Media Advisory: Carsey Institute Researcher Available To Discuss New Child Poverty Data Sept. 22

September 19, 2011

DURHAM, N.H. – Beth Mattingly, director of research on vulnerable families at the Carsey Institute and research assistant professor of sociology at the University of New Hampshire, will be available Sept. 22, 2011, to discuss the latest information on and trends about child poverty in America.

The Carsey Institute at UNH will release a comprehensive analysis of child poverty in America Sept. 22, relying on new data available that day from the U.S. Census Bureau’s American Community Survey.

Mattingly can be reached at beth.mattingly@unh.edu and 603-862-2961.

The Carsey Institute conducts policy research on vulnerable children, youth, and families and on sustainable community development. The institute gives policy makers and practitioners the timely, independent resources they need to effect change in their communities. For more information about the Carsey Institute, go to www.carseyinstitute.unh.edu.

The University of New Hampshire, founded in 1866, is a world-class public research university with the feel of a New England liberal arts college. A land, sea, and space-grant university, UNH is the state's flagship public institution, enrolling 12,200 undergraduate and 2,300 graduate students.
