N. H. Authors Series Presents Terry Farish at the University of New Hampshire
Oct. 14, 2012

During the course of her career as a Red Cross worker in Vietnam, children’s librarian, writer, and director of the N.H. Humanities Council’s literacy program, Farish has honed her compassion for those affected by war and life’s struggles. Her books include “Flower Shadows” and “If the Tiger,” both set in Southeast Asia, and an award-winning children’s book, “The Cat Who Liked Potato Soup.”

Through the Humanities Council Farish directs the Bilingual Folktale Project and has worked with the largest group of refugees in New Hampshire, Nepali-speaking people from Bhutan, to produce and publish a Bhutanese folktale in Nepali and English.

The NH Authors series is held three times a year, bringing writers to UNH who are New Hampshire natives or who live or teach in the Granite State. Local author Rebecca Rule leads the talks, which take place in front of a live audience for future broadcasting and web streaming on www.nhptv.org/authors. The event is free and open to the public but seating is limited. Register to attend at www.library.unh.edu/friends or call (603) 862-1540.

The University of New Hampshire, founded in 1866, is a world-class public research university with the feel of a New England liberal arts college. A land, sea, and space-grant university, UNH is the state’s flagship public institution, enrolling 12,200 undergraduate and 2,300 graduate students.
