Turner will work to attain more student input as to how the current bus system is run. Joe and Becky will ensure that bus routes are more conducive to students' schedules. They would create two different bus schedules. One for Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays, and a different schedule to conform to the hour-and-a-half classes that are on Tuesdays and Thursdays. Also, the Pace/Turner ticket would ensure that more convenient bus routes are created that hit more of the areas where students live. The last major part of Joe and Becky's Transit Reform Plan is to create greater access to campus services for commuters by instituting 6 a.m. and 12:15 a.m. bus runs to Dover, Newmarket and Portsmouth.

Another one of Joe and Becky's top priorities is to create a 24-hour Commuter Study Lounge. This lounge would be outfitted with a ride board, an e-mail/UNIX computer terminal, printers for portable computers and telephones that would allow for local, off-campus calls to be made. This lounge will double as the commuter/transfer center, something that is lacking on campus to date.

Pace/Turner are also committed to creating a night care program for parents who attend the university. It is often impossible for parents to attend classes, to use the library, the computer clusters or other services offered here at UNH after regular day care centers or schools close. This program would ensure that parents will have access to all the services required for a sound education, while at the same time receiving safe and dependable child care.

The last of the five main goals of the Pace/Turner commuter agenda is to implement the Commuter Service Package. This plan ensures that services are as available to commuters as they are to resident hall students. It brings cable to the MUB living rooms so that commuters will have a place to watch television while on campus. Under this package, Joe and Becky will also bring different student services to the MUB each week for easy access for commuters. These services will include, but are definitely not limited to Financial Aid, Business Services, SHARPP, the ID Office, etc. Next, the Pace/Turner ticket will push to expand already existing services to the extended campus, such as quality lighting, safety phones, and usable sidewalks. The extended campus includes all the areas within one mile of T-Hall where a large concentration of students live. The last part of the Commuter Service Package is to work toward having sufficient programming on campus that commuters can easily attend. Commuters have a right to receive a return on the Student Activity and MUB fees.

We strongly believe that Joe and Becky provide the most realistic approach to attacking the problems facing commuters in our everyday lives. A vote for Joe and Becky is a vote for commuter convenience at UNH.

Dear UNH Students, Faculty, and Community Supporters,

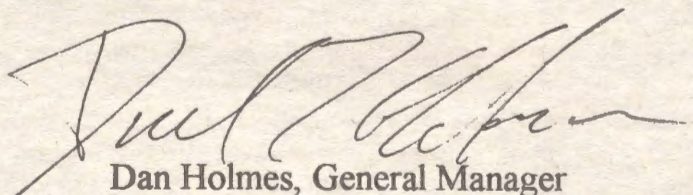

Beginning next week, by order of our authorities, WUNH-FM will not longer have the freedom to control our own programming. We have been restricted to playing top 40 mainstream music.

This decision was unfairly smashed across the backs of hardworking and dedicated students and community members, who have dedicated countless hours building the greatest collection of alternative music the seacoast region has to offer. This library is now censored! It is considered indecent and even worse "unpopular". Can anyone imagine that an academic institution would control information and entertainment on the basis of popularity? For years our station has been answering the scrutiny of Senate and SAFC questioning "why we don't play more popular music?" Our answers have consistently met the approval of these groups and the entire university community that supports us with over $13,000 in marathon fundraising annually.

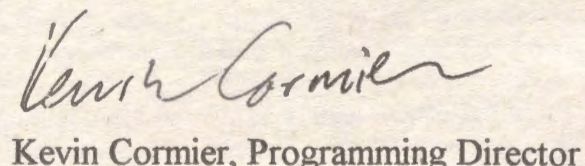

We are not here to simply entertain you, we are here to challenge you and to challenge ourselves to find new and innovative sounds and rhythms. Our concept is simple - don't copy everyone else! This gross display of enforced entertainment plagiarism is a waste of our time and yours.

I hope you will take this matter seriously and be willing to stand up and fight for what's right. Tune in to 91.3 FM to get more information and starting Monday hear just how far this University is willing to go to make your lives even more commercial.

We submit this letter on behalf of the entire WUNH-FM membership.

New York artist paints mural in mub Design to celebrate the 75th Anniversary of Woman Suffrage

Rachael O'Neil/Staff Photographer

By EMILY POLK
Staff Reporter

She has been there every day for the last week. You see her painting diligently when you enter the MUB to buy your morning coffee. You pass her and marvel at the progress she has made when you get out of class and go to study in one of the lounges. You wonder as you make your way to the Food Court, what exactly she is doing.

Her name is Amy E. Bartell and she is painting the colorful mural next to the information booth on the first floor of the MUB.

The art for the mural is something Bartell designed herself two years ago to commemorate the 75th Anniversary of Woman Suffrage.

It is called "This Green Earth" and displays a quote by Elizabeth Cady Stanton, one of the first women to attend the first women's rights convention in Seneca Falls, N.Y. The quote over is over the faceless heads of seven women of all different colors and dress.

Bartell travelled to UNH from Syracuse, N.Y. She had never been in New Hampshire before.

"I love it here. It's a great school and I think it was a really great idea to have a permanent piece in the MUB," she said.

Bartell works in Syracuse for a non-profit organization called Syracuse Cultural Workers. The company publishes and distributes products reflecting feminist and social issues. This is done through a catalogue where calendars, posters, cards, T-shirts, buttons and flags may be ordered.

Members of the Women's Commission first took note of Bartell's art work in these catalogues.

They had purchased several post-cards and posters with Bartell's work on them, but it was not until Women's History Month came around that they thought of actually bringing her to UNH to paint the mural.

"We were looking for a really big thing for Women's History Month," said President of the Women's Commission Jane Stapleton. "We had originally hoped to bring a speaker, but now we will have someone here for 10 days, whereas the speaker would only be here for an hour and a half."

According to Stapleton, the length of time it takes to paint a mural allows for more student involvement and awareness about the issues surrounding the mural.

"This is really great because it is a process. People keep coming by to check the progress of the work. They get to watch the work of art happening. It is a reminder of women winning the right to vote."

In order to get the mural approved,

"I think it's great that the Women's Commission is using their resources to really make a difference. . . They could have brought a speaker, but by having this mural, they will permanently change the school."

-Amy Bartell, artist

the Women's Commission had to go through the MUB Board of Governors and then Campus Planning.

"We had to go through a lot," said Stapleton, "But everyone was really happy about it."

In order to paint the mural as accurately as possible, Bartell took a poster of her work and divided it into half inch squares and transposed that into half foot squares on the wall.

"Public art can really affect so many people compared to art that's separated and put into a little room."

Bartell, who graduated from Oswego University with a BFA in Painting and Graphics, knew she wanted to be an artist from the time she was eight years old.

She has always been interested in using art work as a tool to make a change.

"[Bartell] is incredibly creative and energetic," said Dik Cool, an employee at Syracuse Cultural Workers who has worked with Bartell for the last ten years. "Her art has increasingly focused on social and political issues."

Bartell has gone to Washington, D.C. to sign her art work at the Holocaust museum. Though she has done other murals, this is the first time she has ever been commissioned to do a work this size with this message in such a public manner.

"I think it's great that the Women's Commission is using their resources to really make a difference," Bartell said. "They could have brought a speaker, but by having this mural, they will permanently change the school."

To Dream or not to dream...

One writer's quest in the face of adulthood

By KATE WAFFNER
For TNH

The famous poet Williams B. Yeats once said that "with dreams comes responsibility." At an age when childhood crashes into adulthood my dreams begin to both thrill and haunt — I feel the pertinence of his quote.

Dreams have been studied by psychologists, psychiatrists, psychoanalysts, psychics, detectives, Native American tribes, gypsies, philosophers, clairvoyants, hippies, students — and the content of dreams ranges from high-paced adventure to slow and peaceful romanticism. Dreams can have the archetypal chase scene of one running from the faceless many or the more pleasant dream of feeling the kiss of someone you have loved but have never known.

Yes, Yeats was speaking of the conscious goal driven desires and not the somnolent visions but both dreams affect our lives. Both the conscious and subconscious intertwine to form the ideas and beliefs that make up our dreams, which we either pursue or tuck away somewhere in our memory. If both the id and the ego were pointing thoughts in a certain direction it would seem dreams would be followed without hesitation, but that is not the case. This is a phenomenon that defies inertia and keeps our rubber soles (or whatever type of soles you prefer) glued to the floor.

Why don't all dreams come true? If all parts of the human brain work to develop our dreams, what part of the brain do we need to help us pursue our dreams?

This is where responsibility falls into our lap be it skirt or pant. We can either follow what we think our thoughts are telling us or we can shrug off the responsibility and blame others for not allowing us to follow our dreams.

In the face of possible disappointment, dreams are rationalized, leading to aspiring actors becoming office workers, marriages of securing rather than passion and lifestyles develop which allow us to stew in complaints, rather than working to make dreams come true.

I am not preaching to say that following dreams is necessarily sane, but it seems that while in the pursuit of a dream there is no time for time-consuming complaints, all energy must be used to obtain the dream which both delights and terrifies the host.

The ambivalence of dreams could be the cause of so many humdrum attitudes. For most the fear outweighs the possibility of success. Even the fear of success could keep people away from their dreams.

Those times in our lives when we have time to think, to brood about the future, can make us crawl into our beds and pull the sheet over our pounding heads. While under the covers the road diverges and a choice must be made. Do I accept the practical or challenge the fanciful route the world deems impossible? But what is practical?

We were set on this earth to fend for ourselves while living in harmony with others and do what we need to make our inhaled a little more deep and our exhaled more meaningful. I read that through our breath we give a part of ourselves to others. This is an old Maori belief called "Mana." If this is true than our souls filled with dreams are able to have a positive effect on those around us. Without speaking, we can substitute our complaints with actions and make the world a place void of negativity and discontent. I guess I am referring to that never regained utopia coined in the bible as the Garden of Eden. A place where humans chose to fall and have yet to find again.

In my 21 years I have seen time and again in myself and others the shirking of responsibility. Could this be the cause of unattained dreams? I know this is a personal affliction. Could this be the reason for my dusty flute, my dry bathing suit, deflated soccer ball, unstrung tennis racquet? Because I realized that with success comes obligations. Prioritization. If I went on to become a professional flutist or an Olympic swimmer I could not just apply my energies haphazardly; instead I would be obligated to practice harder, longer and more productively. The achievements of my efforts would not only be felt by me, but by the nameless masses who rely on those who publicly succeed for inspiration or as a diversion from the fact that they have yet to tell their own success stories. Is this how I think as I strive to achieve my dreams?

Now in my fourth year at a university I have made attempts at the more practical fields — engineering and then physical therapy, but I have chosen to follow feeling rather than the job statistics in the paper. My friends have given me words of support in endearing cards which read something like this: Most never follow their dreams, but accept the swept path before them, I admire you for what you are doing. I greatly appreciated those words, but I had to wonder why so many chose to accept rather than attempt. Are most acceptances failed attempts?

I have realized that the only way my dreams which come alive in my head while sleeping or the day dreams which fill my mind while I leaf through books and novels will only become reality if I rely on myself.

I do not believe that everyone has dreams in their hearts, be it subconscious, conscious or both. But as I look around myself in New Hampshire, at the bus station in Missoula, on the ferris wheel at Disney World or on the T in Boston I feel the pangs of hopefulness and despair. Everyone searching, some harder than others, but many fear responsibility and as Thoreau said "lead quiet lives of desperation."

As one who has not yet obtained my ultimate goal, I do not know if the pay of success is actually proportional to the input exerted to reach that plane. I have heard some say that the happiness of a printed page, or a whole novel wears off quickly and in its space returns the discontent that makes a writer write, a singer sing or an architect build. Some choose to end the process with the pull of the trigger or the flight off a bridge, but why? They have achieved the success that so many people will work for all their lives and never reap the benefits. Is it possible that those who have not reached publicly known success are actually the people with the luck? In the long run is it better to accept the norms of life, live on the beliefs that dreams can not be attained? Who knows. I can not accept this belief be it wrong or right, in my opinion if no dreams are sought why is life worth living?

It makes me wonder if the people in the world who spend a lot of time complaining have lost their ability to dream in fear of the enormous responsibility that comes from achieving the "I wish" which we all say once or twice in our lives. Could it be that this loss of vision is the reason for the ceaseless despair and gloom that evades the television, newspaper, periodicals, songs? Who knows, maybe these are all products of the fear of achieving the dreams that we say we would really like to pursue. Dreams require effort, energy, responsibility, thought, discipline; a roller coaster ride... sometimes it is easier to just open my mouth and complain.

Matt Kerr

Rays emanating from the dawning sun sending reflections flirting with the rippling waves snowflakes descending dancing, led by the rhythm of the wind inhalation of the morning's first breath, invigorating, cleansing, living reasons all to embrace life, to hold her warm torso with both arms the key is her concrete intangibility it can be seen, felt, smelled, yet it can't be grasped her moist breath passing by her teeth her lips resuscitating hopes, dreams, and desires watching her come watching her go enjoying her company, knowing she can't truly be yours why then do you wait foolishly allowing no other?

because she is your sun your snow your breath

she is yours to see to feel to smell
but not to be held, not by you, not now her lips will kiss others her breath shall pass another's teeth but perhaps, maybe, the dawn will come when you open your eyes finding your arms full her torso warming your body your heart your life.

The of the Matter

The special love between a mother and baby comes straight from the heart.

This supplement has been prepared and copyrighted by Human Life Alliance of Minnesota, Inc., 3570 Lexington Avenue North, Suite 301 • St. Paul, Minnesota 55126 • (612) 484-1040.

