

Semester in the City

UNH students live, learn and work in Boston

Tuesday, February 6, 2018

It's a best-of-both-worlds scenario: Attend a university in a quintessential college town but spend a semester living, working and learning in a major city. Dozens of UNH students have done just that as interns with the Semester in the City program, where they take classes (for credit) through the College for Social Innovation and work on real-world issues as interns in social-sector businesses. See what some of the latest cohort of UNH interns had to say about their experience.