Dear Reader:

If you're in a crisis pregnancy, or know someone who is, please be assured that we understand the emotional trauma you are going through—the doubts, the fears, the sense of shame and frustration. We know the agonizing decisions you face and the pressures you feel.

At first blush, opting for an abortion probably sounds like the "quick-fix" solution to your problem. You need to be advised, as this supplement does in numerous articles, that abortion is not in your best interest. Those who have been telling you that it's a "women's rights" issue have been withholding critical information from you.

Actually, if you are subjecting yourself to the possible after-effects of abortion, as outlined on page eleven; or putting yourself in the position of being the anguished mother pouring out her heart from personal experience (also page eleven); or making yourself two to four times more prone to breast cancer (documented by recent research), shouldn't people who claim to be for women be warning you of these consequences?

Perhaps abortion isn't about women's rights after all! What then, or whom, is it about? The answer can be found within these pages.

For instance, isn't it exciting to discover, as Dr. Jerome Lejeune points out on page four that the miniaturized language mapping out the new baby at the time of fertilization contains more information about him/her than can be stored in five sets (not volumes) of Encyclopaedia Britannica?

It is our hope that in reading this supplement and relating to the preborn child you will be convinced that abortion, besides not being in your best interest, is indeed an unjust, inhumane and irreversible destruction of an innocent human life. There are alternatives to such a drastic measure!

Is carrying your baby to term a manageable decision? Yes it is! Please refer to page five to realize the number of people and organizations ready and eager to help you. Don't hesitate to call on them, whatever your needs. The support is there to see you through your crisis pregnancy - and beyond!

Remember the decision you make will affect you for the rest of your life. Don't let anyone pressure you into a quick decision! We don't pretend to have an easy solution - but a just, manageable, rewarding one, one which you will not regret: continued life for your baby!

The War of Words

Claim: Abortion is legal, therefore, it must be right.

Answer: If child abuse were suddenly declared legal by the U.S. Supreme Court, would that make it right? Would we ignore such an injustice and do nothing to protect the children?

Claim: I have the right to "choose" to abort my baby - a woman's "right to choose!"

Answer: How can anyone have the right to choose to kill another individual? The only "choice" in abortion is between a dead baby or a live baby. Furthermore, the advocates who defend the "choice" to abort, resulting in a dead baby, are not consistent. Why is it only in the case of abortion they argue that "choice" should be legal and absolute? Using the same rationale, shouldn't people have the right to "choose" to use drugs ("It's my body") or the right to "choose" to practice prostitution? Should our society allow a person to "choose" to kill another person (or have that person killed) to solve the first person's problem?

Claim: The government should not interfere with a woman's "right" to abortion.

Answer: Our Declaration of Independence declares that we have an "inalienable right to Life, Liberty and the Pursuit of Happiness." Thomas Jefferson defined government's role, "The care of human life and happiness, and not their destruction, is the first and only object of good government." Pres. Reagan, a defender of the human and civil rights of the preborn, called it "the transcendent right to life of all human beings, the right without which no other rights have any meaning." (Without life, taxation, health-care etc. are immaterial).

Claim: If public money (tax money) is not available to pay for abortions "poor" women will be denied access to abortion. They will be discriminated against.

Answer: Are we obligated to provide cigarettes and alcohol to poor people if they cannot afford them? On the contrary, government is very explicit about which items may be purchased with food stamps. Is this considered discrimination? The same people who argue for "public" subsidies for abortions are the same ones who argue that it is a "private" decision. To quote Congressman Henry Hyde, "We have a "right" of free speech. Does this mean the government has to buy us a personal computer? A typewriter? A megaphone?"

Claim: I am personally opposed to abortion, but I would not interfere with another's right to have an abortion nor impose my morality on others.

Answer: Analogy -- if the abolitionists had bought this line of reasoning regarding the slavery issue, some states could still be saddled with slavery today. Every law ever passed sets standards which reflect someone's (or a body of law-makers') morality.

Claim: You want to ban women's "constitutional right" to abortion.

Answer: This is a "spurious" or false "right" - having no basis in the constitution. The U.S. Supreme Court claims to have discovered a "privacy" right in the "penumbra" of the Constitution ("penumbra" definition: a partly lighted area around an area of full shadow). Court decisions (Roe v. Wade and Doe v. Bolton) are aberrations (deviations from truth) and do nothing more than grant temporary license to kill children in the womb, the most dangerous place of residence. This license is tenuous and could be over-ridden by reversal or an amendment to the U.S. Constitution. Indeed, to guarantee the permanent freedom of the slaves and establish rights for all U.S. "persons" the 14th Amendment to the Constitution was passed. It states, "...No state shall make or enforce any law which shall abridge the privileges or immunities of citizens of the United States; nor shall any state deprive any person of life, liberty, or property without due process of law; nor deny to any person within its jurisdiction the equal protection of the law." (emphasis added). In Roe v. Wade the Court determined that unborn children are not "persons" even though they have the right to inherit property and many other rights. Some states have entire sections of law outlining Crimes Against Unborn Children in which they, from conception on, are protected from negligent or willful harm or death.

Claim: If legal abortions are banned, women will resort to back alley abortions.

Answer: In 1972, the year before the Supreme Court legalized abortion, a total of 39 women died from illegal abortions, according to the U.S. Centers for Disease Control. Former abortion provider Carol Everett states, "In the last 18 months I was in the business, we were completing 500 abortions [legal: 1982-83] monthly and killing or maiming one woman out of 500" (p.10). If the numbers are this astounding for her four Texas clinics, it doesn't take an expert mathematician to figure out that the number of casualties happening nationwide at the over 2200 supposedly "safe" abortuaries would be in the high hundreds.

Claim: Abortion should be legal to end a pregnancy resulting from rape or incest.

Answer: It is important to remember that the child conceived in rape, or incest, is no less human than any other child. David Reardon's article, (page 8) points out that the very worst solution that can be offered to the pregnant woman at this crisis time in her life is an abortion. Abortion compounds the problem! If a small child were killed in the street by a negligent driver and it was later determined that the child had been conceived in rape, would the driver be held less responsible? Is that child's death less tragic?

Test Your Abortion I.Q.

1. On January 22, 1973 the U.S. Supreme Court legalized abortion through which month of pregnancy? A) 3rd month; B) 4th month; C) 6th month; D) 9th month
2. Since abortion was legalized in 1973 the number of preborn babies' lives extinguished by abortion is: A) 6 million; B) 12 million C) 30 million; D) 33.5 million
3. Abortion is the leading cause of death in the U.S., causing what percent of total deaths? A) 21%; B) 35%; C) 46%; D) 52%
4. What age group of women have the greatest number of abortions? A) 15 - 19; B) 20 - 24; C) 25 - 29; D) 30 - 34
5. About 10 million Black children have been aborted since abortion was legalized. This is what fraction of the present Black population in the U.S.? A) one-eighth; B) one-fifth; C) one-third; D) one-half
6. Since 1960 the number of babies born out-of-wedlock has risen by what percent? A) 60%; B) 105%; C) 250%; D) 419%
7. Women who abort their first child stand how much greater risk of developing breast cancer? A) 3 x; B) 2 x; C) 4 x
8. With the advances in medical science the number of surgical procedures which are now performed on babies in the womb is: A) over 50; B) 80; C) 90; D) over 100
9. One out of every how many preborn babies is killed by abortion? A) two; B) three; C) four; D) six
10. What percent of abortions performed in the U.S. are repeat abortions? A) 30%; B) nearly 40%; C) nearly 50%; D) 60%
11. What percent of women who have had abortions experience suicidal tendencies? A) 45%; B) 60%; C) 70%; D) 75%
12. A developing baby's heart begins to beat at: A) 21 days; B) 30 days; C) 45 days; D) 60 days
- 13) How many Americans now have an incurable sexually transmitted disease? A) 20 million; B) 36 million; C) 56 million
- 14) Every year up to what number of U.S. women become infertile because of STDs? A) 66,000; B) 75,000; C) 98,000; D) 150,000

The answers to these questions can be found on p. 9.

Abortion is Legal During 7th, 8th and 9th Months

In Roe v. Wade the Court allowed states to restrict abortions in the 3rd trimester "except where it is necessary... for the preservation of life or health of the mother." However, in Doe v. Bolton, the companion case to Roe, the Court defined "health" to include "all factors - physical, emotional, psychological, familial, and the woman's age - relevant to the well-being of the patient." Because of this broad definition of "health" the Court, in effect, permitted abortion-on-demand in all fifty states right up until birth for any reason!

Chronology of a New Life

Fertilization: The sperm joins with the ovum to form one cell. This one cell contains the complex genetic blueprint for every detail of human development—the child's sex, hair and eye color, height, skin tone etc.

Month One: The first cell divides within several hours and then cell division continues in an orderly fashion every few hours as the small group of cells travels down the Fallopian tube to the uterus, where the uterine lining has been prepared for implantation. There are over 100 cells present when this tiny embryo reaches the uterus 7 to 10 days after fertilization.

Day 20—foundations of the brain, spinal cord and nervous system are already established; day 21—the heart begins to beat in a regular fashion; day 28—the backbone, the rest of the skeleton, and muscles are forming—arms, legs, eyes and ears have begun to show. At one month old, the embryo is 10,000 times larger than the original fertilized egg — and developing rapidly. The heart is pumping increased quantities of blood through the system. The placenta forms a unique barrier that keeps the mother's blood separate, but allows food and oxygen to pass to the baby.

Month Two: At 35 days the pre-born baby has all her fingers. Brainwaves can be detected at day 40; the brain is controlling 40 sets of muscles as well as the organs. The jaw forms including teeth buds in the gums. The eyelids seal during this time to protect the baby's developing light-sensitive eyes which will reopen in the seventh month. The stomach produces digestive juices and the kidneys have begun to function. The tiny human being responds to touch. By 8 weeks, the developing baby is now referred to as the fetus, a Latin word meaning "young one" or "offspring."

Month Three: Day 63 (9 weeks): Unique fingerprints are evident and never change. The baby now sleeps, awakens and exercises her muscles by turning her head, curling her toes, and opening and closing her mouth - often sucking her thumb. Her palm, when stroked, will make a tight fist. She breathes amniotic fluid to help develop her respiratory system. By 12 wks. all the organs and systems of her body are functioning. The only major activity from now until birth is growth - the increase in her size.

Month Four: By the end of this month (16 weeks) the baby is 8 to 10 inches in length and weighs a half pound or more. Her ears are functioning, and there is evidence that the baby hears her mother's voice and heartbeat, as well as external noises. The umbilical cord has become an engineering marvel, transporting 300 quarts of fluids per day and completing a round-trip of fluids every 30 seconds. Because the preborn child is now larger, the mother usually begins to feel her baby's movements during this month.

Month Five: Half the pregnancy has now passed. The baby is about 12 inches long. If a sound is especially loud or startling, she may jump in reaction to it. Babies born at this stage of development (19 - 20 weeks) are surviving at an increasing rate thanks to advances in medical technology.

Month Six: (24 weeks): Oil and sweat glands are functioning. The baby's delicate skin is protected in the amniotic sac by a special ointment "vernix."

Month Seven: The baby's brain has as many cells as it will have at birth. The preborn child uses the four senses of vision, hearing, taste and touch. Research has documented that she can now recognize her mother's voice.

Month Eight: The skin begins to thicken, with a layer of fat stored underneath for insulation and nourishment. Antibodies increasingly build up. The baby swallows a gallon of amniotic fluid per day, more if it is sweetened. She often hiccups. She has been urinating for several months.

Month Nine: Toward the end of this month, the baby is ready for birth. The average duration of pregnancy is 280 days from the first day of the mother's last menstrual period, but this varies. By this time the infant's heart is pumping 300 gallons of blood per day. In response to signals from the brain the child triggers labor and birth occurs. Of the 45 generations of cell divisions before adulthood, 41 have taken place in the womb. Only four more will come - during the rest of childhood and before adolescence. In developmental terms we spend 90% of our lives in the womb.

Life begins at conception

"Each of us has a very precise starting moment which is the time at which the whole necessary and sufficient genetic information is gathered inside one cell, the fertilized egg, and this is the moment of fertilization. There is not the slightest doubt about that and we know that this information is written on a kind of ribbon which we call the DNA."

Dr. Jérôme Lejeune

Jérôme Lejeune, M.D., Ph.D., tells us much about the intricacies of the beginning of human life. Contrary to the popular view that the tiny baby becomes more and more "developed" as the weeks of pregnancy go on, Dr. Lejeune says that the very first cell, the fertilized egg, is "the most specialized cell under the sun." No other cell will ever again have the same instructions in the life of the individual being created.

In the words of Dr. Lejeune, "Each of us has a very precise starting moment which is the time at which the whole necessary and sufficient genetic information is gathered inside one cell, the fertilized egg, and this is the moment of fertilization. There is not the slightest doubt about that and we know that this information is written on a kind of ribbon which we call the DNA."

He explains that the fertilized egg contains more information about the new individual than can be stored in five sets (not volumes) of the Encyclopedia Britannica (if enlarged to normal print). To further emphasize the minuteness of this language, Dr. Lejeune states that if all the one-metre-long DNA of the sperms and all the one-metre-long DNA of the ova which contain the instructions for the 5 billion human beings who will replace us on this planet were brought together in one place the total amount of matter would be roughly the size of two aspirin tablets.

When Dr. Lejeune testified in the Louisiana Legislature (House Committee on the Administration of Criminal Justice, June 7, 1990) he stated, "Recent discoveries by Dr.

Alec Jeffreys of England demonstrate that this information (on the DNA molecule) is stored by a system of barcodes not unlike those found on products at the supermarket ... it's not any longer a theory that each of us is unique."

Dr. Lejeune states that because of studies published within the last year we can now determine within three to seven days after fertilization if the new human being is a boy or a girl.

"I see no difference between the early person that you were at conception and the late person which you are now. You were, and are, a human being."

"At no time," Dr. Lejeune says, "is the human being a blob of protoplasm. As far as your nature is concerned, I see no difference between the early person that you were at conception and the late person which you are now. You were, and are, a human being."

In the testimony Dr. Lejeune gave on The Seven Human Embryos (Circuit Court for Blount County, Tennessee at Maryville, Equity Division, August 8-10, 1989) he compared the chromosome to a mini-cassette, in which a symphony is written, the symphony of life. He explained that if you buy a cartridge on which a Mozart symphony has been recorded and insert it in a player, what is being reproduced is the movement of the air that transmits to you the genius of Mozart. In making the analogy he said, "It's exactly the same way that life is played. On the tiny mini-cassettes which are our chromosomes are written various parts of the opus which is for human symphony, and as soon as all the information necessary and sufficient to spell the whole symphony (is brought together), this symphony plays itself, that is, a new man is beginning his career ... as soon as he has been conceived, a man is a man."

Dr. Jerome Lejeune died on April 3, 1994. Dr. Lejeune of Paris, France was a medical doctor, a Doctor of Science and a professor of Fundamental Genetics for over 20 years. Dr. Lejeune discovered the genetic cause of Down Syndrome, receiving the Kennedy Prize for the discovery and, in addition, received the Memorial Allen Award Medal, the world's highest award for work in the field of Genetics. He practised his profession at the Hôpital des Enfants Malades (Sick Children's Hospital) in Paris.

Dr. Lejeune was a member of the American Academy of Arts and Science, a member of the Royal Society of Medicine in London, The Royal Society of Science in Stockholm, the Science Academy in Italy and Argentina, The Pontifical Academy of Science and The Academy of Medicine in France.

Legalized Abortion Based on Lies and Fraud

Norma McCorvey was the "Jane Roe" of Roe v. Wade.

Early in 1970 Norma McCorvey claimed that she had been gang-raped and became pregnant. Attorneys Sarah Weddington and Linda Coffee, newly graduated from the University of Texas Law School, needed a "client" in order to challenge Texas' 100-year old law that banned abortions. They convinced Norma that she should be seeking an abortion.

The case was subsequently argued all the way to the Supreme Court which resulted in legalizing abortion in all 50 states in 1973. In the meantime, Norma's baby was born and released for adoption. In 1987, McCorvey admitted that the gang-rape was a lie. In August 1995, she joined Operation Rescue stating that she was tired of being exploited by the pro-abortionists.

While Roe v. Wade legalized abortion, on the same date, Doe v. Bolton provided for abortion-on-demand for the entire nine months of pregnancy and was the legal vehicle which provided Court sanction for the over 2200 abortion mills across the country.

Sandra Cano was "Mary Doe" of *Doe v. Bolton

Sandra Cano now says she was an unwitting participant in fraud on the highest court in the land. Sandra was a young expectant mother with three children facing a divorce from a husband who was in jail for child molestation. Cano's three children had been taken from her by family service workers. They were being shunted from one bad environment to another. Cano loved her children dearly. She was almost insane with grief when she turned to Legal Aid Services for help. The offer of N.O.W. lawyers to take the whole mess off her hands, obtain a divorce and regain custody of her children sounded too good to be true.

When the attorneys hinted that they would like to strike a deal which would include aborting the child Sandra was carrying she made it very clear that she could never do that. Yet, her attorneys ignored her objections and ran roughshod over her. When she realized her case had been used to obtain abortion-on-demand she said, "...why would I stretch my imagination to include a plan so bizarre that it would give people in a civilized society permission to kill their own babies? ... I surely never thought they would tie my personal anxieties about retrieving my children to a scheme to make abortion-on-demand legal." Ironically, the Cano baby, like the McCorvey baby, was carried to term and relinquished for adoption. Yet, 33,500,000 other babies have lost their lives to abortion because of these two cases.

Sarah Weddington was the Attorney

Sarah Weddington, the attorney who argued Roe v. Wade before the U.S. Supreme Court, gave a speech at the Education Ethics Institute in Oklahoma. She explained why she defended the sketchy story and false rape charge of a Texas waitress "Jane Roe" all the way to the Supreme Court: "My behavior may not have been totally ethical. But I did it for what I thought were the right reasons." Tulsa World 5/24/93.

Playboy Provided the Funding

Hugh Hefner, founder of Playboy claims to have done one great thing for women: "Playboy probably had more to do than any other company with Roe v. Wade. We supplied the money for those early cases and actually wrote the amicus curiae for Roe."

Do You Hear What I Hear?

"With no hype at all, the fetus can rightly be called a marvel of cognition, consciousness and sentience."

"She slides into the world with eyes alert, the tiny ridges of her ears living antennae scanning the conversation frequencies in the room. She finds her mother's voice with her ears, and her eyes."

The baby's alertness and awareness begins with early development in the womb. The preborn baby can hear and respond to sound. Car horns can make the baby jump. Her heartbeat quickens.

When Peter Hepper of Queens University in Belfast repeatedly played to 30-week-old fetuses the theme song from a popular soap opera, they relaxed. After birth, the babies became "quite alert" when they heard the tune.

"...When a loudspeaker directs speech syllables at a mother-to-be's abdomen, the fetus's heart slows, a sign of attentiveness. The heartbeat speeds up as the fetus gets bored with the sounds, then slows again if new ones flow into the womb."

A fetus remembers some experiences and may alter her behavior as a result.

Every Twenty Seconds
A Life Is Taken By Abortion...
That's A Lot Of Love Lost.

Birthmother Opts for Adoption... The Loving Alternative

It was the beginning of my junior year in high school. I was excited, looking forward to another year of diving, gymnastics and track. But this excitement quickly came to an end when I realized I was pregnant.

When the pregnancy was confirmed, my mind went racing. It wasn't enough to just say that I was scared - I was terrified! The idea of having an abortion was never a consideration for me. I could not live with the realization that I was responsible for taking the life of my child - a death because of my actions.

My first instincts told me that I needed to raise my child on my own. I knew I could love and care for a child, but when I stopped thinking about myself, and thought about what was best for my child, I knew adoption was the right decision. I was sixteen at the time. I wanted to go back to school for my senior year and wanted to participate fully, in sports etc. I wanted to go on to college.

I knew I could not do all of this and raise a child at the same time. I did not want to have to live with my parents indefinitely and depend on them for everything. I did not want them to be thrust into the role of prime care-givers for my child. It just would not be fair for any of us, for them, myself or the baby. I knew that placing my child for adoption would be the right thing to do, the loving alternative!

The adoption procedure I opted for is not your ordinary plan. I chose to do an independent open adoption. Through this process I was able to select from among the prospective adoptive parents. I had the opportunity to establish a personal relationship with them as well as to develop a lasting friendship. The more I got to know them the more excited I was about placing my baby with this couple. They had so much love and security to offer my child. They were there with me in the hospital when my son was born. Their video camcorder ran non-stop.

I will always treasure the three days I spent in the hospital with my son. Handing him over to his new parents was by no means easy, but I knew in my heart that this was the right decision for both of us.

Many tears were shed throughout the nine months and during the hospital stay. But, they were not all tears of sadness. I miss my son very much. I think about him every day and a smile comes to my face. I thank the Lord that He led me to two such special people to be adoptive parents for my child.

It has been several years since my son was born. He now has an adoptive sister. I keep in contact with the family through letters and pictures. I can't begin to explain the feelings of pride and contentment that I experience when I see the smile on his face.

I am now a junior in college majoring in paralegal studies. Relinquishing my son was the hardest decision I will ever have to make but I'm more confident than ever that it was the right one. While in the hospital I received a card which read, "Some people come into our lives, leave footprints on our hearts, and we are never the same." This is so true!

The abortion experience for victims of rape and incest

by David C. Reardon

Rape and incest are very emotional topics. They often elicit in the general populace feelings of revulsion; people draw back from the issue of rape and incest, even from the victims of rape and incest. People don't know how to handle a person who is in that much pain. There is no quick fix....

Some people who are otherwise very pro-life will condone abortion in rape and incest cases because they don't know what else to offer. And they will accept it as a rare case. This pro-life difficulty in defending the unborn even in rape and incest cases is largely due to ignorance because the facts, as I have found them, show that the victim's needs are not being served by abortion. In fact, rape and incest victims actually suffer considerably from the abortion.

The facts suggest that only a minority of rape and incest victims actually choose abortion<sup>1</sup>—so right there, one should pause and reflect. Abortion is not usually chosen as the immediate solution by rape and incest victims but that is the prevailing belief of the general population. A woman has been raped and made pregnant: "Oh, she's got to have an abortion." No one has studied the rape and incest victims' needs; abortion is presumed to fill their needs.

Kathleen DeZeeuw states, "Having lived through rape, and also having raised a child 'conceived in rape,' I feel personally insulted and assaulted every time I hear that abortion should be legal because of rape and incest. I feel that we're being used by pro-abortionists to further the abortion issue, even though we've not been asked to tell our side."

The children conceived through sexual assault also have a voice which deserves to be heard. Julie Makimaa, conceived by an act of rape, works diligently against abortion. She believes every life has a value beyond measure, a purpose which only time can reveal. Not ashamed of her origin, Julie proudly proclaims: "It doesn't matter how I began. What matters is who I will become."

Abortion Adds to the Pain of Rape

Various studies and my own research indicate that rape and incest victims fall into the high risk category of aborters, and the existence of rape or incest is actually a contraindication for abortion. Jackie Bakker, whose testimony is in my book,<sup>2</sup> says, "I soon discovered that the aftermath of my abortion continued a long time after the memory of my rape had faded. I felt empty and horrible. Nobody told me about the emptiness and pain I would feel deep within causing nightmares and deep depressions. They had all told me that after the abortion I could continue with my life as if nothing had happened." This is the same story we hear from a lot of aborted women. But for the rape and incest victim it is an especially keen story, because they have been told, "In your situation that is the only thing you can do." And they have been betrayed by that advice.

"I felt empty and horrible... They had all told me that after the abortion I could continue with my life as if nothing had happened."

Victims Gave Reasons to Forego Abortion

Perhaps the best study was done by Dr. Sandra Mahkorn, published in Psychological Aspects of Abortion<sup>6</sup>. Dr. Mahkorn was an experienced rape counselor who, in 1979, identified 37 pregnant rape victims who were treated by a social welfare agency. Of these 37, only five chose to have an abortion. Of the 28 who gave birth, 17 chose adoption and 3 kept the child themselves; for the remaining eight, research was unable to determine where the child was placed.

"I was being sexually attacked, threatened by him and betrayed by Mom's silence...the abortion which was to be in 'my best interest' has not been...it only 'saved their reputations,' solved their problems and allowed their lives to go merrily on."

Several reasons were given for not aborting. First, several women felt that abortion was another act of violence — that it was immoral or murder. One said she would only suffer more mental anguish from taking the life of a baby. Second, some saw an intrinsic meaning or purpose to the child. Somehow this child was foisted into their lives but, on the other hand, they sensed some sort of hidden purpose behind it. And although not responsible for having brought the child into being, it had happened, and the consequences could be lived with. Third, at a subconscious level, the rape victim feels that if she can get through the pregnancy she will have conquered the rape. Outlasting pregnancy shows she is better than the rapist who brutalized her. Giving birth, then, is the way rape victims seek to reclaim their self-esteem. It is a totally selfless act, a generous act, especially in light of the pressure to abort. It is a way for them to display their courage and strength to survive even a rape.

In her study, Mahkorn found that feelings or issues relating to the rape experience were the primary concern for most of the pregnant rape victims — not pregnancy. While 19% — a significant number — placed primary emphasis on their need to confront their feelings about the pregnancy, including feelings of resentment and hostility towards the unborn child, the primary difficulty they experienced with the rape pregnancy was pressure from other people who saw the pregnancy as a blot to be eliminated. Family and friends just weren't supportive of the woman's choice to bear the child.

Dr. Mahkorn also found that, in the group who carried their pregnancies to term, none, at the end of pregnancy, wished she had decided on an abortion. Abortion therefore inhibits the healing to the rape victim and reinforces negative attitudes.

Abortion Reinforces Women's Powerlessness

Another example from my book is Vanessa Landry, another rape victim who said, "I didn't really want to have the abortion. I have always been against abortion all my life. People think that whenever anyone is raped, they have to have an abortion. My social worker just kept telling me all kinds of things to encourage me to have the abortion. They didn't give me any other option except to abort.

The Abortifacient Nature of Some Contraceptives

THE BIRTH CONTROL PILL - The "Pill" causes 150 different chemical changes in the woman's body (chemical warfare). This fact is documented in the Textbook of Contraception by Malcolm Potts, director of Planned Parenthood of England (Cambridge Press 1983, p.144). The "Pill" works in three ways:

- 1) Temporary Sterilization - preventing ovulation; however, it is estimated that the low dosage pills now in use, fail to suppress ovulation 50% of the time!
- 2) Abortion - altering the lining of the womb, making it hostile to a newly conceived child and preventing implantation in the womb.
- 3) Contraception - The "Pill" thickens the cervical mucus slowing the transportation of sperm to the ovum.

INTRAUTERINE DEVICE (I.U.D.) - though touted and sold as a contraceptive, in reality, the I.U.D. does not prevent conception. Neither does it prevent ovulation. The I.U.D.'s mode of action is to create a hostile and inflammatory environment in the womb so that a newly conceived child cannot implant and grow there. The fertilized ovum is thus expelled.

Also acting as abortifacients are other equally deceptive "contraceptives": Depo-Provera, Norplant, RU486, Abortifacient Vaccines, Cytotec, etc.

Abortion Techniques Described

Suction-Aspiration: The method of abortion most commonly used for early pregnancies. The abortionist inserts a hollow plastic tube into the dilated uterus. The tube is connected to a powerful suction apparatus. The suction tears the baby's body into pieces.

Dilatation and curettage (D and C): Similar to the suction procedure except the abortionist inserts a tiny hoe-like instrument into the uterus. With this, the abortionist cuts the baby into pieces and scrapes him/her out into a basin. Bleeding is usually profuse.

Dilatation and evacuation (D and E): Used after 12 weeks. A pliers-like instrument is needed because the baby's bones are calcified, as is the skull. The abortionist inserts the instrument into the uterus, seizes a leg or other part of the body and, with a twisting motion, tears it from the baby's body. The spine must be snapped and the skull crushed in order to remove them from the womb.

Salt poisoning (saline injection): This is used after 16 weeks. A long needle is inserted through the mother's abdomen into the baby's sac. Some fluid is removed and a strong salt solution is injected. The solution is swallowed and "breathed" and slowly poisons the baby. He/she kicks and jerks violently as he/she is literally being burned alive.

Hysterotomy or Caesarean Section: Used mainly in the last three months of pregnancy, the womb is entered by surgery through the wall of the abdomen. The tiny baby is removed and allowed to die by neglect or direct act.

Prostaglandin chemical abortion: This form of abortion uses chemicals, developed by the Upjohn Pharmaceutical Co., which cause the uterus to contract intensely, pushing out the developing baby. In one article, one of the complications listed with this method was "live birth." In fact, the two most "dreaded" complications for an abortionist are a dead mother or a live baby.

Dilatation and Extraction (D and X) Late Term Abortions

(The authenticity of the following information has been confirmed in an article in the American Medical Association's Newsletter, American Medical News, in the July 5, 1993 edition).

At a September 13-14, 1992 meeting of the National Abortion Federation, a trade association of abortion providers, an Ohio abortionist, Dr. Martin Haskell, described this new technique he has perfected. Unlike the D & E procedure whereby the preborn child is dismembered inside the mother's womb, with the D & X method the preborn baby is alive until the end of the procedure when the child is killed by suctioning the brain tissue through a hole at the base of the skull while the baby's head is still inside the uterus. Then the intact aborted child, minus brain content, is removed from the womb.

According to the paper presented by Dr. Haskell the procedure takes three days and begins with "dilation (and) MORE DILATION." The cervix is initially dilated to 9-11 mm. with mechanical dilators, in order to accommodate the placement of five to seven synthetic laminaria, Dilapan hydroscopic dilators, which remain in place overnight.

The following morning the Dilapan are removed and replaced with a second insertion of 15 to 25 dilators, again left overnight. The Dilapan process may cause severe cramping.

On the third day, after removing the dilators, the abortionist ruptures the membranes, if this has not already happened, and drains the amniotic fluid. The abortionist places an ultrasound transducer on the mother's abdomen and locates the child's legs and feet.

The abortionist then uses a large forceps to grasp one of the baby's legs. He pulls firmly, forcing the child into a feet-down position. He continues pulling until the baby's leg is drawn into the birth canal.

Next, using his hands instead of forceps, the abortionist delivers the baby's body in a manner similar to a breech birth. First, the child's other leg is delivered, followed by the torso, shoulders, and arms. The baby's head "usually" remains inside the uterus.

The abortionist then performs the last step which Dr. Haskell calls "fetal skull decompression." Using blunt-tipped surgical scissors in a closed position, he pierces the child's head at the base of the skull. He then forces the scissors open to enlarge the skull opening.

Removing the scissors, the abortionist inserts a suction catheter into the wound and vacuums out the child's brain tissue (in Dr. Haskell's words, "evacuates the skull contents") causing the baby's death. With the skull emptied of brains, it collapses and he then "applies traction to the (dead) fetus removing it completely from the patient."

Dr. Haskell has performed over 700 of these abortions on preborn babies as old as 26 weeks. Dr. Haskell refers to another abortionist, Dr. James McMahon of McMahon Med. Center and Eve Surgical Centers in Los Angeles and Tarzana, CA, who not only also uses this technique but sometimes uses it to abort preborn children up to 32 weeks "or more."

Barbara Radford, Executive Director of the National Abortion Federation said of this late-term abortion technique, in a 6/18/93 letter to NAF members, "Don't apologize: this is a legal abortion procedure."

Rape and Incest

They said I was just another minority bringing a child into the world and there were too many already.<sup>7</sup> Here is a woman who is being victimized not only because she is a rape victim, but also because she is black and a minority and she has a low income. That is one of the stories that upsets me the most.

Childbirth can be a victory. For the majority of pregnant rape victims who wisely choose to forego abortion, childbirth is the choice of triumph over rape. It is a choice that says, "Rape will not dictate my life." It allows them to show their own courage and generosity. When the need of pregnant rape victims is carefully examined, it can be shown the abortion is not necessary and indeed is very likely to hinder recovery by increasing feelings of guilt, shame and low self-esteem.

Like Incest, Abortion Promotes Silence

Incest victims face similar problems. Incest is a very complex issue and it is hard to say much in a very short period of time, but the vast majority of incest victims want to carry their pregnancy to term. These are young girls for whom pregnancy is a way to break out of an incestuous relationship with their father, whom they may love despite their confusion and resentment about the way they have been used as sexual objects. Since they still love the father, having the child can not only help expose the incestuous relationship but also give hope of beginning a truly loving relationship.

In studies of incest victims, the vast majority choose to carry the pregnancy to term.<sup>8</sup> Those in the minority who have an abortion do so only under pressure from their parents to conceal the incestuous relationship. Because incest is a family pathology that involves father, mother and daughter, all are involved in a conspiracy of silence.<sup>9</sup>

I interviewed Edith Young, now 38 years old, who was a rape and incest victim at 12 years of age. To cover up the incident, her parents procured an abortion for her without telling her what was to happen. The emotional and physical scars of incest and abortion still last to this day. She said, "I was being sexually attacked, threatened by him and betrayed by Mom's silence...the abortion which was to be in 'my best interest' has not been...it only 'saved their reputations,' solved their problems and allowed their lives to go merrily on."<sup>10</sup>

Pro-life persons don't have any reason to be ashamed to defend a pro-life view in the case of rape or incest. The ones who need to be ashamed are the pro-abortionists who have been exploiting the problems of rape and incest victims, confusing the public and promoting abortion for their own social engineering goals. To my knowledge, pro-abortionists have never yet brought together a group of rape and incest victims who carried their pregnancies to term who said, "Oh, that was the worst thing I ever did. Why didn't somebody give me an abortion when I needed it?"

We, on the other hand, can produce women who took the advice of the pro-abortionists, had the abortion and now say, "This abortion ruined my life. What were you telling me?" We need to join rape and incest victims in demanding that pro-abortionists stop exploiting the pain of innocent women's problems for their own political ends.

Planned Parenthood Ignores Own Advice

In 1963, a Planned Parenthood publication, Plan Your Children For Health and Happiness stated: "An abortion kills the life of an baby after it has begun. It is dangerous to your life an health." Yet Planned Parenthood now operates the nation's largest number of abortion mills Carol Everett was involved in the abortion industry in the Dallas/Ft. Worth, Texas, area from 1977 until 1983. As director of four clinics, owner of two, Ms. Everett was responsible for the clinics' daily operation. Everett, who had an abortion soon after it became legal in 1973, now speaks out on...

Carol Everett

"What I Saw in the Abortion Industry"

Q What is the governing force behind the abortion industry?
 A. Money. It is a very lucrative business. It is the largest unregulated industry in our nation. Most of the clinics are run in chains because it is so profitable.

Q How much money were you making in the abortion industry before you quit?
 A. I was getting a commission of $25.00 on every abortion I "sold". In 1983, the year I got out, I would have pocketed approximately $250,000. But, in 1984 we expected to be operating five clinics, terminating about 40,000 pregnancies, and with that projection I planned to net $1 million. Money, Money, Money — that's where my heart was.

Q Why do you refer to "selling" abortions?
 A. The product, abortion, is skillfully marketed and sold to the woman at the crisis time in her life. She buys the product, finds it defective and wants to return it for a refund. But, it's too late. Her baby is dead.

Q In what way is the woman deceived?
 A. In two ways — the clinic personnel and the marketers must deny the personhood of the child and the pain caused by the procedure. Every woman has two questions, "Is it a baby?" and "Does it hurt?" The abortionist must answer "NO." He/she must lie to secure the consent of the woman and the collection of the clinic's fee. The women were told that we were dealing with a "product of conception" or a "glob of tissue." They were told that there would be only slight cramping, whereas, in reality, an abortion is excruciatingly painful.

Q What type of counseling was offered at the clinics?
 A. In the clinics in which I was involved we didn't do any real counseling. We answered only the questions the woman asked and tried not to "rock the boat." We did not discuss alternatives to abortion unless the woman forced us to. We sold abortions.

Q What method of abortion did your clinics use?
 A. For the most part, the abortion industry stopped using saline and prostaglandin procedures because of the number of live births. A live birth means you have to let the baby die, or dispose of it in some distasteful way. Most second and third trimester abortionists use the D & E (dilation and evacuation) method. The abortionist uses large forceps to crush the baby inside the mother's uterus and remove it in pieces. The side effects of live births and the mother going through labor are avoided. But it is a horrible procedure in which the baby must be re-constructed outside the uterus to be certain all the parts have been removed.

Q How did you dispose of an aborted baby?
 A. In our clinics, we put them down the garbage disposal. We used the heavy duty model. Some second and third trimester babies' muscle structure is so strong that the baby will not come apart, so they must be disposed of through trash receptacles.

Q Abortion is supposed to be a "safe" experience. What complications did you witness?
 A. We were doing a one-day traumatic dilation, which has a higher rate of complication. In the last 18 months I was in the business, we were completing over 500 abortions monthly and killing or maiming one woman out of 500. Common complications that take place are perforations or tears in the uterus. Many of those result in hysterectomies. The doctor might cut or harm the urinary tract, which then requires surgical repair. A complication that is rarely publicized is the one in which the doctor perforates the uterus and pulls the bowels through the vagina, resulting in colostomy. Some of those can be reversed, some must live with the colostomy for the remainder of their lives.

Q How did you keep these complications and deaths from the public?
 A. The woman would be loaded into my car (an ambulance outside an abortion clinic is terrible advertising) and transported to a hospital that would protect the doctor and the abortion clinic's reputation. The concern is not with the patient only in keeping an unblemished reputation. You have a built-in cover-up with the patients' family. They are dealing with their guilt and emotions over the situation and do not want to deal with the added pressure of exposing the truth through the media.

Q Why did you get out of the abortion business?
 A. Two things came into play at about the same time. I experienced a profoundly religious transformation—a conversion. At about the time I was having second thoughts a Dallas television station did an expose disclosing the abortions performed at my clinic on non-pregnant women — all for money! I finally realized, "We weren't helping women — we were destroying them — and their children." By then my transformation was complete and I knew that I not only had to stop being involved with abortions but I had to help promote the truth.

ABORTION:

Possible Effects on Your Body

Immediate

- Intense pain •Punctured uterus •Excessive bleeding
- Infection •Parts of baby left inside •Shock/Coma
- Damage to other organs •Death

Later

- Inability to become pregnant again •Miscarriage/Stillbirths •Tubal Pregnancies
- Premature births •Pelvic inflammatory disease
- Hysterectomy •Two to Four times Higher Risk of Developing Breast Cancer

"People do not understand that there are thousands of serious physical complications from abortion every year in this country." Dr. Bernard Nathanson, OB-GYN,

"The inherent risk of abortion is not fully appreciated, both by many in the profession and certainly not by the public." The American Colleges of Obstetrics and Gynecology.

Possible Effects on Your Emotions

The Most Common

- Guilt •Desire to become pregnant again
- Depression/Crying •Inability to forgive yourself •Intense grief/sadness
- Anger/Rage •Emotional numbness
- Sexual problems •Lowered self-esteem
- Nightmares •Anorexia or other eating disorders
- Drug or alcohol abuse •Suicidal urges

"Abortion has a painful aftermath, regardless of the woman's religious beliefs, or how positive she may have felt beforehand about her decision to abort." Vincent Rue, Ph.D., Psychologist.

Post Abortion Syndrome

(Women suffering mental and emotional anguish following an abortion)

Dr. Anne Speckhard, Ph.D, in her study on Post Abortion Syndrome, found the following effects on women.

Events Related to Abortion

- 23% had hallucinations related to the abortion
- 35% perceived visitation from the aborted child
- 54% had nightmares related to the abortion
- 69% experienced feelings of "craziness"
- 73% had flashbacks of abortion experience
- 81% had a preoccupation with the aborted child

Most Common Behavioral Problems After Abortion

- 61% increased their use of alcohol
- 65% had thoughts of suicide
- 69% were sexually inhibited
- 73% had flashbacks of the abortion
- 77% experienced an inability to communicate
- 81% experienced frequent crying

I've been there too!

"Tim, I think I'm pregnant." It was New Year's Eve, 1973. My boyfriend sighed deeply, his gaze remaining fixed on the TV. "Just have your period, all right?" he muttered. I felt a sour lump in the back of my throat. My breasts were tender. Yes, I was pregnant, and I was scared!

I knew from first hand experience how tough it is raising a child as a single mother. I already had a 2-year old daughter, Jennifer, from an earlier unsuccessful marriage. We lived in the inner city and could barely make ends meet. When my pregnancy was confirmed, Tim's non-committal response to my distress and his move to Chicago, 400 miles away, left me despondent and leaning more and more toward abortion as the "easy way out." I was already struggling financially with one child. How could I raise two?

I drove to Chicago to try to convince Tim to marry me. He was deaf to my pleas and unmoved by my tears. Believing I had no viable alternative, I convinced him to give me money for an abortion.

As I sat in the abortion clinic waiting my turn, everything around me seemed like a nightmare. Women lounged on garishly printed couches as rock music played on the intercom. Everything seemed so casual, and there I was, feeling like I wanted to die. When the nurse called my name, I changed my mind, broke into tears, and left.

I felt desperately alone. Back at the university, I often cried myself to sleep.

I decided to confide in a couple of college professors. They collected money to fly me back to Chicago to have an abortion. Now I was determined, even obligated, to go through with it. Still, I agonized!

Ironically, that semester, I was taking a class in fetal development. I knew there was a baby in my womb with her heart beating and her own circulatory system. Those pictures flashed in my mind as I sat there, clad in a paper gown and paper slippers.

I was summoned to the room where the abortions are performed. I could hear a woman sobbing hysterically in the recovery room. It reminded me of someone who had witnessed the death of a loved one in a fatal accident. I'll never forget it.

As the doctor was examining me, prior to performing the abortion, he suddenly stopped and said to the nurse, "Get her out of here! She's too far along!" Relief instantly washed over me! How odd! I had thought I wanted an abortion but now felt instantly relieved to know I was still pregnant.

I decided to use every ounce of courage I could muster to deal with my pregnancy. My ambivalence turned into love for my unborn child. When my beautiful daughter was born, I named her Melanie.

It took energy and creativity to support the three of us. My two daughters inspired me to do great things. They never stood in the way of my career. They have only enhanced it. I finished my degree; then I went on to get my Master's and Ph.D. Besides being a proud mother, I am happily married, a published author, a motivational speaker for one of the largest seminar companies in the U.S. and a part-time musician.

I have learned that life is really about developing character. When we endure something tough, our character and self-esteem are strengthened. Many women who have confessed to me that they've had abortions have discovered that the "easy way out" is just an illusion. Some of them are in abusive relationships. Some are on anti-depressants. Others just seem detached from life. Some sadly remember their aborted child's "would be" birthday each year.

If you are in a crisis pregnancy, I cannot promise that it will be easy. I can only promise that the anguish will pass and there are people who will help you through this trying time. (pg. 5) As someone who has "been there" I understand the anguish you are experiencing. One day you will look back on the birth of your child, and say, as I do, "I did the right thing. And I feel proud."

Sincerely, with love,
Dr. Angela Woodhull

Glamour (2/94), the popular women's magazine, after receiving input from 3000 women reported, "Virtually all of those who'd had abortions in the past said that if they'd only known how much they'd regret having an abortion, they never would have agreed to the procedure...The births of subsequent children or some other exposure to the intricacies of child development were often listed as experiences that helped them see just how misguided they had been in deciding to abort." One woman said "Society told me it (abortion) was safe and legal. And the abortionist and her medical crew never counseled me on anything- the procedure itself, the risks, the alternatives, and what my choices were...I wondered why, if I had participated in this wonderful, self liberating experience, I did not feel a sense of deliverance, but a loss of self respect, and little by little a loss of myself."

How Developed Is Your Baby?

Baby at Approximately Six Weeks

This remarkable photograph of a tiny preborn baby in his unruptured amniotic sac was taken after surgery (for a tubal pregnancy) at the University of Minnesota by medical photographer, Robert Wolfe, in 1972. This picture demonstrates the remarkable early development of a preborn baby at only six weeks after conception.

Consider This Testimony

"Eleven years ago while giving an anesthetic for a ruptured ectopic pregnancy (at 8 weeks gestation). I was handed what I believe was the smallest living human ever seen. The embryonic sac was intact and transparent. Within the sac was a tiny human male swimming extremely vigorously in the amniotic fluid, while attached to the wall by the umbilical cord. This tiny human was perfectly developed, with long, tapering fingers, feet and toes. It was almost transparent, as regards the skin, and the delicate arteries and veins were prominent to the ends of the fingers.

"The baby was extremely alive and swam about the sac approximately one time per second, with a natural swimmer's stroke. This tiny human did not look at all like the photos and drawings and models of 'embryos' which I had seen, nor did it look like a few embryos I have been able to observe since then, obviously because this one was alive!

"When the sac was opened, the tiny human immediately lost his life and took on the appearance of what is accepted as the appearance of an embryo at this stage of life (with blunt extremities etc.)."

Statement by Paul E. Rockwell, M.D., anesthesiologist, as quoted by Dr. and Mrs. J.C. Willke in Handbook on Abortion.

Feet of Baby at Ten Weeks

Dr. Russell Sacco of Oregon took this picture of the perfectly formed feet of a 10-week-old aborted baby waiting for disposal in a pathologist's laboratory. The feet in the picture are held between the doctor's thumb and forefinger.

Don't Make My Mistakes

Michelle C.

Some people say that abortion is "an informed decision between a woman and her physician." You hear that a lot. But the fact is that most women never meet the abortionist until they are on the table, as happened in my case.

I was 18 years old when I got pregnant. I wasn't serious about my boyfriend. It was a casual relationship. Since I had already enlisted in the Air Force, I thought I had to have an abortion in order to make something out of my life.

My best friend drove me to the abortion clinic. I was there for about four hours. It was like an assembly line. When the ultrasound was being done I asked to see it. But this wasn't allowed (so much for "an informed decision"). Then I asked how far along I was. I was told I was nine-and-a-half weeks pregnant. That hit me hard. I knew then that my baby was further developed than I had thought. I started doubting, and wanted to talk to my friend. But I wasn't allowed to do that either.

When it was my turn the nurse told me that I was going to feel some discomfort, like strong menstrual cramps. The truth is that the abortion was more pain than I've ever felt in my life. It felt like my insides were literally being sucked out of my body. Afterwards I went into shock!

After the abortion, I tried to make up for the abortion by trying to get pregnant again. I wanted my baby back. I never got pregnant again. I don't know if I can ever have another baby. I named my baby. I found out later that this is part of the grieving process.

I ended up in the hospital with bulimia two-and-one-half years later. I felt that no one had punished me for what I had done so I was punishing myself. I became obsessed with women who were pregnant, with women who would talk about their pregnancy. My life was in shambles! I was suffering from post-abortion trauma.

When I was 21 years old God brought me help through a woman who was involved in pro-life activism. She helped me a lot. I went through a post-abortion counseling program called "Conquerors." God not only forgave me, He challenged me to help others. I answered the challenge!

I started picketing and sidewalk counseling. There is a healing process that comes from getting involved in the pro-life movement. I talk to youth groups and students about abstinence and I share my testimony. To them, and to you, I plead, "Please don't make the same mistakes I did."

Michelle

My Own Private Idaho

Greeks and Geeks

By ANDREW LONGETEIG

For TNH

Leaving the University of Idaho and its Greek system has been a breath of fresh air—a break from Greek politics, parties and pranks.

Here at the University of New Hampshire, I'm in relative obscurity cooped up in my third-floor Congreve dorm room. I don't have to worry about waking up on the sleeping porch with snow on my bed, looking for a date to the initiation dance or making time for the weekly Monday night chapter meeting.

I'm coming off of a semester where I served as Interfraternity Council Public Relations Chair and the corresponding secretary for my fraternity, Beta Theta Pi. So, it's rather nice being a "dormie" for a change and having a few extra hours to do what I truly enjoy—reading Homer's "The Iliad" over and over and over.

The UI Greek system, about 15 years younger than the university itself, began in 1905 when Kappa Sigma fraternity was founded. Today, 21 fraternities and 8 sororities comprise UI's Greek system.

In this week's MOPI, I've decided to take the five fraternities and one sorority that UI and UNH have in common, but describing only UI's reputations and tendencies. So, to hell with Greek PR, I'm going to tell it like it is.

Sigma Alpha Epsilon

As on most campuses, SAE is also a strong fraternity at UI in terms of membership numbers and tradition. They are well-known for their social events, however, many people think alcohol is more important to them than community service or campus leadership.

SAE is usually in the top five in intramurals each year and is in the middle of the pack academically. About 55 brothers live in the impressive brick chapter house, built circa 1926.

Sigma Nu

Our rivals right across the street on Greek row. The Snakes are consistently strong at UI, although their Rush numbers were low in the fall. Out of all other chapters, Sigma Nu has the most football players (probably around seven or eight), and most football players, whether members or not, hang out there on weekends.

They don't have the greatest reputation with women on campus and many are seen as arrogant loud-mouths, but some of my closest friends outside my own chapter are Sigma Nus.

Their in-house membership hovers close to 50 each year and their chapter house is arguably, on the exterior, the best-looking. Sigma Nu is comparable to SAE in grades and intramurals.

Pi Kappa Alpha

Their current architecturally challenged chapter house was Sigma Chi's before a drug bust in the 1960s. The Pikes tied SAE for top honors in fall rush numbers with 27. However, the Pikes have been accused by many Greeks for dirty rushing.

They have some good characters in the house, but my chapter refers to them as "weasels" for some unsportsmanlike conduct during an ultimate Frisbee playoff game.

Alpha Phi

After a 1993 incident where a drunk Alpha Phi sorority pledge became paralyzed after falling off her third story balcony—suing three fraternities (mine, SAE and Pike), UI and Alpha Phi—the sorority has rarely been seen in a favorable light.

More noticeably than other sororities, Alpha Phi members can be a bit conceited. For the most part, they have the most attractive females. They've been trying to change their image, though, and I noticed a substantial change between their 1994 and 1995 pledge class, the latter being more friendly. Alpha Phi has had very high turnover the last few years.

Due to the high turnover, anywhere from 55 to 65 girls live in the chapter house, built sometime in the early 1930s.

Alpha Tau Omega

If there was an Animal House at UI, ATO would probably fit the role. They are always in the bottom three in grades, but their rush numbers are usually solid, yet rarely spectacular.

ATO holds the largest party of the year, "Tin Canner," where thousands of aluminum cans are tied on strings and hung from the house making it resemble a tin castle. At around midnight, the cans are shaken, yanked and eventually torn down by the ATO brothers, producing an ear drum-shattering sound that can be heard in Seattle (kiddin').

All of the cans are recycled and the proceeds go to charity.

The brothers are rambunctious, but also easy to get along and socialize with. The chapter has around 45 to 50 brothers that live in a brick house built in the 1930s.

Lambda Chi Alpha

One of the weaker fraternities at UI, but they doubled their fall pledge class from five in '94. Lambda Chi used to be strong in the 1980s, but poor leadership and a few probations hindered their success.

There are some swell kids in the chapter, but some sketchy ones, too. They do fairly well in grades, but terribly on the athletic field.

A lot of the Greek organizations I listed don't exactly have a favorable reputation at UI. Keep in mind there are many other sororities, i.e., Kappa Kappa Gamma, Alpha Gamma Delta, Pi Beta Phi, and fraternities like Phi Gamma Delta, Sigma Chi and Delta Chi that are more respectable and representative of UI Greeks.

ONE GROUP CRASHES, THE OTHER RIDES ON

By BRAD ANDERSON

For TNH

Early off in 1996 we have the demise and re-birth of two bands literally a world apart. Ride, the Oxford England quartet who revolutionized shoe-gazer dream-pop have released their final album called "Tarantula." San Francisco based Lilyvolt, an up-and-coming alternative act who also have a dreamy ethereal feel to their music, have recently released their new appropriately titled EP "Five New Songs."

Ride, whose melodic tunes embody echoing distorted guitars, dreamy vocals and hypnotic bass riffs, ends sadly enough with their greatest work to date. Mark Gardner and Andy Bell, the songwriting/vocals/lead guitarist duo have called it quits, leaving themselves and drummer Loz Colbert and bassist Steve Querault room to follow other ambitions. "Black Nite Crash," "Tarantula's" opener and first single, returns Ride to the rough-edged eclectic musical style developed in their previous albums, "Leave them All Behind" and "Nowhere."

Other notable songs that place Ride at the head of the Slowdive/Schroeder/Lush/gazer scene are "Mary Anne" and "Castle on the

Hill." This album is laden with premier songs, almost reflecting the irony of the group's demise. . . save the best for last. FYI, "Tarantula" will be deleted from production according to strong label rumors.

Lilyvolt, on the other hand, appear to have solid ground under their feet on the West Coast, a growing fan backing, and also a prospective future on the alternative music scene. Musically, Lilyvolt fall somewhere between the Innocence Mission, 10,000 Maniacs and Boston's very own Knots and Crosses.

However, their style is a unique blend of Kate Donnellon's semi-angelic vocals, rhythmic guitars and bass wielded by Michael Papenburg and Greg Merriman melded together with the ethereal keyboards of Steve Cohen and precision percussion of Welshman Steve Price brought together by Welshman Steve Price.

"Five New Songs" consists of brilliant mini-pop-rock ballads (with a dash of angst) such as "World at Your Feet," "Still Tomorrow," "Love and Hate," "River Baby" and my personal favorite, "Days of Longing." Donnellon's vocals echo hints of Natalie Merchant, however her personal style of vocalizing reflects a more forgiving, youthful energy. Lilyvolt are also an influential force in the Rock Against Rape Movement in San Francisco and played a monumental benefit concert supporting this cause last October.

Lilyvolt probably won't hit this side of the country for a while. However, you can check out their informative Web site to get the ultimate low down on Lilyvolt.

MUSO Movie

Update

All movies shown at the MUB are $2 for students with an UNH ID and $3 for anyone else.

Blue in the face: An almost completely extemporaneous film directed by Wayne Wang ("The Joy Luck Club") and starring "Pulp Fiction's" Harvey Keitel and "The Usual Suspects" Giancarlo Esposito. This sequel to "Smoke," which centered on the events of a cigar store in Brooklyn, accommodates all that couldn't fit into the first one. Check out this brilliant story and amazing film.

Creature from the Black Lagoon: One of the most famous 3-D films of the fifties. Put on your MUSO-provided 3-D glasses and watch a horror tale of a prehistoric gill-man who quietly inhabits a mysterious lagoon, which becomes disturbed by a team of scientists.

Feminist Film Festival: Five movies will be shown — "Margaret Sanger Documentary," "Mujeria," "A Girl's Own Story," "Coffee Colored Children," "Motherlove." These movies will only be $1 with an UNH ID.

Wrongfully Protesting: Rev.

Jesse Jackson asked Oscar nominees and presenters to wear a rainbow ribbon or some other similar to the red ribbon which supports the AIDS victims at this past Monday night's Academy Awards. What for? To support Jackson's protest against the movie industry's alleged exclusion of minorities from jobs and positions of authority.

Oprah Winfrey was outraged. She said Jackson picked the wrong year to protest. Winfrey has facts to back up her anger: The talk show host is conducting interviews at the awards, while Quincy Jones produced the event and Whoopi Goldberg was the host.

"When I heard Jesse was asking people to boycott the Oscars I got on the phone to Quincy, and believe me, he was furious and so was I," Winfrey said last Friday. "Particularly because this isn't the year, if ever you were going to do it. [This year is] the most multi-ethnic Oscars show anybody's ever seen," Winfrey added.

No Longer Saved by the Bell:

Remember that movie that received large amounts of hype, but when it showed, it bit? Oh yeah, "Showgirls," with that prissy girl from "Saved by the Bell" who turned into a Vegas stripper. Elizabeth Berkley is her name. Unfortunately she did not attend the award ceremony for her movie "Showgirls." The Golden Raspberry Awards deemed Berkley's movie the Worst Picture of the Year.

The fun didn't stop there though. Centered in a Hollywood hotel, "Showgirls" received another six razzies. Among them, Berkley has now been awarded as the Worst Actress and Worst New Star.

Lost in the bashing, but not ignored, was Demi Moore's attempt to rewrite an American classic — Nathaniel Hawthorne's "The Scarlet Letter." It won for worst remake.

Oh no, Pestering Sounds!:

The never dying Beach Boys are making another come back with a new album called "Pet Sounds." The album will be added to a four-disc box set marking the band's 30th anniversary. Being released on May 14, "The Pet Sounds Sessions — A 30th Anniversary Collection" will feature rare alternate takes, incomplete vocal and instrumental tracks and the first take of "Good Vibrations."

Also re-released will be a single CD version of "Pet Sounds" with three bonus tracks — "Hang Onto Your Ego" and two versions of "God Only Knows."

Still Stuck in the 'Birdcage':

"The Birdcage" is still the nation's most popular movie for the third weekend in a row, grossing $13.7 million.

Lagging behind in second is the hijack thriller "Executive Decision," earning an estimated $9.8 million. "Diabolique" followed with $5.7 million; "Up Close and Personal" and "Ho'meward Bound II: Lost in San Francisco," tied at $2.9 million; "Mr. Holland's Opus," survives with $2 million; "Down Periscope," $1.8 million; and "Broken Arrow," $1.5 million.

Relaxing Madonna:

The homeless drifter who stalked singer Madonna and threatened to cut her throat recently entered prison. Los Angeles Superior Court slapped Robert Dewey Hoskins with the maximum term given for stalking, making terrorist threats against and assaulting Madonna: 10 years. She can rest easy for a while now.

'Wade'ing too Deep:

The city of Palms Park, the spring-training home of the Red Sox in Fort Myers, Fla., may be a great place to watch baseball. But on display inside the park are two distastefully chosen murals of Wade Boggs. Sox Fans realize that the third baseman is an MVP, but what irks these fans is the fact that the guy never played in that ballpark! Boggs also sports a Yankee uniform.

Former GM Lou Gorman pointed out the paintings and asked, "Whaddaya think? Do you think I should take these down?" Yes, Lou, right away.

Fox TV seems to be very serious about "upgrading cross promotions between networks and advertisers." Fox plans to tease the viewer during next week's episode of "Melrose Place" with the words "See what develops. . ." then a camera flash flooding the screen, followed by the words "Brought to you by Polaroid."

"See What Develops" is Polaroid's current marketing slogan. Sounds catchy.

Exhaling in to a Breathyzer:

Beverly Hills police arrested actor-director Forest Whitaker last week on drunken-driving charges. Whitaker, who starred in the film "The Crying Game" and directed "Waiting to Exhale," was pulled over after his Mercedes-Benz was spotted allegedly speeding and weaving on Sunset Boulevard.

A police spokeswoman said Whitaker was ordered to appear in court on April 10.

Review of the Week. . . Busta Rhymes THE COMING (Elektra) BY KC

The general party scene remembers Onyx, and their anthem "Slam" from a couple of summers ago, and they remember three guys who yelled their rhymes and had raspy voices when doing so. While it became a marketable fad for a month or two, true hip-hop heads remembered Leaders of the New School (L.O.N.S.) and the originator of that style, Busta Rhymes. Now it's '96, and L.O.N.S. never got the record sales that Onyx did, and Busta got a little pissed. With his new solo album, "The Coming," Busta is trying to get the sales but maintain the amount of respect he's gained over the years on the underground tip.

The first single, "WOO-HAH! Got You All in Check" has been knocking over college and mix show DJ's (self-included) for about a month now, as Busta speaks to those that stole his style. The B-side, "Everything Remains Ra" is somewhat more low-key, but nevertheless an enjoyable listen.

It's been the unfortunate trend lately in hip hop to come out with a strong single, generate the buzz, and then come out with a mediocre album, where the single was the best song (see: Mad Skillz). It was a relief to hear the rest of THE COMING because that's not the case at all. Top to bottom, this album is solid. There's "Ill Vib" featuring Q-Tip of Tribe Called Quest, "Keep it Movin'" featuring the rest of L.O.N.S., and an 8-minute jewel of a track called "Flipmode Squad meets Def Squad" featuring Keith Murray, Redman, Jamal, Rampage, and Lord Have Mercy - a newcomer with an original flow of his own. Then there's the upcoming single, "It's a Part" (featuring Zhane) and if this isn't playing at parties anytime soon, then you're at a lame-ass party. Kill the DJ and leave.

Though it's only the end of March, it's a given that this album will be one of the top five of 1996. Anybody planning on going to see Coolio claiming that they like rap music should be at the store picking this album up, to see what hip hop should be.

FEATURED SHOW OF THE WEEK: Mothership Connection

Tune in Wednesday nights from 8-11 p.m. to the DJs that put the 'hump' in 'hump day' on The Mothership Connection. KC, Doug Nice and Goose bring the real hip-hop to ya, including the latest cuts, the slept-on classics, and the weekly "most hated record," which destroys the worst record from the past week. The Mothership Connection. . . no gimmicks.

"On Being Care-Free"

I have been struggling to organize my thoughts lately. It seems that the barrage of course work, the disruption of spring break and the rapidly approaching end of the semester have sufficiently stunned my brain. Admittedly, I have found it difficult to think of or do much else than to simply "get by" and complete my assignments dutifully. My attempts to gain admission to and select a graduate school have certainly taken up time, but my schedule has been no busier this semester than any other. So why have I encountered this intellectual impasse? The more I thought about it, the more I found myself gazing wearily out of windows, staring into space. Then it dawned on me that what was stifling me was right in front of my eyes. I was not restricted by the natural environment per se, but rather by a persistent, though subconscious desire to get away from it all, to finish up, to be done and just relax. Perhaps, this is a classic case of post-spring break withdrawal syndrome. However, I think it suggested to me something a bit more substantial than that.

As I reflected on my situation, I found that the gradually changing seasons, my approaching graduation, the doldrums of business as usual at UNH was taking away my energy. I was trying to escape. I could muster spurts of concentration to get me through 50 minutes of class when needed, but my extended attention was without direction. As a person who consistently asks questions about social conditions, the quality of life, the purpose of efforts, I was at a loss of words. The daily grind had taken it out of me. This derailing came at a particularly crucial moment in my tenure as student body president. I, along with Student Body Vice President Virginia Dearani, had recently delivered the first State of the University Address and together had published several significant articles in TNH. The crux of this public conversation had been issues of student and community health and wellness, particularly questions of psychological, emotional, and spiritual health. In order to understand these issues we conducted research and talked widely with students, and in the process we dealt considerably with materials and information which were disturbing, enraging, and even saddening.

It is necessary to point out that students, and faculty, staff and administrators for that matter, are facing tremendous and increasing challenges and threats to their health. Sometimes these threats are physical, other times emotional and psychological. This is particularly true for women students, gay, lesbian, bisexual and transgendered students, working class students, students with disabilities, non-traditional students and students of color or religious minorities. Yet, there is a pervasive community un-healthiness that can only be characterized as a spiritual crisis. I am not referring to a failure to heed a specific religious doctrine. Rather, I am talking about a profound and deep rooted crisis of purpose and meaning. The drive to be care-free is unhealthy.

In a conversation with students earlier this semester, I had the opportunity to talk about what it is that students believe they do at UNH. In other words, what brought them here, what they hope to gain (and share!) from the experience, and, more importantly, how it all fits into the larger picture of their lives and the direction of this nation. Most students were at a loss of words, though they all agreed that the questions were important. They simply could not articulate a sense of meaning, of grounded purpose. Surely, some students quickly retorted that they were here to prepare for career X. However, when asked why they had chosen career X, few could give an answer beyond financial gain or a one-dimensional "I just want to help people."

I applaud the desire to help and empower others. Indeed, it's what I try to do everyday. However, it seems that many students believe that a certain degree or professional credentials are needed before a commitment can be made for social change. This is simply not the case. There are plenty of ways to improve your own and other people's lives before becoming a Ph.D. or M.D. or J.D. esquire. But in order to do so, we must think much harder about the ways that our lives are connected, about the ways that our living influences the lives of others. Martin Luther King, Jr. spoke often about the "inescapable network of mutuality" that binds us together, the "single garment of destiny." Not surprisingly most theology, biology, ecology and philosophy supports this view. In addition, developments in chaos mathematics and contemporary physics agree. We are in this together. So why is it that we seem to fail so miserably at discussing and creating community in this society? A failure to talk honestly and continually about issues of purpose and meaning is one major reason.

I would submit that many students, faculty, staff and administrators have not developed a healthy and life-affirming concept of meaning and purpose in their lives and their work. Indeed, much of what gets done around here depends upon our silence in this regard. We have yet to learn to fully appreciate ourselves and each other in the present moment. To show respect and express a deeply felt commitment to each other's well-being. The institution has not found an arrangement that promotes healthy living and learning. Our academic culture discourages caring and personal connection to the material we learn. The result is not simply apathy, but rather a very different concept, anomie; a sense of alienation, self-estrangement, insecurity and confusion.

What seems clear is that we will continue to face chronic crises of violence, intolerance, inordinate sickness from stress, rising rates of mental distress, anxiety and frustration at a community level until we can begin to see that the purpose of life is life. The point of our being here together at this university, on this earth, is exactly our being here peacefully together in understanding. If conditions of living and learning at UNH are to improve, qualitatively, people must begin to answer questions of teleology, of ultimate purpose. We are at a loss of leaders, from all constituencies, who can offer a social and institutional vision which answers, or at least guides inquiries, to these concerns. The issues that are being raised during this time of student body elections and the search for the new university president are centering around these questions, especially those issues of health, academic "success," and the environment. A crucial starting point in this endeavor would be to re-visit the university mission statement as a community event. From there, perhaps, we can make some meaningful strides toward a life-enhancing experience.

The Commuter's Choice: Heidi Kendall and Ed Prisby

A friend of mine—a fellow commuter—recently summed up the feeling of most of us commuters with the following quote: “We’re getting a raw deal!” (He used harsher words than “raw deal” though.)

I have been a commuter for almost two years. As one, I often feel absolutely helpless to do anything of any importance. There hasn’t seemed to be any recent initiatives to improve the life of the commuter. The MUB was finished far past schedule. The parking situation has escalated to near critical mass. Commuter services have seemed to fall off the UNH map. General school spirit, which is severely lacking on-campus, is downright abysmal off-campus. The term, “Get the hell outta Durham” could also say, “Stay the hell off of campus.”

What I thought were my own gripes I have found out in my time here are the gripes and problems of the majority of students at UNH. Yes, commuters make up a majority of students at UNH. Whether you live in Nick’s Bricks, Manchester or any distance from campus in between, you are on the same boat. You are one of over 6,000 students who are severely overlooked and underrepresented here.

There are plenty of reasons that we are in the predicament we are today. Each one could be a forum piece in itself. However, I feel that there are two main reasons that feed into each other into a vicious circle. There is the lack of interest and/or lack of ability to give adequate representation to fellow commuters. Because of distance, work commitments or general comfort with one’s situation, commuters are less likely to participate in decisions that affect them. However, it can also be argued that the powers that be do not reach out to us. Mailboxes in the MUB are a perfect example of this. Many commuters did not realize that they were going to receive their mail in the MUB until they got a letter in late November saying they were. The problem was most commuters felt they didn’t have an adequate say in the decision. While the opportunities were there to speak out, they were unaware of them.

This must change. Student leadership must be the catalyst for change.

This is why, on Tuesday, April 9, and Wednesday, April 10, we need to start the process. Do this by voting for Heidi Kendall and Ed Prisby for Student Body President and Vice President. While other tickets are merely “looking on all of the challenges that face commuters,” Kendall/Prisby is the only ticket with a coherent plan of action. In their platform, they have continuously and thoroughly brought up point after point that makes sense not only to a commuter standpoint; but to a university standpoint.

This is just a few of their positions. Some are obvious, some obscure and some controversial. However, they all show a commitment to commuters:

1. Eliminate Meters in C-Lot.

Just when you thought parking on this campus was bad enough, along come a group of parking meters taking up valuable spaces. We can do better than that. I personally feel it cheapens the image of the campus. Kendall/Prisby have vowed to work on a solution to this. It might just be:

2. A PARKING GARAGE!

Despite what you might have read, a parking garage is a necessity if we want to improve this campus. The concept of a walking campus when the majority of students are commuters is ludicrous. I understand the position of those who feel that we are jeopardizing the environment, but remind yourself of the obvious pros:

— Environment: A guaranteed parking spot helps eliminate unnecessary driving and idling that occurs when people have to wait for spots that aren’t there.

— Security: 24-hour patrol, protection from the elements, well-lighted spots, centralized location that reduces walking at night. Well-lighted paths leading to the garage.

— Fables: Some would lead you to believe that a parking garage is an evil presence that will kill off all carpool and bus services. NONSENSE! You can take advantage of the lot by sectioning parts of it off for car-poolers and give them a reduced parking rate. As for those who use the bus, there is always going to be a population of students who don’t have a car and find carpooling to be impractical.

Kendall/Prisby are committed to the research and development of such a plan. A parking garage may be the most beneficial thing that could happen to the commuter population of UNH and Kendall/Prisby are leading the way.

3. E-Mail Carpool Lists:

To fight off the assertion that Kendall/Prisby are against carpooling, they are pioneering the effort to have a fully active carpool list over UNHINFO; the school’s computer network. This would be practical and necessary for a successful program. The list can be updated as well as modified to serve commuters.

4. Credit For Student Activities:

This obviously benefits commuters in one major area: It gives us incentive to join activities on campus. It would be much easier for myself and I’m sure most of you to get involved, be active, and make a difference if there were more effective ways to go about it. This gives commuters more of a chance to get involved by freeing up time in one’s busy schedule.

5. Make Tenant/Landlord Information Readily Available:

I work with Ed Prisby as an intern at UNH Legal Services. Ed and I have, on many occasions, helped John Murphy (the student lawyer) with research and information gathering of cases concerning students who have had trouble with their landlords. These problems include: landlords illegally keeping students’ security deposits, squalid conditions, illegal searches, lack of needed security (Just to name a few). John will tell you, as will I, that Ed is serious about the rights of the tenant/commuter and he will make this a top priority if elected.

6. Communication:

As a commuter, it can be tough to become informed with what is happening on campus. Kendall/Prisby have a better way. They will have weekly radio addresses on WUNH. They will have a weekly column in The New Hampshire. They will speak all over campus, including commuter forums at the MUB on a regular basis. They will be seen outside Room 119E. They will be at events on campus. Their ears will be open; their presence will be seen.

As someone who has known Heidi and Ed and talked with them extensively, I have the utmost confidence in them. The work ethic in Heidi is unbelievable and Ed’s passion for the issues is well-known on campus. Heidi’s belief that a strong campus means including the entire student population was evident in last semester’s Homecoming of which she was chair. (For those who are new here, it was a rousing success.) She is also chair for this year’s Spring Fling. As for Ed, a commuter himself, his opinions are backed by straightforward logic and practical solutions. Also, if you have read his Forum piece from Friday, March 22, you would see passion and compassion rare in society today.

If what you just read sounds like the type of vision you see for the University of New Hampshire, then vote for Heidi Kendall and Ed Prisby on April 9 and 10.

Defense will lead Wildcats to respect

UNH determined not to let injuries slow them down; Urquhart upbeat

By CHRIS BOUSQUET
Staff Reporter

Strong teams earn respect, and the University of New Hampshire men's lacrosse team is determined to be just such a team this season.

Plagued by injuries at key positions, sporadic scoring and inconsistent play last season, the Wildcats turned in a dismal 3-13 final record. This year's campaign, however, promises to be the turning point for the program, as the Wildcats have nursed their injuries and deficiencies and have jumped out to a 3-1 opening record.

The Wildcat squad demonstrated excellent potential in their early games, proving that they possess the talent, the drive and the ability to be a powerful competitor. Despite an early disappointment to Lafayette, the team stepped up their play and blew past Fairfield and Providence in Orlando, Fla. In the team's first game back up north, against Holy Cross, the Wildcats continued to be impressive, recording a 11-9 victory.

Inexperience, which greatly hindered the team last season, will not be a factor this year, as the Wildcats return four of their top five scorers from last season, Dave Hanchett, Bill Mungovan, Russ Laky and Pat Quagrello, two outstanding goaltenders, Ed Kennie and Gary Foster, as well as much of their defensive unit.

The Wildcats also picked up offensive experience in junior transfer attacker Chris Bromby, who has already tallied 13 goals and 3 assists.

The off season has also provided the Wildcats with time to heal their wounds. UNH found itself beleaguered by injuries last season, and was forced to fill many gaps in its lineup. This year returns many of the Wildcat wounded, most notably, co-captain and defensive leader Jamil Benzekri.

Benzekri was forced to redshirt the 1995 season with a knee injury. Kevin White, another redshirt last season, will also return to solidify the defensive line.

Defense will be an important focus for the Wildcat squad this year.

"The key is going to be good defense," said head coach Jim Urquhart. "We can't let the other teams score a lot of goals."

The Wildcats will look to last season's core defensive squad of Reed Worthen, Scott Marcoulier, Jason Swett, Mike Murphy and Rich Cifuni to once again control the opposing attack. Benzekri will be expected to be the emotional and physical leader of the crew.

Offensively, the Wildcats have already displayed a strong attack potential. Urquhart stresses the need for offensive contributions from a variety of players.

"We need to spread the scoring around," he said.

So far UNH has met this challenge, as at least four different Wildcats have scored in each contest. Urquhart is expecting consistent contributions from his veteran scorers as well as freshmen Mike Szweda, a high school All-American, and Neal Anderson.

Solid victories remain the team's prerogative.

"We want to do as well as we can in the NAC (North Atlantic Conference) and finish the season at least .500," Urquhart said. "Maybe make national rankings. We looking to come out with a winning season."

Wins, however, will not be easy to come by as the Wildcats face a brutal conference and non-conference schedule. UNH will be forced to tackle over five nationally ranked lacrosse teams, including heavily touted University of Massachusetts.

Along with Urquhart, the Wildcats will be led in their efforts by senior captains Laky, Quagrello and Benzekri. All three players have been instrumental in period.

Mike Gilligan cut UNH's lead to one with 3:04 gone on the clock in the third, as he rifled one past Foster. The Wildcats quickly responded, however, when Hanchett notched his second goal of the game unassisted with 3:30 left.

Hartford's Jason Gilford brought his team within one, as he tallied the final goal of the period with 30 seconds left.

Fisher knotted the contest once more early in the fourth period when he slipped one past Foster at the 4:56 mark. This was as close as the Hawks would get, though, as Quagrello gave the Wildcats a lead that they would not relinquish with 8:47 left to play.

Mungovan added his second of the game with 2:42 remaining to push the Wildcats' lead to two. Gilligan rounded out the scoring as he tallied his second with 1:41 left in the game, leaving the final score at 9-8.

Urquhart was pleased with his strong Wildcat attack.

"We kept the lead for most of the game," he said. "Offensively, we did well. The scoring was spread across the board."

It was the Wildcats' stable defense, however, that made the difference in the contest.

LOSS from back page

have been dealt.

"Our would-be No. 3 player is out with mono right now," said Caron. "We're obviously going to miss him a lot."

Caron thinks the team was helped out by participating in the Vermont Invitational earlier this month, gaining some needed experience.

"This was the first time we got to play up there," said Caron. "We got lots of tennis under our belts and that's going to help us a lot. It also helped the team bond and become more familiar with each other."

"We played solid defense," Urquhart said. "All three low defensemen played well. If you keep a team under 10 goals, you have a good chance of beating them."

The head coach emphasized, though, that there is still much work to be done.

"We still made some mental errors. We need to get tougher on defense and stronger on offense and avoid mental mistakes."

"We're a good team now. We'll get better as we get to play more regularly... as the team's chemistry builds... and players mesh even more."

The Wildcats next face a formidable challenge as they prepare to face Hofstra, a nationally ranked, top ten competitor. Urquhart, however, is not worried about his squad, and his game plan is simple.

"We have everything to gain and nothing to lose. We just can't let it get out of hand. They have players that we have to shut down. We don't want to get caught up in a fast-paced game and get worn down. They have a lot of depth. We need to focus on our game plan, not to get into a run-and-gun game, but play more of a six-on-six game."

The game is slated to take place on Saturday at 1 p.m. at Hofstra University.

With 10 additional matches scheduled for this spring, the young Wildcats are looking to improve their skills for the future and make their mark.

"The goal for this season is simply to get better, build for next year," said Caron. "We graduated to the top three players from a year ago and right now we are just struggling to take that next step up."

The next action for New Hampshire will be Monday when the 'Cats pay a visit to UMass-Lowell. The team will also play host to the University of Hartford on April 3. The match begins at 3 p.m.

Hall, Sullivan, Umile to participate First-ever eastern All Star game to take place at Whittemore

By JASON GRUCEL
Staff Reporter

On Saturday, April 6, the best college hockey players in the East will convene at the Whittemore Center at 7 p.m. for the first-ever Eastern Senior College All-Star Game.

In previous seasons, the top players from the East squared off against top players from the West. Due to the cost of travel, the Eastern Senior College All-Star Game, where players from Hockey East will take on players from the Eastern Collegiate Athletic Conference (ECAC), will most likely become an annual event.

In addition, five players from Div. II and III schools have been selected for each roster.

UNH head coach Dick Umile said the plans are for Vermont, a member of the ECAC, to host the game next season, and Three Wildcats, Umile, captain Mike Sullivan and assistant captain Todd Hall will be participating in the game.

Umile, Bowdoin College coach Terry Meagher and Northeastern assistant David Quinn will coach the White Squad (Hockey East).

Sullivan will wear No. 8, the number he wore for UNH, while Hall will wear No. 32, the number he wore for UNH before he switched to No. 12 in tribute to his sister, Leah, earlier this season.

"It's going to be fun but I'm sure it will be competitive because of the nature of the competition between the leagues," Umile said. "The guys will play hard and compete.

"It's ideal because this is the centennial year of college hockey and it's the first time we've had this."

Tickets cost $10 but are only $5 with a valid UNH ID.

A portion of the proceeds will help injured Suffolk University hockey player John Gilpatrick.

"The tickets are going to a great cause," Umile said. "The hockey community is a family and we're going to help support a kid that could really use some help. It's important that the students at UNH support this cause and show that we're a great hockey community."

"It's a chance to play with other guys," Umile said. "They respect each other from playing throughout the season and now they get to come together and play on the same team."

Umile noted it was quite an honor for Sullivan and Hall to be selected.

"No question it's a great honor," he said. "That's selected by the coaches in the conference."

According to Umile, Providence's Justin Gould, BC's Don Chase and Maine's Brad Purdie will not be able to attend.

"It should be some great hockey," Umile said. "We hope to get a good turnout. It's a compliment to the facility and the school that we were chosen to host this. Hopefully we can come through and have a good hockey game."

Women's lacrosse off to rocky 1-4 start

Youthful Wildcats look to rebound from early season short-comings

By TONY BARNEA
TNH Reporter

After five games the University of New Hampshire women's lacrosse team knows there's only one way to go to improve their dismal 1-4 overall, 0-2 North Atlantic Conference record.

A combination of inexperience between the pipes and lack of goal scoring have put the Wildcats into a deep hole in their first season as a member of the NAC.

"We have a small upper class group, but they're all really strong leaders," said first-year UNH head coach Erica Harris. "We have some really talented freshman that have come in and are really working hard to learn things quickly."

UNH began their journey on the road March 15 against conference rival Towson State. Unfortunately their trek was made into something of a nightmare, losing 16-2 to the powerful Tigers. Freshmen Wildcat goaltenders Jen Broadbent and Shelby Hodgkins, who split the duties in net, made their collegiate debuts against the Tigers. Senior co-captain Dottie Catlin was the lone point scorer netting two goals.

"[Towson] was an eye-opener," said sophomore Nicole Rhodes. "We knew what we had to work on after the game. It was just a learning experience."

"Towson is definitely a strong program," said Harris. "We had nine people in there that had basically never spent time in a college game. They gave it their all the entire game and we learned a lot."

Two days later in Philadelphia, the

"We have a long season ahead of us. I think we're realistic about what we need to do. Every game there's a significant improvement in some way. We're definitely building."
—Erica Harris, head coach

Wildcats suffered their second loss of the season, falling to the Drexel Dragons, 13-6. UNH was without Catlin, who sustained ligament damage in the game against Towson State. To replace their co-captain, the Wildcats relied on a well-balanced scoring attack. Senior Katie Blankley and sophomore Missy Long registered two goals apiece while Rhodes chipped in a goal and an assist.

The lone victory of this brief season came last Wednesday under the lights at Boston University, as the Wildcats exploded offensively with a 20-12 win. Catlin, wasted no time in returning to the lineup, scoring five goals while her classmate Blankley fired home six goals.

NAC Rookie of the Week Courtney Davis headed the attack scoring her first two goals and assisting on seven in only her third match as a Wildcat. Two other UNH freshmen, Meg Caterall and Taryn Litterbrant, notched their first collegiate goals as well.

"We had two games under our belt so we went in there with some confidence," said Harris. "We were on that night. Both the offense and defense worked as a unit."

Hoping to spark up a winning streak, UNH clashed with the Yale Bulldogs on the road last Saturday. Despite a solid game from Hodgkins (12 saves) in net, the Wildcats were thumped 15-5, dropping their record to 1-3. Davis, Blankley, Catlin, Rhodes and Long provided the scoring for the Wildcats.

Yale's strength and depth coming off the bench proved to be too much to handle as they wore down the sparse Wildcat squad.

"Every team has a bench that they can go to," said Rhodes. "We only have three subs. So when we're tired we can't look to the bench to get a breather and come right back in. [Yale] sent six players out at a time so their starting lineup was getting rest."

"In the preseason, we really prepared for it," said Harris. "We focused on running a lot and getting everyone in shape anticipating the fact we didn't have many subs. People also came into the season in a lot better shape than they did last year which helped a lot."

On Tuesday, the road woes continue against Holy Cross. Once again, the rookie netminder Hodgkins had a spectacular game making 11 saves only to go down with a 12-6 loss. UNH found themselves in shock at halftime scoring only one goal in the first 30 minutes of the match. Last year's 18-2 whipping of the Crusaders perhaps made the Wildcats take their opposition lightly in their game plan.

"We went in laughing and joking around," said Rhodes. "No one was catching anything during warm-ups because we were taking them lightly. They played a zone that we just couldn't break."

UNH tried to amend their first-half failure by pressing Holy Cross in the second half. The Wildcats scored five goals, including two from Catlin, only to suffer their fourth loss of the season on just one win.

"We have a long season ahead of us," said Harris. "I think we're realistic about what we need to do. Every game there's a significant improvement in some way. We're definitely building."

The Wildcats return to action on the road this weekend at Colgate on Friday afternoon, then at Cornell on Sunday. Their home opener is scheduled for next Tuesday against Dartmouth at 3 p.m. at Cowell Stadium.

UNH makes adjustments for '96 campaign

By TONY BARNEA
TNH Reporter

Don't be alarmed if you're attending a UNH women's lacrosse match this season and things around you feel new.

After all, the Wildcats are beginning their first season in the North Atlantic Conference after 12 years in the ECAC. Along with the new conference comes new talent as UNH will have to deal with the inexperience within the lineup due to the loss of eight seniors. Players making their Wildcat debut this year are Shelby Hodgkins, Courtney Davis, Taryn Litterbrant, Meg Caterall, Katie Phillips and Rebecca Perkins.

Perhaps the most significant change among the team took place at the head coach position. Taking over the reigns from Sandy Weatherall will be first-year head coach Erica Harris.

"I have a lot of respect for her to step up to the position," said sophomore Nicole Rhodes. "Many people may say that she's too young but really, she's doing a great job."

Co-captaining this year's team will be senior Dottie Catlin (10-1-11), who also was captain of the field hockey and ice hockey teams. Last season Catlin was tied for the team lead in goals (28) and second in points (36).

Working alongside Catlin as co-captain will be junior defender Kim Bennett, who along with classmate Roz Keith, will be looked upon to anchor the defense this season.

"[Bennett] plays hard and gives it her all," said Harris. "She comes in even when she doesn't have to see if anything needs to be done. She's a great liaison between the players and the coaches."

Starting in goal this season will be Hodgkins, replacing the departed Steph Olsen. Olsen played every minute of the last two seasons between the pipes for the Wildcats.

The Yarmouth, Maine, native won the position outright when Jen Broadbent left the team for personal reasons one week ago. After five games, Hodgkins sports a 12.38 GAA, not bad considering the amount of shots she faces each game. For her performance, Hodgkins was a candidate for the NAC Player of the Week after her first two games in net.

"Shelby is doing great," said Rhodes. "She's giving 110 percent in every game. She's usually smiling after the game even after she's been pummeled with a bunch of shots."

"She really pumps herself up and really focuses on what she's doing," said Harris. "She's managing to keep her head up while we work on getting her defense tighter so she doesn't have quite as many shots to contend with."

This season's offensive standout has been, yet, another freshman. Davis, who just this week was named NAC Rookie of the Week, leads the team in points (3-10-13) and is currently tied for second in the nation in assists.

"We were expecting a lot from her," said Harris. "She had a really good reputation from high school. It's not surprising because we've seen her work hard in practice."

Sharing the offensive duties with Davis will be senior Katie Blankley (10-2-12), sophomores Missy Long (7-0-7) and Rhodes (6-2-8). The well balanced scoring attack should make up for many of the Wildcats' problems they may face throughout the season, including the inexperience and the lack of depth on the bench.

"We're always offensive minded," said Harris. "Some people are hesitating still because everything is new. But every game we see a glimpse of somebody else is becoming a little less hesitant. That will really be the bottom line in making everything click together."

lacrosse team's home opener is on

UNH set for Daytona

By BRIAN BOSWORTH

A quick note to the other athletic teams around the University of New Hampshire: approach your sport with as much enthusiasm as the Wildcat cheerleaders and you too may have a chance at winning a championship.

The UNH cheerleading squad will take their show to the National Cheerleading Association championships in Daytona Beach, Fla., on April 4. The Wildcats will compete against 11 other teams from around the nation. The competition will be held through April 6 with the winners of the various divisions appearing on NBC.

UNH captain Rose Caro sent in a videotaped routine to the association during winter vacation and were informed at the beginning of this semester that they were chosen the No. 1 team for the "all girls" division. This secured free hotel rooms for the 15 members while in Florida.

During the year, the Wildcats cheer as a co-ed unit. Seniors Bryan Marabella and Tim Krippendorf anchor the squad. However other co-ed teams around the nation have more male cheerleaders to execute numerous difficult stunts.

The women created their own routine and now Marabella and Krippendorf serve as coaches and critique the two and a half minute performance which the Wildcats have been preparing for the competition. It includes mounts, a cheer, and ends with a high intensity 30 second dance routine.

The group did not have a coach this entire season but the university announced this week that Beth McFall will head the cheerleaders next year.

Preparation for the event has been difficult for the team. Many of the cheerleaders have been battling nagging injuries that were sustained through their arduous eight month season.

The team cheers for all home football and men's basketball games which keeps them active from September until March. The championships have extended this season forcing the team to move tryouts for next season until later in the semester.

These injuries have limited the activity of some members of the team but unlike other sports, there are no substitutes so the cheerleaders must practice.

"We've been dealing with [the injuries] all year," said Caro. "We just work through it."

Yet these injuries have not hampered the team's spirit. The squad is focused for their only actual competition of the year.

"It's different than cheering in a game," Caro said. "This is two and a half minutes. We just have to put our all into it."

And that's something they have done all year.

From Thompson Hall to Touchdown Jesus.

You've gotta love the direction the University of New Hampshire men's basketball team is going. Forget the fact that they had a disappointing season. This is a program with a mission.

And the ball keeps rolling

Five years ago, no one could tell you if UNH even had a basketball team or not.

And just three days ago, head coach Gib Chapman revealed that the team will be taking a trip to the athletic heaven called South Bend, Ind.

Yes, the Wildcats will be playing Notre Dame next season in an out-of-conference game. Both schools basketball programs take a back seat to other sports. WE all know the sport at UNH is ice hockey. EVERYONE knows the pigskin is almost as holy as the statue of Mary in the grotto.

NBC-run Notre Dame has the luxury of benefiting from the millions that their wealthy alumni donate to the athletic program. Whereas UNH... well, do we even have alumni?

So come Dec. 11 it's the boys from New Hampshire against Notre Dame (It's amazing I can mention the two schools in the same breath). And ya know what, the reputations will take a back seat for 40 minutes.

No one will care about the Four Horsemen or the Golden Dome. The ghosts of Notre Dame stadium will be dormant since the game will be played in the Joyce Athletic Center across the quad. Lou Holtz will just be another smiling face in the crowd.

Notre Dame has no more basketball history than UNH, except maybe Ryan Hoover. That guy has been the Irish's point guard since the Last Supper.

The only reason they are in the Big East is because of their prestigious (corrupt) reputation. The Fighting Irish, huh? It's a lot easier to fight with a nice, fat checkbook to back you up.

So we may not have the money or the reputation but the game is played on the hardwood. And Notre Dame might be coming to the Whittemore Center hardwood soon.

In keeping with the Catholic institution theme, UNH will also travel to the friendly confines of Chestnut Hill, Mass.

Finally, the local rivalry UNH has needed. The Wildcats will play Boston College on Nov. 25.

The teams used to play until BC felt they were too good to play at Lundholm. Now they have no excuse because we have the Whitt. So UNH will travel to the Conte Forum to take on Danya Abrams and Scoonie Penn. And BC might travel to Durham in the future.

Don't be surprised if a big-name team comes to UNH next year... possibly a current Final Four team. Nothing is definite but if it happens, you heard it here first.

Late Mungovan goal leads UNH to 9-8 victory over conference foe

Chris Rowe/Staff Photographer

UNH improved to 4-1 with Wednesday's win over Hartford.

By CHRIS BOUSQUET
Staff Reporter

If the University of Hartford was to be a test of the University of New Hampshire men's lacrosse team's improvement, then the Wildcats passed with flying colors.

Behind Bill Mungovan's game-winning goal, the Wildcats upended Hartford, 9-8, as they extended their win streak to three games and opened up their North Atlantic Conference schedule with a crucial victory.

UNH head coach Jim Urquhart stressed before the game that Hartford would serve as a reference point of how far the team had progressed. The Hawks beat the Wildcats in preseason play in the fall and are a quality program with a lot of talent and desire. Urquhart also stressed the Wildcats' need to be successful in the NAC.

Yesterday, in the team's first home contest, the Wildcats demonstrated that improvement and success will be two elements well within the team's reach.

"[Hartford] is a good, solid team," Urquhart said. "They were a test of how good we're going to be. It was an excellent confidence builder for us."

The two teams traded goals in the opening period. UNH took the early lead when senior co-captain Russ Laky flipped one past UH goaltender Chris LaMonica (22 saves), unassisted, with 1:09 gone on the clock in the first.

Hawks' Dan Hynes evened the game at 1-1 just 30 seconds later as he connected on a pass from Timothy Houck. Senior co-captain Pat Quagrello, however, put the Wildcats back on top half a minute after that as he slipped a Dave Hanchett pass past LaMonica.

Just when it seemed that the Wildcats had a hold on the lead, Charlie Fisher knotted the score for the second time as he found an opening with 9:22 remaining in the period.

The two teams battled to break the tie, but were unable to convert. Finally, with 1:50 left on the clock, an injured Chris Bromby, UNH's transfer sensation, beat LaMonica to reestablish the Wildcats' one-goal lead.

The advantage was short-lived, though, as Fisher tallied his second of the game to tie the game at 3-3 with :24 left in the period. Hanchett closed out the scoring in the period, notching his first of the game with just two seconds left on the clock. Mike Szweda was credited with the assist.

The Wildcats started the second period as they did the first. Mungovan extended UNH's lead to 5-3 four and a half minutes into play. Justin McAleer added another tally 26 seconds later as he fired the ball past LaMonica, pushing the score to 6-3.

The Hawks finally responded to the Wildcat rush with 36 seconds left to play in the second period when Greg Sherwin beat UNH goaltender Gary Foster (13 saves), pulling Hartford within two goals going into the third

BU blasts men's tennis, 7-0

By FRANK COPPOLA
TNH Reporter

This season is going to be one big learning experience for the University of New Hampshire men's tennis team.

With six of the 10 players on the active roster being freshman, how could it be otherwise?

Patience is indeed going to be a virtue with this young squad, as evidenced by the 7-0 defeat they suffered on Thursday afternoon at the hands of Boston University. The inexperience of UNH combined with the talent of annual power BU made this a tough match to watch, but head coach Barry Caron knows the outcome was realistic to expect.

"It's a rebuilding year for us," said Caron. "We were 0-6 in the fall and we have a lot to learn with such a young team."

The team was captained by junior Jason White, who is one of the elder statesmen on a team that has zero seniors. White lost his No. 1 singles match on Thursday to John Lamendola by a score of 6-0, 6-2, not untypical on a day when UNH was simply outmanned.

"BU is perennially one of the top teams in that nation, an NAC power," said Caron. "They played real tough and we are just not at their level yet."

Sophomore Gregg Luongo and junior Darryl Poisson are starting the season ranked at No. 2 and No. 4, respectively. Although they both were defeated 6-1, 6-2 on Thursday, they combined at No. 2 doubles to give UNH its closest match of the afternoon. Their Terrier opponents would eventually pull ahead and claim an 8-4 victory, but the effort was there for the Wildcats.

Caron said he was most pleased by the play of White and Luongo.

"I was really happy with our top two players," said Caron. "They played hard out there, had a lot of long points and really competed."

The remainder of the Wildcat singles lineup is made up entirely of freshmen. Joseph LeClair (No. 3), Keith Levitsky (No. 5) and Heath MacVane (No. 6) will be getting plenty of on-the-job training this spring as the club looks toward the future.

"All the kids here were stars in high school," said Caron. "It's just going to take some time to reach that next level, making the transition to college is a tough thing to do."

It does not help to have injury or illness added to the mix, but that is another part of the hand that the 'Cats ■ see LOSS, page 31
